⁂

Muslin Underwear Reduced.

Cuts in prices of muslin underwear have become more noticeable recently. Yesterday one of the local firms was offering 72-count muslin nightgowns that formerly sold for $12 a dozen at $9. The same firm is selling chemises at $7.50 a dozen which formerly sold at $9. Muslin drawers that were sold for $6.50 are being disposed of for $5.50 a dozen.

⁂

Woolens for Fall.

At the opening of the prices for the Fall season of 1919 at the American Woolen Company yesterday it was announced that the prices of 24, 26, and 30 ounce mackinaws and heavy overcoatings in plain colors ranged from $1.45 to $2.47. On friezes, Baltics were quoted from $1.92½ to $2.62½, and Burlingtons ranged from $1.45 to $1.92½.

Should Place Orders Early.

At the present time the amount of table linens that are being sold is considered fair. The road business was comparatively small in a number of cases, but the buyers stated their intention of coming into the local market for their merchandise. Firms in this line, however, have warned the retailers that if they want to be sure of deliveries they should place their orders early. In some instances the stocks are already showing signs of depletion. Unless there is some relief in regard to raw materials, it will be only a short time before it will be impossible to purchase complete sets of table linens.

Gray Goods Business Lags.

Not a great deal of business was passing in the local gray goods market yesterday. No large transactions were reported nor was there any contracting for anything beyond the immediate future. In printcloths there were sales of 39-inch 72-76s and 68-72s at 13 and 10¾ cents, respectively, the latter en route from the South and from second hands, and of 38½-inch 60-48s and 44-40s at 8¼ and 6½ cents, respectively. Offers of 9 cents for 38½-inch 64-60s were not accepted. Some 36-inch 5.50 four-yard sheetings were sold at 8¾ cents and there were also sales of voiles, organdies, and fine yarn goods at from 6 to 7 cents below the Government prices.

ONE of our clients is a New York Clothing manufacturer who has to buy his woolens long before he cuts them up. He was about to choose between curtailed production and exhaustion of his tangible assets.

After a personal chat one of our principals arranged to advance this progressive man the money needed to make his purchase; to check his customers' credit and to be repaid as the customers' accounts became due.

Possibly some equally convenient phase of our service will interest you.

BIG CROWDS ATTEND MOTOR SHOWS HERE

Society Day Brings Largest Attendance of Week at Both Exhibits.

WEST WELL REPRESENTED

"L" Head Type of Engine Predominates—Show Many New Improvements.

With two more days remaining for the passenger car section of the automobile show in Madison Square Garden and the Sixty-ninth Regiment Armory the Show Committee of the New York Dealers' Association announced yesterday that both in attendance and the volume of business done the 1919 show had exceeded all expectations. Yesterday was Society Day, and the largest crowd of the week was entertained in both buildings. The manufacturers representing the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, who decided as a war measure before the signing of the armistice to postpone their regular annual show as a war measure have cooperated heartily with the dealers toward making the present event a success, and nearly all of the big Western factories have sent representatives to New York, giving the show a thoroughly national character.

A study of the various models discloses the fact that the "L" head type of engine occupies practically the same position as the leader in engine construction as in 1914. Sixty per cent. of the chassis models are of that type. Slightly more than 20 per cent. adopt the valve in the head system, being about the same as last year, due, it is said, to the lack of engineering development during the war. The "T" head method of engine construction shows, however, a slight increase over last year, nearly 10 per cent. of the chassis models being of that type.

One of the popular exhibits in the Garden is that of the Cadillac cars, of which several models of standard body types built for the eight-cylinder chassis are shown. For open cars the features are the seven-passenger touring car and the sporty four-passenger phaeton. Among the closed types, for which the demand has been very large this season, the four-passenger victoria coupé stands up conspicuously among the smaller cars at the show. It may be readily converted into a snappy open car. Among the closed types shown are the landaulet, limousine, and town car. A Cadillac is credited with having been the first to cross the Rhine, the one having that honor being a touring car used by the Canadian Army.

The Dodge Brothers Sedan and coupe models shown by the Colt-Stratton Company of New York are attractive models of the medium-priced class. Freak ideas have been carefully avoided in the body designs. The coupé is roomy enough for three persons, and ample room has been provided in the rear to carry sufficient baggage for a week-end tour.

The Studebaker cars show many improvements this season. The new Studebaker light four, with its small wheel base of 112 inches, has been designed to carry three persons comfortably in the tonneau, while throwing no excess weight upon the rear wheels. Particular attention has been given by the designing engineers to the proper distribution of weight so as to give the most perfect balance for ease in riding and economical operation.

The Hudson super-sixes and the Essex, the latter being the new car of the year, made in the Detroit Hudson factory have practically a show of their own in the Concert Hall of the Garden. A variety of the popular Hudson closed models are displayed. The Essex, which has entered the race in the class selling under $1,500, shows, in its design and engine construction, every possibility for long-touring reliability.

A distinctive feature marks the Paige cars in the use of plate glass in the rear windows. The glass is on metal frames, and differs entirely from the small isinglass windows used for several years. The Larchmont sport model has an oblong glass window, with slightly rounded corners, setting off in a neat manner the straightline effect of the body.

The feature cars in the Reo display are the four-passenger coupé and the five-passenger sedan. The latter is upholstered in French velours and morocco leather, with silver fittings and frame glass in the windows.

One indication of the sales activity of the show is shown in the statement of the manager of the Locomobile Company that during the first three days orders were taken for two more cars than during the entire week of last year's exhibit.

Today will be Engineers' Day, and invitations have been extended to the members of the Society of Automotive Engineers, who have been attending a three days' conference. Howard C. Marmon, in the technical discussions yesterday at the Engineering Societies' Building, compared the differences between airplane and automobile engines.

"Motor cars will be improved as a result of our airplane experience," he said, "but this improvement will be apparent in the service the car gives rather than in any radical change in design. This will come about as a result of better manufacturing facilities, higher shop standards and more intelligent inspection."

Talks on aeronautical engineering were also given by J. G. Vincent, Vice President of the Packard Motor Car Company, and one of the designers of the Liberty motor, Grover C. Loening, and Alexander Klemin.

A dinner of the Automotive Engineers' Society, held at the Hotel Astor last evening, was attended by more than 1,000 men from all branches of the automobile industries, and was presided over by the Hon. Job E. Hedges. John N. Willys, President of the Willys-Knight Company, told of his plan to divide a part of his profits with the employes as an incentive for their doing more work. Capt. Edward V. Rickenbacker, who was one of the guests, was given an ovation at the mention of his name by the toastmaster. Those who addressed the diners were C. F. Kettering, President of the Automotive Engineers; Alfred A. Reeves, General Manager, National Automobile Chamber of Commerce; Charles M. Manly, President-elect of the association, and George F. Houston of the Wright Aircraft Company.

More Activity in Waist Trade.

Buying of women's waists yesterday was active, and was exceptionally heavy in the higher priced lines on georgettes and crêpe de chine. Order that are now being placed are for both immediate and future delivery. Some manufacturers have a sufficient quantity of stock on hand to make prompt shipments. Others, however, are not so fortunate, and will not be able to make deliveries until conditions in the trade are more normal.

Many Buyers of Dresses.

The sale of women's dresses is still continuing at a very brisk rate, and in many instances the amount of merchandise being sold is greatly in excess of that of last season. The local trade has been buying very heavily, and reorders are being received on many of the new numbers. Yesterday a large number of out-of-town buyers were in town, and in many of the showrooms it was almost impossible to give them the proper attention.

Gloves Not Going Well.

The continued mild weather and the present prices asked for men's leather gloves have from all accounts greatly interfered with the sale of these articles. Some of the salesmen on the road report that business is very quiet on these lines, and that comparatively few sales are being made. One of the local firms said yesterday that they are selling a few dozen, but nothing compared to what they sold last season. Even though the prices are high, it was said that they were not likely to be reduced this season.

BUSINESS NOTES.

Cohen Brothers Manufacturing Co., which has recently been incorporated with a paid in capital of $250,000, is enlarging its quarters at 16-20 West Thirty-second Street and has added three more mills.

COPPER MINES IN WEST CUT WAGES $1 A DAY

Anaconda and Other Companies Forced to Act Because of Lack of Market.

Special to The New York Times.

BUTTE, Mont., Feb. 6.—Following the report from the Department of Labor that copper producers could not continue operations under present conditions, the Anaconda Copper Mining Company, today announced a reduction of wages. Beginning tomorrow, miners will receive $4.75 a day, journeymen will receive $5.50, and shaft miners $5.25, a reduction of $1. All the large operating companies in the Butte district have made similar announcements of a reduction of a dollar a day in the wages of employes, and it is understood tha. the smaller concerns and individual owners will do the same. The order of the Anaconda Company applies to Anaconda and Great Falls, where the company operates large reduction plants.

"The condition of the copper market prevailing since the armistice has made it impossible to continue substantial copper mining operations under the present wage scale.

"These conditions are fully and accurately set forth in the statement given out by the Federal Department of Labor at the end of the conference between the department officials, labor representatives from the copper district, and certain of the officials of the operating companies, just concluded at Washington.

"Since the cessation of the war until Feb. 1 there were practically no sales of copper, even at the present quotations of 18 and a fraction cents. However, the resumption of copper quotations by the Engineering and Mining Journal gives hope of a copper market which may permit the operations to continue."

PLEA FOR GREELEY SQUARE.

Union Printers Resent Suggestion to Rename It Ypres Square.

Representatives of Typographical Union No. 6 objected yesterday to the proposed change of the name of Greeley Square at Broadway, Sixth Avenue and Thirty-third Street, to Ypres Square when the matter came before the Committee on Public Thoroughfares of the Board of Aldermen.

Leon H. Rouse, President of the union, said that Horace Greeley was the first President of the typographical union and had done much to advance the cause of trade unions in the United States, and that any attempt to change the designation of the square named for him would be resented by the union printers of the city. Other officials of the union voiced the same objections and it is understood that the proposal will be allowed to die in committee.

Raw Silk Markets Summary.

In the Yokohama raw silk market the price of Sinshin No. 1 dropped to 1,300 from 1,310 yen per picul, but late cables to H. L. Gwalter & Co. indicate a more active business at the decline. Monday's transactions were reported at 1,000 bales. The tone on the Bourse has improved and quotations have recovered about 40 yen from the low level touched at the close of last week, February being quoted at 1,340 yen. The Canton market remains lifeless and that of Shanghai is quiet. In the latter, prices of steam filatures as well as of tsatlee silks show slight recessions, but no business of any account is reported. At Milan the market is unchanged with export business suspended, while at Lyons it is depressed under the problems of the readjustment of the industry to a peace basis. The local market is affected by the labor situation, but the lower level is said to be attracting the attention of buyers.

LIVELY BIDDING FOR FURS.

Total of $900,000 Realized at Yesterday's Auction Sale.

The feature yesterday of the auction which the New York Fur Auction Sales Corporation is conducting in the Masonic Temple, Sixth Avenue and Twenty-third Street, was the sale of twenty-five especially fine dark Eastern mink skins to the Speer Fur Corporation for what is said to be the highest price ever paid for mink either here or abroad. The skins brought $33 each. Other mink skins at the auction brought from $1.10 to $13.50.

Prices yesterday were well sustained, and while every lot offered was taken, with lively bidding, the best bidding was on fresh-caught skins. The total receipts of the day were about $900,000, making a total of about $3,900,000 for the four days of the sale. Another fur that has advanced in price is the flying squirrel. The offerings yesterday were 34,179 marmot skins, 30,591 civet cat, 1,884 hair seal, 850 flying squirrel, 4,132 Japanese marten, 33,084 Japanese mink, and 73,200 mink skins. Compared with the sale in October, there was no change in marmot prices, which ranged from 15 cents to $1.31; civet cat was 20 per cent. above October prices, with a range of 10 to 75 cents; hair seal fell off 15 per cent., with prices from [illegible] to $5.20; flying squirrel, 15 per cent. above, at 85 cents to $1.10; Japanese marmot, 20 per cent. above, from $3.50 to $6.75; Japanese mink, 25 per cent. above, at 80 cents to $1.65; Northern mink, 15 per cent. above, with Southwestern mink selling without change. The range of prices for the last two furs was $1.10 to $13.50.

These are the offerings at today's sale: 22,491 sundries, 2,919 Chinese civet cat, 22,491 Chinese weasel, 5,480 Chinese raccoon, 65,283 pounds rabbit, 107,391 squirrel, 14,700 wildcat, [illegible],800 ringtail cat, 6,700 lynx, 174,600 American opossum, 12,048 Australian and Tasmanian opossum, 18,937 ringtail opossum, and 24,910 wolf.

REAL ESTATE FIELD

The old essential oil district just north of the financial section, which has experienced a revival of both speculative and investment buying since the first of the year, furnished a small bit of interesting transaction yesterday in the resale by Sigsbee Graham of a plot of about 5,000 square feet at the southwest corner of Gold and Platt Streets with frontages of twenty-six feet on Gold Street and 106 feet on Platt Street.

The building is leased on short term leases to the Mallinckrodt Chemical Works, the Chemical Company of America, and Thomas Prosser & Sons. This is the second sale of the property by the same brokers, the Charles F. Noyes Company. The purchaser is an investor.

Recent purchases in the vicinity by Mr. Graham, who has been buying extensively, include 27 Cliff Street, 60 Cliff Street, 10-12 Cliff Street, 239 Pearl Street, 207 Pearl Street, 205 Pearl Street, 4-6 Gold Street, 93-95 Maiden Lane, and 107 John Street.

Deal for Ritz-Carlton Court Pending.

Negotiations are pending for the sale of the Ritz-Carlton Court apartment house, a six-story structure occupying the block front on the west side of Audobin Avenue, between 187th and 188th Street, 189 by 75, owned by the Nason Realty Company. The structure is fully tenanted and returns an annual rental of $36,000. It is held at $275,000. H. T. Wood is the broker in the transaction.

Senator Pell Buys Dwelling.

Senator Herbert C. Pell, Jr., purchased from Emma L. D. Clark 20 East Ninety-fourth Street, a five-story American basement dwelling, on a lot 19 by 100.8, held at about $55,000. A. J. Clark negotiated the sale.

Heights Activity Continues.

The Kershaw, a six-story elevator apartment, on lot 75 by 100, at 1,253 St. Nicholas Avenue, adjoining 173d Street, was sold by William C. Schmidt to Charles Wynne, operator. The property, held at $145,000, is arranged for twenty-eight families and five stores, and returns an annual rental of about $20,000. Byrnes & Bowman were the brokers, Guggenheimer, Untermyer & Marks represented the seller, and Stoddard & Mark the buyer.

Operator in Three Deals.

Three all-cash deals were closed yesterday by Frederick Brown, operator. From the New York Life Insurance and Trust Company he bought the six-story elevator apartment house at 506 and 508 West 122d Street, on a plot 50 by 95. The house was held at $105,000.

From Mary A. Tower Mr. Brown has purchased through August Lauter the three-story private dwelling at 2,184 Grand Boulevard and Concourse, on a lot 25 by 130. It was held free and clear, the asking price being $10,000.

Mr. Brown has sold to the Kermit Realty Company the plot 100 by 100 at the northeast corner of Ninth Avenue and 213th Street, acquired in an exchange a few days ago.

Builders Sell Row of Bronx Apartments.

The row of five six-story apartment houses on Webster and Clay Avenues near Claremont Parkway has been sold by the Sikora Realty Corporation to the 1,347 Boston Road Company, in conjunction with Bernard Cransman. The property is known as 1,417 to 1,421 Webster Avenue and 1,394, 1,398, and 1,402 Clay Avenue, and provides housing for 142 families. On Webster Avenue there are two structures, standing on a plot 125 by 82, which show an annual return of $20,000.

The Clay Avenue houses, three in number, occupy a site 136 by 100, returning an annual rental of $25,000. The Webster Avenue-end of the property was valued at $170,000 and the Clay Avenue side at $185,000. The sellers built the houses on land acquired in 1915.

Buyers for Tenements.

The six-story tenement, on a plot 37 by 100 at 16 East 105th Street, has been sold to an investing client by Hyman Bloom and Mulvihill & Florea.

An investing client of Levy & Shapiro has purchased from the Lawyers Mortgage Company 55 and 57 Suffolk Street, two five-story tenements, on a plot 50 by 75.

Ennis & Sinnot, operators, have purchased from John Davis the five-story apartment house, on a lot 25 by 100, at 538 West 159th Street, near Broadway. M. Weisstock was the broker.

Morris Polsky sold to the Manerica Realty Corporation, W. E. Stein, President, the six-story apartment on plot 45 by 100 at 541 to 543 West Forty-ninth Street. The building houses sixty-six tenants, returning an annual rental of $11,000, and was held at $70,000. The transaction was a cash one. Benjamin Cintin was attorney for the seller and A. A. Hageman the broker in the deal.

The Bronx Market.

Harry Kallman purchased the five-story apartment house at the southwest corner of Courtlandt Avenue and 151st Street from Samuel Williams as an investment. The house, which is arranged for thirty-one families and four stores was erected ten years ago, shows an annual rental of over $10,000, and was held at $70,000. Leo Mutchik was the broker.

J. Kennedy bought from Charles Wynne, operator, the three-family house on lot 25 by 100 at 235 East 203d Street, near Grand Concourse, through Louis N. Adler.

Brooklyn.

The four-story double brick store and apartment building, on lot 20 by 100 at 1,824 Fifth Avenue, held at $40,000, was sold by Mrs. Elise Hoegerle to a client for investment. Tutino and Cerny negotiated the sale.

Rae Elkin bought the one-family semi-detached brick dwelling, 2,048 Sixty-sixth Street, Mapleton Park, from the Alco Building Company. The Realty Trust made the sale.

Agnes Aitchison sold the two-story and basement frame dwelling, 303 Fourteenth Street to a client of F. C. Sauter.

Reinhard Hall Realty and Construction Company bought from the Terrain Realty Company seventeen lots in the Dyker section, ten of them located a tthe southeast corner of Twelfth Avenue and Eightieth Street, two on the south side and five on the north side of Seventy-seventh Street, west of Twelfth Avenue. M. Morgenthau, Jr., made the sale of the property, which was recently acquired from Frederick Brown in an exchange for the apartment at 50 Northern Avenue, northwest corner of 179th Street, Manhattan.

Forest Hills House Sold.

Lemuel Burrows, President of Castner, Curran & Bullitt, has purchased from Hugh Mullen his colonial residence, on a plot 200 by 200 irregular, at 50 Greenway, South, Forest Hills, for occupancy. The property, which was held at $65,000, was sold by Guyon L. C. Earle in cooperation with the Sage Foundation Homes Company.

Westchester County.

Albert Lockwood sold the dwelling 134 Devoe Avenue, Yonkers, for Peter A. Albertson to Frederick Ostermayer, and the house 132 Lee Avenue, Yonkers, for Allen B. Campbell to E. J. Bates.

L. M. Hubbard sold his house at Philipse Manor, Tarrytown, to Gerald B. Gould of Manhattan. The Robert E. Farley Organization made the sale.

An investing client purchased the cottage and about a quarter of an acre of ground at the southeast corner of Larchmont and Cherry Avenues, Larchmont, through E. C. Griffin and P. H. Collins.

Commercial Leases.

The Vacation Association has leased the store at 30 West Thirty-ninth Street through Pease & Elliman.

Suzuki & Co. of Kobe, Japan, dealers in raw silk, have leased 3,200 square feet of space in the Hess Building, Twenty-sixth Street and Fourth Avenue, through M. & L. Hess, Inc.

The entire fourth floor, of the former Simpson-Crawford Department Store at 311 to 319 Sixth Avenue, comprising 20,000 square feet, has been sublet to the Supertone Talking Machine Co., a subsidiary of the Plaza Music Co., by Cohen, Endel & Co., manufacturers of army uniforms. An extension was given by the owner. The Carman Supply Co., dealers in laundry supplies, has rented the store and basement at 65 to 67 West Thirteenth Street. E. Tannebaum Corporation represented the tenant. Brett & Goode Co. negotiated both deals.

Other leases yesterday were the seventh floor at 220 Fifth Avenue to the Philip Kobbe Co.; space in the American Woolen Building for Carstein & Linnekin, agents, to the Tip Top Toy Company, J. G. Kempfner & Frankenberg, Morgan & Singleton; the upper part of the building at 235 Seventh Avenue to Theo. Boutis & Company; lofts at 41 West Twenty-fourth Street to L. & N. Swinel, Isidore Dobrin, Morris Silbert, Samuel Kirschner, Isidore Weisburg; floor at 119-21 West Twenty-third Street to Bloomenthal, Davidson & Kurtsman; floor at 114 East Twenty-eighth Street to Philip Zukerman; all deals were make through Dwight, Archibald & Perry, Inc.

Realty Notes.

The Clyde Fitch Estate at Bedford Hills, Westchester County, consisting of thirty-six acres with dwelling and improvements, is soon to be offered at a private sale. Arthur C. Sheridan is sole agent for the property.

A mortgage for $36,000 has been placed on the six-story flat on a plot 41.8 by 100 at 433 West 124th Street by Harold L. Lewis for the Speedway Realty Co.

THE WEATHER

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—A disturbance of large proportions is off the North Pacific Coast, attended by rain, and storm warnings were ordered Thursday morning. There is also a moderate disturbance over Northeastern Texas, with quite high pressure to the northward. Light snows fell in the lower Missouri and middle Mississippi Valleys.

Light, scattered snows also fell in the lake region and the extreme Northwest, and rains Wednesday night in the South Atlantic States. It is considerably colder in Western Iowa, Southern Nebraska, and Northern Kansas, and low temperatures continue in the Northwest.

Elsewhere temperatures are nearly normal.

Scattered snows are probable Friday night or Saturday in the lower Ohio Valley, rains or snows in Tennessee, and rains in the East Gulf States, with somewhat lower temperatures.

In the lake region, the upper Ohio Valleys, and the Atlantic States the weather will be generally fair Friday and Saturday without decided temperature changes.

Winds along the North Atlantic Coast Friday and Saturday will be moderate northwest with fair weather; Middle Atlantic Coast, moderate west, fair; South Atlantic Coast, gentle to moderate north and northeast, fair.

FORECAST: TODAY AND SATURDAY.

Eastern New York—Fair Friday and Saturday; no decided temperature change.

New Jersey and Eastern Pennsylvania—Fair Friday and probably Saturday.

New England—Fair Friday and Saturday.

The temperature record for the twenty-four hours ended at 11 P. M., taken from the thermometer at the local office of the United States Weather Bureau, is as follows:

Education Notes.

Examinations for promotion licenses will be held on Feb. 24 and Sept. 4.

The New York Classical Club will hold a meeting tomorrow at 11.30 A. M. in Students Hall, Barnard College. "The Places of Classics in American Education" will be discussed by City Superintendent of Schools William L. Ettinger, Dr. Arthur C. McGiffert, President of Union Theological Seminary, and Dr. Stephen S. Wise, Rabbi of the Free Synagogue.

Associate Superintendent Tildsley has suspended David H. O'Keefe, of the High School of Commerce from duty without pay, on charges of conduct unbecoming a teacher.

Louis Jacobs, a teacher in P. S. 33, Manhattan, has been suspended from duty without pay on a charge of disloyalty. He is said to have been a conscientious objector and to have refused to put on a soldier's uniform.

Henrietta R. Scheider, Principal of P. S. 75, Manhattan, will be given a special assignment to make a survey of the work and needs of classes for crippled children under the direction of the Associate Superintendent in charge of the work. An additional sum of $100 will be granted her for traveling expenses.

The Board of Superintendents has recommended the appointment of Hazen Chatfield as teacher in charge of P. S. 37 (Probationary School), Manhattan.

It has also recommended the assignment of Louise Baylis, assistant teacher of physical training in Erasmus Hall High School, to the office of the Director of Physical Training to the end of the school year.

A. Emerson Palmer, Secretary to the Board of Education, has just recovered from an attack of influenza.

The commission announces for March 12, April 9 and May 7 examinations for dental interne, for men. Vacancies in Saint Elizabeth's Hospital, Washington, D. C., at $600 a year, with maintenance, will be filled from these examinations. The department states that it reserves the right to terminate the appointment at the expiration of one year of service if it is deemed advisable to do so. In addition to many interesting cases presented, the dental interne is given an excellent opportunity for study and for doing experimental and research work in the pathological, histological and other laboratories of the institution. Competitors will be examined in letter writing, 5; anatomy and physiology, 10; chemistry, materia medica, and therapeutics, 15; dental pathology and oral surgery, 20; operative and prosthetic dentistry, 25; bacteriology, histology and hygiene, 10; orthodontia (local and constitutional irregularities in growth and development of the teeth and their correction), 15. Applicants are required to be graduates or senior students of regularly incorporated dental colleges, and applications will not be accepted from persons who have graduated for more than two years. The names of senior students will not be certified for appointment until they have furnished proof of actual graduation. Applicants must be unmarried. Age, 20 years or over on the date of the examination.

MAY REFUND DIAZ LOANS.

Rafael Nieto Comes from Mexico to Confer with Bankers Here.

Rafael Nieto, for the last three years acting Secretary of Finance of Mexico, arrived in New York a few days ago to meet New York bankers, who wish to discuss with him the refunding of the interior and foreign loans negotiated by the old Diaz Government and the payment of back interest on the bonds securing the loans. The total issue of bonds is $250,000,000, part of the issue bearing 3 per cent. interest and part 5 per cent. The unpaid interest, accrued since 1914, amounts to about $40,000,000. The issues originally were placed in France and England, but Mr. Nieto understands that the majority of the bonds are now held in this country, having been part of the collateral put up by the French and British Governments to secure war loans.

200 NEEDIEST CASES WILL RECEIVE AID

E. H. Gary's Gift of $1,000 and Smaller Contributions Complete Fund Required.

AN AID TO INDEPENDENCE

Help Extended to the Unfortunate, Charitable Organizations Report, Has Had Lasting Results.

A gift of $1,000 received yesterday from Elbert H. Gary, Chairman of the United States Steel Corporation, and smaller gifts have brought the total received for New York City's Neediest Cases since the 1918 appeal was made in their behalf on Dec. 15, to $81,097.57. The other recent contributions were I. S. Blancke, $10; Mrs. Edward M. Roberts, $5; in memory of "F. C. N.," $5; A. P. McGown, $2.50; Allyn and Jean, $2.

The total of $81,097.57 more than provides for the initial 100 cases and 100 additional ones. The amount asked in the first place for the hundred cases, whose stories were printed in detail, was $42,871. The sum required to care for 200 cases for a year was $80,795, which has now been exceeded by $302.57.

Judge Gary made inquiries a few days ago as to the final result of the campaign for the Hundred Neediest Cases this year, and when he learned that the sum of the contributions was little short of the amount required to cover the needs of the 200 families, sent the check for $1,000. Later Judge Gary, when asked what prompted his contribution, said:

"I am of the opinion that contributions which prevent or alleviate suffering from lack of fuel, food, and clothing, for the present at least, should be made to the destitute in New York City in preference to contributions for use elsewhere and am acting accordingly."

Year.	Cases Helped.	Total Contributions.
1913	100	9,646.36
1914	100	15,032.46
1915	100	31,819.92
1916	131	55,792.45
1918	201	81,097.57

In 1917 140 cases were fully provided for, and the relief was partial in the remaining 182 cases. The 201 families aided by the appeal of December of 1918 will be completely looked after for a year, during which period many of them will regain their independence. A considerable number of the families helped in the past have become self-supporting within a year, and many are now in fairly comfortable circumstances.

The constructive and permanent work done by the contribution of TIMES readers is indicated by the following report made by the Charity Organization Society on its cases which have been aided by the appeals:

> The following facts bearing upon the cases appealed for in THE NEW YORK TIMES, during the seven years in which THE TIMES has made its annual appeal for the "Hundred Neediest Cases," will be of interest to our readers. In that period THE TIMES appealed for 202 families at the instance of our society. The society was obliged to make a second appeal for seven of these in order to carry through the plans for their welfare, so that 209 appeals for this society have been made since 1912. Practically 57 per cent. of the families have become self-supporting and are no longer receiving assistance or supervision.
>
> Contact is being maintained with about 12 per cent. of the families, which do not need relief, but yet require co-operation to solve individual problems. Thirty-one per cent. are still receiving regular assistance. This last group consists of families mentioned in the Christmas appeal of 1917. Many of them are expected to become self-supporting in a few months.

Further facts regarding the results attained through the fund are given in this summary made by the Brooklyn Bureau of Charities:

"Of the seven Brooklyn cases presented in December, 1915, our study shows that six are now self-supporting and that a widow's pension has been granted to the seventh, where the father died since. None of these, therefore, are now dependent on the bureau for their support.

"In December, 1916, seventeen Brooklyn cases in all were appealed, twelve in the original list and five in the supplementary list. Of this number six are now self-supporting; one will be self-supporting by next Summer; two are self-supporting except for a diet which is being provided by the bureau; five still are being helped financially; and in the remaining three cases it became necessary to let the homes be broken up because of changing circumstances.

"In December, 1917, twenty-eight Brooklyn cases were appealed, eighteen in the original list and ten in the supplementary list. Seventeen of these families now are self-supporting; one is self-supporting except for a diet; six are still being helped financially, but require much smaller allowances; one is receiving a widow's pension, since the death of the husband; one home was broken up; one family moved out of Brooklyn; and in the remaining case the bureau found it necessary to discontinue relief as the family refused to help carry out the plans made for it."

The Charity Organization Society reported that the most remarkable feature of the campaign this year had been the number of contributors to the fund who had given personal help to families in addition to gifts of money. A number of women, who became interested in cases described in THE NEW YORK TIMES, visited the families and then joined the district working organizations of the societies in order to give personal help to other cases.

One outgrowth of the Hundred Neediest Cases campaign this year has been the formation of a group of women working with the Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor to take care of the lonely old women. Case No. 20, that of a woman of seventy-five, who had lived in one room for more than twenty years and was self-supporting until recently stricken with paralysis, attracted a good deal of attention. Many women sought to help her after her needs had been generously met for some time to come, and they then commenced to help other lonely old women. Several of them have been installed in brighter rooms, are being visited and aided in many ways and are in peace about their future.

Many of the children in the cases presented by the State Charities Aid Association have been adopted and others are being well cared for. Many children whose stories were not told in the list of 100 Neediest Cases have been adopted as a result of that appeal. Women who came to the association to adopt children found most of the children described in THE TIMES already adopted and they finally chose others to take into their families.

The Bible and Insurance

Bible Students credit Joseph with the first insurance plan. He insured against seven years of famine by storing away the surplus of a seven years of plenty.

Life Insurance is the modern method of storing away a little of each year's plenty to prevent the famine that is otherwise so frequently the fate of the widowed and fatherless.

There are so many kinds of Life Insurance that our Service in selecting the right kind will mean a saving in time as well as cost.

SEATTLE TO FACE ARMY RULE UNLESS STRIKE ENDS TODAY

Mayor Notifies Unions He Will Put City Under Federal Control This Morning.

PROCLAIMS PUBLIC SAFETY

Assures Industries and All Law-Abiding Citizens of Ample Protection.

STRIKE LEADERS CONFER

Fail, However, to Reach an Agreement with the Mayor and His Committee.

SEATTLE, Wash., Feb. 7.—An effort was made tonight to settle the general strike, called in sympathy with the striking shipbuilders, and which has tied up Seattle for two days, but it failed.

After nearly three hours' discussion between Mayor Ole Hanson, J. W. Spangler, a banker, and the Rev. M. A. Matthews, and a special committee of the General Strike Conference Committee, it was announced tonight that the conferees had failed to reach an agreement.

The Strikers' Committee, it was said, offered to recommend that the sympathetic strike of 30,000 workers be called off if the Mayor's Committee would agree that a committee of business men would be formed to present the demands of the 25,000 striking metal trades workers for higher wages to the proper Shipping Board authorities and urge that they be granted. The Mayor's Committee took the stand that the shipyard workers were under contract with the Government and that nothing could be done until the men showed good faith by returning to work.

Earlier in the day the Mayor had announced that unless the sympathetic strike was called off by 8 o'clock tomorrow morning he would ask the Federal Government to take control of the city.

The ultimatum was sent to the strikers in the following terms:

"I hereby notify you that, unless the sympathetic strike is called off at 8 A. M, Feb. 8, I will take steps to operate all essential industries and place this city under control of the Federal Government."

The Mayor also issued the following proclamation:

> To the People of Seattle:
>
> By virtue of the authority vested in me as Mayor, I hereby guarantee to all people of Seattle absolute and complete protection.
>
> They should go about their daily work and business in perfect security. We have 1,500 police officers, 1,500 regulars from Camp Lewis, and can and will get the services, if necessary, of every soldier in the Pacific Northwest, to protect life, business, and property.
>
> The time has come for every person in Seattle to show his Americanism. Go about your daily duties without fear. We will see to it that you have food, transportation, water, light, and gas, and all the necessities.
>
> The anarchists in this community shall not rule its affairs. All persons violating the laws will be deat with summarly.
>
> OLE HANSON,
> Mayor of Seattle.

General Morrison to Take Command.

Maj. Gen. John F. Morrison, commander of the Western Department of the Army, was on his way from San Francisco to Seattle tonight to assume personal command of the regular army troops that are dong guard duty here and in Tacoma. In Seattle today soldiers occupied the municipal light and gas plants, which have continued in operation.

Industry in Seattle was generally at a standstill today, but in Tacoma the walkout had not assumed great proportions, and the only outward indication there of unusual conditions was the absence of street car service. At a conference late today the Tacoma car men announced they would resume work tomorrow.

Street car service in Seattle consisted of a lone car. Civilian guards were stationed beside the conductor and motorman, but there was no interference. It was indicated by the Seattle authorities an effort would be made tomorrow to inaugurate a regular street car service under guard, if necessary, of automobile trucks, manned by soldiers and policemen.

"Troops in Seattle," read the seven column headline of the Star, issued this afternoon, the first newspaper to appear since the strike was called. Manned and guarded by soldiers, the first truckload of newspapers was sent into the business district early in the afternoon. The soldiers gave the papers free to crowds that gathered around the trucks. Some of the crowd, believed to have been union newsboys, seized many of the papers and tore them to bits.

Mayor Hanson promised newspapers that he would supply all the soldiers and police to continue publication.

Some Schools Reopen.

The day passed without disorders. The only signs of a break in the union ranks were the reopening of fifteen of the city's seventy schools with the aid of engineers and janitors who refused to strike with the rest of their comrades; the action of the city electricians' union in serving notice on the Strike Committee that its members would return to

Paris Is to Sell Food Direct to the People

PARIS, Feb. 7.—Municipal barracks stores will be erected shortly throughout Paris in which foodstuffs will be sold direct by the city to consumers. M. Clemenceau, the Premier, told a delegation which called on him today to discuss the question of the high cost of living that goods would be sold at prices fixed by the Food Ministry. He also promised to have the work of the demolition of the ancient fortifications surrounding Paris commenced as soon as possible, thereby ameliorating the unemployment situation.

It developed during the discussion that the salaries of municipal workers have been raised so often during the war that a further rise is impossible to cope with the increased cost of living, and that prices must come down. As an instance, it was cited that women street cleaners who before the war earned $240 annually and now are obtaining $800 are asking for $1,000.

MARSHALL OFFERS AMERICAN CREED

This Country No International Boarding House or Anarchist Cafe, Vice President Says.

DENOUNCES RED METHODS

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—Vice President Marshall, in a speech at the National Press Club tonight, asked the assembled newspaper men to submit to the people of the United States, through the newspapers, a new American creed for adoption by straw vote. He offers it as a national guide in their attitude toward Bolshevism and certain other isms concerning which there has been fear voiced since the signing of the armistice. It reads:

"I believe that the American Republic as instituted by the fathers constitutes the finest system of Government ever ordained among men and affords the machinery for the righting of grievances without resort to violence, tumult, and disorder.

"I believe that every inequality which exists in the social and economic condition of the American people is traceable to the successful demands of interested classes for class legislation, and I believe, therefore, that practical equality can be obtained under our form of Government by remedial legislation in the interest of the American people and not in the interest of any body thereof, large or small.

"I believe there is no justification in a Government, where officials are elected and laws made by the people, for a minority to threaten bloodshed and anarchy unless the majority shall submit to the will of the minority.

"I believe that America belongs to American citizens, native and naturalized, who are willing to seek redress for their grievances in orderly and constitutional ways, and I believe that all others should be taught, peacefully if we can and forcibly if we must, that our country is not an international boarding house nor an anarchist café.

"I pledge myself to the support of these principles by my voice, by vote, and, if need be, by my fortune and my life, and I promise my country to train my children in this most holy faith."

Mr. Marshall said that there seemed to be a fear in the minds of men that Bolshevism would spread its net over this country. He for one did not believe that native Americans would be influenced by any such fallacy, but there nevertheless seemed to be an unconquerable fear of Bolshevism, as there was of Spanish influenza.

Mr. Marshall took a stand against class legislation, whether it came from capitalistic classes or from socialistic or other classes, and expressed the hope that Congress and those who were native born or naturalized citizens of the nation would take their stand against class legislation wherever it showed its head.

Mr. Marshall declared that if he had the power he would deprive of American citizenship and deport from the country any naturalized American citizen who sought to impose a soviet government or in other ways sought to alter the fundamental character and form of the American Government. It was an inherent right of native-born American citizens to modify their form of Government, if they so wished, provided they acted along constitutional lines, but he did not feel that persons from abroad, becoming naturalized, and swearing allegiance to our Government and its Constitution, should be permitted to try to change the American Government. If they did so, he said, he would, if he had power, cancel their naturalization papers, in court, on the ground of fraud.

Mr. Marshall also deprecated the use of force, arson, bombing, or similar methods for righting grievances, and declared that, had he the power, he would hale into court, try, and punish any person seeking to use force to accomplish any such aims.

He expressed the view that the time had come in this country when there was no fundamental political difference between the two leading parties. He invited any newspaper man present to send him a definition of the political difference between them, and said that he would pay a five dollar bill for any successful statement of fundamental

CLYDE LINE STOPS COASTWISE SHIPS ON THREE ROUTES

Suspends the Service to Wilmington and to Tampa from This Port.

FINDS LABOR A PROBLEM

Philadelphia-Norfolk Line, with History of 50 Years, Also Quits.

HIGH COSTS A FACTOR

Wilmington Chamber of Commerce Wants Government Aid in Obtaining New Service.

The Clyde Steamship Company, it was learned yesterday, has decided to suspend the operation of three of its coastwise lines to South Atlantic ports. They are the New York to Mobile, Ala., and Tampa, Fla., line, in operation for sixteen years; the New York to Wilmington and Georgetown line, operated for thirty years, and the Philadelphia and Norfolk line, which has a history of more than fifty years of continuous service. Orders have been issued by the management of the company here to close the offices at Wilmington, N. C., and other ports and to dismiss the employes. Reasons assigned by the company for this action are the high operating costs and the inefficiency of labor.

W. V. Levis, general freight manager of the company, said yesterday that if conditions improved so that the ships would at least earn expenses the service which has been suspended might be resumed later.

"The Jacksonville service will continue," Mr. Levis said, "unless labor conditions make it impossible for the company to operate the steamships. We have had to discontinue the New York to Mobile and Tampa, the Philadelphia and Norfolk, and the New York to Wilmington and Georgetown lines after so many years because of the high wages afloat and ashore, the cost of fuel, and the inefficiency of labor. The people of Jacksonville can rest assured that the Clyde Line will continue its services as long as it is possible to do so."

Concerning the ships which had been operated on the suspended lines, Mr. Levis said that two or three of the vessels would be put on the Jacksonville and the New York-San Domingo service. Nine of the ships, he said, were now in port, and would go into drydock.

The New York-Wilmington line was taken over by the Shipping Board a year ago, and the Government guaranteed the Clyde Line a profit on the investment, although the ships were operated at a loss. The ships were suddenly turned back to the company on Dec. 5, and, according to officials of the company, it would have been impossible to put them back into the regular service on these routes without overhauling.

The Chamber of Commerce of Wilmington has sent a delegation to Washington to urge the Government to take steps to provide the port with a steamship service to New York.

GOETHALS ASKS $60,000,000.

Tells House War Department Lacks Storage Facilities.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—Major Gen. Goethals, Chief of the Purchase, Storage, and Traffic Division of the War Department, asked the House Military Affairs Committee today for an appropriation of $60,000,000 to be used in storing the enormous quantities of surplus war supplies of the department. He said $30,000,000 would be needed for the rental of storage houses and $30,000,000 for maintenances.

Thousands of tons of supplies are being brought back to this country from France, General Goethals told the committee, and the ports of debarkation are becoming congested because no storage places are available. He said much of the material was being left out in the open and that the Government was losing heavily by its deterioration.

ENRIGHT ATTACKS COSTIGAN'S WORK

Tells Mayor "Record Was the Worst Made Against Any Inspector."

ASSAILS WOODS REGIME

Says He Found Department "Top-heavy"—Costigan, Asked to Comment, Declines.

In a letter to Mayor Hylan yesterday, Police Commissioner Enright explained at length just why he demoted "Honest Dan" Costigan from Inspector to Captain and sent him from the First Inspection District to the Beach Street Station, along the waterfront. Although Costigan had established a record in the department during fifteen years as being one of its most efficient and fearless officers, Commissioner Enright declared that his record for cleaning up gambling houses was "by far the worst made against any inspector in the department," and he intimated that the reduced Inspector had been promoted through favoritism by the previous Police Commissioner. This is Commissioner Enright's letter:

> Feb. 7, 1919.
>
>
> My Dear Mr. Mayor: When a little more than a year ago you appointed me Police Commissioner, with full authority, you stated that I would be held responsible for the proper administration of the functions of the Police Department, and you directed me to reorganize it in any way that would serve the best interests of the people of this city.
>
> Among other things I discovered that the department was top-heavy, made so by former Police Commissioner Woods, who in the last month of his administration, had increased the normal number of Inspectors from nineteen to twenty-six, several more than necessary. Hundreds of police officers were doing detail duty, that is, holding soft jobs, and too few were on patrol in the streets. One of the first things I did was to put an immediate stop to this condition by eliminating unnecessary details, and sending several hundred policemen back to patrol duty who had been holding sinecures.
>
>
> The Inspectors were immediately summoned and informed of their responsibility for the enforcement of law and the elimination of vice and gambling within their districts, and they were directed to devote their attention to the criminal element and to provide the necessary protection to law-abiding citizens and maintain general order and decency. It was made very plain to the Inspectors that any dereliction of duty would be promptly and severely dealt with.
>
> Such changes as have been made by me in the Police Department have been made to increase its efficiency, and to render increased and better service to the people of this city. Methods of procedure that I found in the Police Department, when I took control of it, that were built on sound principles, and were to the advantage of the people of this city, and not in conflict to the proper administration of the Police Department, have been retained, and any readjustments have been deducted solely by desire to increase the effectiveness of the Police Department.

Federated Unions to Vote on Beer Strike; 'No Beer No Work' Slogan Gaining in Jersey

The Central Federated Union, at a meeting last night at Labor Temple, adopted a resolution to submit to the affiliated bodies of the union the question whether they are to go on strike in opposition to prohibition.

Morris Brown said that the organization should follow the example of others and go on strike unless they could obtain beer. He said that workers in some of the Western States and in Newark and other places in New Jersey had expressed their intention to do this.

Frank P. Fetridge, head of the Building Trades Council of Newark, in advocating the adoption last night of the "No beer, no work" slogan of the building trade unionists by the Essex Trades Council, said that if the movement on the part of local labor to strike on July 1, when the sale of beer is to be prohibited, received the support of the Essex Council, the simple slogan would crystallize into a national movement. The Essex Trades Council, which represents 75,000 trade unionists in Essex County, unanimously adopted this anti-prohibition resolution which Fetridge introduced:

> Whereas, The Essex Trades Council has always been opposed to prohibition and the amendment to the Federal Constitution; and
>
> Whereas, The Building Trades Council has adopted a motion that it will resist to the utmost its enforcement, even in the event of a strike; therefore, be it
>
> Resolved, That the Essex Trades Council declare itself in sympathy with the action of the Building Trades Council, and that a committee of five be appointed to act with a like committee from the Building Trades Council to formulate plans to resist the enforcement of this unanimously condemned and fanatical law; be it further
>
> Resolved, That this committee report back to this council in two weeks.

Buttons inscribed "No Beer, No Work" were being worn generally by trade unionists in Newark yesterday. "No Beer, No Fifth Liberty Loan," was inscribed on one of the buttons which appeared yesterday.

EBERT DENOUNCES ARMISTICE TERMS AT CONVENTION

Calls Them "Unheard Of" and "Ruthless" in Opening Weimar Assembly.

WARNS ALLIED LEADERS

Hints at Renouncing Peace and Leaving Victors to Work Their Will.

HECKLED BY HIS OPPONENTS

Independent Socialists Try to Drown His Voice—Delbrueck Threatens New War.

WEIMAR, Feb. 7, (Associated Press.)—Carl Kautsky, Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs in the Ebert Cabinet, was today elected President of the German National Assembly by a vote of 374 out of 399 cast by the Assembly.

WEIMAR, Feb. 6, (Associated Press.)—Chancellor Ebert's speech opening the German National Assembly this afternoon, the delivery of which occupied half an hour, was frequently interrupted by the Independent Socialists.

Herr Ebert found himself so heckled by the Independents that he was forced in the middle of his speech to turn upon them with the declaration that their disorder showed how little evil times had taught them. He spoke loudly, slowly, and distinctly, his voice carrying to the remotest parts of the theatre with its perfect acoustic properties.

The Chancellor's voice shook with emotion as he touched upon points which he deemed essential, and it rose high above the discordant shouts of the Independents when they tried to drown him out.

He aroused approval when he began by declaring: "We have done forever with Princes and nobles by the grace of God." The German people, he said, were now ruling themselves. There was disapproval mixed with approval when he declared that the revolution would decline responsibility for the shortage of food and the defects in food management in Germany.

Calls the Armistice "Ruthless."

Need, the Chancellor continued, delivered Germany to her enemies, but he protested against being a slave to Germany's enemies for thirty, forty, or sixty years.

"Our enemies declare that they are fighting militarism, but militarism has been dethroned," Herr Ebert asserted, whereupon an Independent interposed again.

The Chancellor next took up the armistice terms and branded them as unheard of and ruthless. The whole house was with him when he protested against the expulsion of Germans from Alsace and the sequestration of property.

The Assembly broke into shouts of indignation as the Chancellor referred to the 800,000 prisoners of war still held in captivity. All this, he said, showed anything but a spirit of conciliation.

"We warn our opponents not to drive us to the uttermost," he declared. "Hunger is preferable to disgrace, and deprivation is to be preferred to dishonor."

The Germans, he said, laid down their arms with confidence in President Wilson, and the present free Government of Germany believed it was only its right to enter the League of Nations and work with real energy.

Fears Economic Ruin.

"We turn, therefore," said the Chancellor, "to all the peoples of the world for justice. We ask that our economic life be not destroyed. The German people have fought for inner self-determination. It cannot be perfected from the outside."

Herr Ebert was cheered when he referred to the proposed union of Germany and Austria. He said he hoped that the bonds sundered in 1866 would again be sealed, and asked the House to approve the move heartily.

Following a strong appeal for German unity, the Chancellor declared that the Provisional Government had been the executor of a bankrupt régime.

"We will call on the old German spirit of Weimar," he said. "We will be an empire of justice and truth."

During the Chancellor's speech members of the Government stood grouped about the speaker's tribune, just in advance of and below the President's seat on the stage.

The Assembly, 397 members of which were present, adopted the old standing orders of the Reichstag as temporary rules of procedure. It will meet again tomorrow.

The Court Theatre was thronged long before the appointed time for the opening session. The Berlin policemen assigned to Weimar kept the huge crowd outside from interfering with the arrival of the delegates and others entitled to attend.

It was a democratic-looking crowd, well though plainly dressed, that shuffled its way through the slushy

WILSON IN CHARGE OF CONFERENCE WORK WHERE BIG ISSUES NOW WAIT ON LEAGUE; DROPS BELGIAN TRIP TO COMPLETE PLAN

TWO PREMIERS DEPARTING

Lloyd George Is Leaving Today; Orlando Going Back to Rome.

LEAGUE DRAFT HALF DONE

Provisional Acceptances Obtained on Many of the Most Vital Proposals.

CONSCRIPTION A PUZZLE

Four or Five Days May Suffice to Finish Discussion Before Wilson Departs.

PARIS, Feb. 7.—Coincident with the return of Premier Lloyd George to London tomorrow and the expected departure of Premier Orlando for Rome the Peace Conference proper will assume a new aspect. The Council of Ten will still remain in being, but will function less frequently than in the past.

President Wilson's time will be chiefly occupied with the draft of the League of Nations and the work of the conference will largely be carried on in commissions. This arrangement indicates that good progress has been made in some directions; but in another respect it is taken to show that the settlement of most outstanding questions waits upon the League of Nations scheme.

Originally it was proposed here to make the terms of peace with Germany the first business of the Peace Conference, and according to French view this would have proved the more rapid and logical course. The pressure of the view that a good peace would be largely dependent upon the formulation of the League of Nations plan, resulted in a modified procedure, admitting of work along a double line, an examination of special problems simultaneously with the discussion of the League Constitution.

Day by day it has become more evident that once the principle of a League of Nations had been solemnly accepted by the conference the constitution of the league must take precedence over many other questions, in the settlement of which much would depend upon the existence of the league.

Alternative solutions will be studied in commissions meanwhile, but it is thought highly probable that there will be no plenary session of the conference until President Wilson returns to Europe.

Essential problems of reparation and the French and Italian territorial claims will be thrashed out before commissions in the meantime with the occasional interposition of the Supreme Council.

Lloyd George will probably be away three weeks, and in his absence Mr. Balfour will head the British delegation. The fact that the Earl of Reading, who arrived in Paris only a few days ago, will return to London with his chief is taken to indicate the Prime Minister's feeling that in getting to grips with the domestic problems he will have need of sagacious advisers.

The report of Premier Orlando's expected departure, unlike that of Lloyd George, which was announced early in the week, was unexpected, and gave rise to some sensational rumors, the main burden of which was that there had been a serious divergence of view between the Italian Premier and Foreign Secretary Sonnino. This tendency to attach importance to rumors of this kind is deprecated by all, who hold that heavy necessity will iron out all inequalities of view.

Predictions are being made that except for the League of Nations discussion during this and next week the conference is entering upon a dull period, so far as the press and public are concerned. Most of the work of the commissions will remain secret until their recommendations can be ratified.

President Abandons Belgian Trip.

PARIS, Feb. 7.—As a result of the necessity of close attention to the affairs of the Peace Conference, President Wilson has been forced to abandon his proposed trip to Belgium.

It is stated that the pressure of the President's duties in Paris will be so great in the few days remaining before his departure for the United States that he has been compelled reluctantly to forego his trip. It is understood

War Council Talks of Stiffer Armistice Terms to Meet Ebert's Threat to End Negotiations

PARIS, Feb. 7, (Associated Press.)—The allied Premiers met this afternoon as the Supreme Interallied War Council and discussed the terms of the extension of the armistice with Germany. It was forecast before the meeting that the council would probably fix new terms to be imposed upon Germany, whose tactics of obstruction and recrimination are said to have reached a climax in a threat made at Weimar by Chancellor Ebert that Germany would break off negotiations with the Allies.

The only announcement made on the subject was in a communiqué issued tonight, saying:

> The Supreme Council today discussed the terms of the extension of the armistice with Germany. The discussion will continue Saturday.

The feeling in Peace Conference circles is that the Germans are more and more forgetting their position, and it is expected that the Supreme War Council will take measures to bring the Germans to a sense of the realities.

Marshal Foch will go to Treves on Feb. 17 to fix the conditions for a third renewal of the armistice.

It is understood that the War Council will fix a brief time within which the Germans must carry out the conditions they have only fulfilled in part. In this respect it is noted that none of the German ships which were to have been sent to certain allied ports has yet been handed over.

French opinion holds that the occupation of Essen is of first necessity if the Allies are to control Germany's principal war factories. Public opinion in France is also asking if the Supreme War Council is going to allow Field Marshal von Hindenburg to establish himself in Bromberg and prepare a campaign against Poland, which can only be supplied through Danzig.

The Supreme War Council is also to fix the size of the contingents of France, Great Britain, the United States, and other nations in the armies of occupation, both in Europe and Asia.

FRANCE TO BE FIRM ON REPARATION

Prepares to Abandon Yielding Policy When Her Vital Interests Are Reached.

WANTS BILL FOR FULL LOSS

Proposes to Lessen This Only if It Is Proved That Germany Cannot Pay.

By CHARLES A. SELDEN.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Feb. 6.—So far in the Peace Conference France has been yielding on various points, notably in the Bolshevist matter and in the question at what stage in the general proceedings the matter of the League of Nations should come.

France freely and cheerfully admits it, justifying what she has done on two grounds—that she has yielded for the sake of time saving and harmony to get the peace business under way, and, secondly, that she has yielded on points which she does not consider vital to her own future welfare.

But there is a limit to her yielding, declare those who represent her. France will be rigid and inflexible enough, they say, when it comes to the questions which she does consider vital, the foremost example of which, in her opinion, is the matter of reparation for war damages.

"We can live with or without remote islands or mandates," said a French authority to me today; "we can live without a League of Nations, although we hope to be happier with one. We can prosper without more colonies than those we now possess, but we cannot live as a bankrupt nation.

"That is a vital point which cannot be separated from the question of reparation. When that topic really gets before the five big powers or the plenary conference for settlement, you will find no yielding on the part of France should she find herself opposed by one or more nations inclined to deal too leniently with Germany.

Has Program for Reparation.

"So far all figures as to what this reparation should be are mere guesswork. But France has a definite policy for handling the situation, which is far from haphazard.

"First, we must make fair valuations for the damages to all countries, France, Belgium, England, and Serbia, which have suffered by the war. Second, we must get their total. That total will represent the amount of our bill to Germany. Third, we must present that bill to Germany and compel her to acknowledge it as the amount of her indebtedness.

"They are the first three things to be done. They constitute the first phase of the reparation program.

"It is not the concern of France or part of her policy to try to estimate in advance what Germany can pay and then fix a bill according to that estimate. The bill itself must cover the whole loss of all nations.

"To this must be added something that will help France to handle her present enormous annual budget of 15,000,000,000 francs. Two-thirds of that is due to the war, because before the war our budget was only 5,000,000,000 francs. France cannot continue to raise an increased amount without bankrupting herself, and bankruptcy is one of the things she does not propose to accept as a result of a war for which she was not responsible.

"We know, of course, that Germany will not be able to pay this whole bill, but will pay more if she gets the whole

AMERICAN OPINION ON LEAGUE WANTED

Our Delegates Asking What Is Thought of Dropping Compulsory Arbitration.

WILL ANY SUBSTITUTE DO?

France Insists All Powers Must Be Banded to Discipline Any Offending Nation.

By RICHARD V. OULAHAN.

By Wireless and Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Feb. 6.—The Commission on the League of Nations has decided that the League organization shall consist of a Permanent Council resident at some place to be selected by the League. This arrangement is the outcome of proposals submitted to the commission by French, British, and Americans, for whom President Wilson acted.

The French suggestion was that the council should consist of representatives of the five great powers, with the smaller nations having four. Under the French plan three votes vetoed any proposal. The British offered a suggestion that the council should consist of representatives of the five powers, with the smaller nations called in when the representatives of the five great powers in the council deemed it necessary. The President's plan was for a council of representatives of the five great and four smaller nationalities, with three to hold the veto power.

The others accepted the President's suggestions and they will be adopted, with a reduction of the number of representatives of the smaller nationalities.

The Governments in the League may designate their own regular diplomatic agents at the headquarters of the League to serve on the council, or appoint special Commissioners to represent them. There will be a President of the council, who will occupy a notable and commanding position in the affairs of the world.

The Belgian and Swiss Governments are pressing for the selection of Brussels and Berne, respectively, as the permanent seat of the council.

President Wilson will return homeward not earlier than Feb. 15 and not later than Feb. 17. He is working hard to obtain a definite agreement on the League constitution before sailing. Opinion varies as to whether he will succeed, but Americans are still optimistic that he will carry to America the text of the complete agreement.

Seven Articles Meet Approval.

Seven articles of the twenty-two comprising the constitution have been approved provisionally by the commission appointed by the Peace Conference. The preamble, which states the underlying objects of the league, has also been approved. This is appreciable progress, and all the more so when it is considered that the work was done at two sittings of the commission, over whose deliberations President Wilson presided.

Nor does "approved provisionally" give any cause for concern that the articles passed by the commission may come up again for important changes.

that in the event that he returns to Europe he will accept the Belgian invitation.

The President had a half hour's conference with Premier Lloyd George this morning at the Paris White House. It is understood that they discussed arrangements for carrying on the business of the conference after the departure of the British Premier for England. This may take place tomorrow, and it is said that the British Premier may remain away two or three weeks.

President Wilson will remain longer than Lloyd George, and so will be in a position for a time to watch the progress made in carrying out the peacemaking program.

There has been considerable informal discussion in conference as to how much delay might be occasioned in the work of the conference by the absence of the two leaders from Paris. The press has even been speculating as to whether the conference would be adjourned for a month.

The President and the Premier, however, are arranging affairs so that the business of the conference may move smoothly after their departure. The campaign for speed in dealing with the peace settlement, which they have been heading, is thought responsible for much of the rapid progress which the conference has made.

Substantially half the draft of the constitution for the Society of Nations had been covered last night by the Conference Commission, it was officially announced today. In approving several additional articles of the draft the commission reached an accord, it was stated, on questions of the greatest importance concerning the positive functions of the League. The acceptance of these articles was provisional.

While important details of the constitution remain to be agreed upon and are likely to take up the time of several more sessions, the fact that half of the draft has been passed over and adopted, including an agreement upon the general principles, has raised expectations that the draft will be ready for submission to the plenary conference early next week.

Eleven articles, it is stated, have been approved, with small modifications.

The only article not approved was the one concerning abolition of compulsory military service unless required by reasons of national defense under extraordinary circumstances.

Premier Orlando of Italy opposed the paragraph, remarking that if conscription was once abolished an attempt to revive it might lead to serious trouble, even a revolution. Léon Bourgeois, one of the French members, joined Premier Orlando in strongly opposing the abolition of conscription. He declared that France, owing to her geographical position, needs a standing army, and could never consent to strip herself of her defenses. The paragraph was then canceled, and it was decided to leave to each country freedom to select a system of recruiting its forces up to the amount of troops which would be fixed later by the Society of Nations.

Another article which caused animated discussion was that concerning the method of applying military coercion to the countries refusing to comply with the decision of the Society of Nations or breaking its rules. Owing to the very conflicting views expressed, the commission decided to postpone a definite decision.

The main discussion, however, was on the formation of the executive branch of the Society of Nations. President Wilson, Leon Bourgeois for France and Lord Robert Cecil each presented plans on the representation given to smaller powers. Each plan differed slightly.

Unofficial information is that President Wilson's proposal was for an executive branch of five members from the great powers and four members from the small powers, making a council of nine with a two-thirds vote required for the adoption of measures.

Qualifications for membership, which is also being discussed, involves the membership of neutrals and enemy powers as well as the great and small powers.

The presence at the meeting last night of nine representatives of the small powers with the ten of the large powers was taken to mean that the executive branch of the league as finally formed would include both great and small nations, instead of leaving the executive direction exclusively in the hands of the great powers.

The new delegates from small countries present were: Premier Venizelos, representing Greece; Premier Kramarz, for Czechoslovakia; M. Dmowski for Poland, and M. Diamonby for Rumania.

President Wilson, who presided, is pressing forward to bring about a complete constitution for the society in these nightly sessions, which last until midnight.

The great progress now being made indicates that the task may be completed within four or five days or well ahead of the time for the President's return to the United States on Feb. 15. The members of the commission emphasize the point, however, that the agreements reached thus far are provisional and in principle only. The entire structure may have to be revised when it comes to agreeing on details. This is the reason assigned for the secrecy with which the text of the project is being guarded.

The official statement regarding last night's meeting reads:

> The fourth meeting of the Commission of the League of Nations met at 8:30 o'clock last evening at the Hotel de Crillon. Messrs. Kramarz, Venizelos, Dmowski, and Deuvanty, (Diamondy?) representing, respectively, the Czechoslovak republic, Greece, Poland, and Rumania, took up their duties as members of the commission.
>
> The commission provisionally approved a number of additional articles to the draft. The approval of these articles marks an accord on certain questions of the greatest importance concerning the positive functions of the league. Substantially one-half of the draft has now been covered.
>
> A secretariat, consisting of M. Clauzel, Lord Eustace Percy, and Mr. Shepardson (Shepherdson?) has been appointed for the drafting of the procès-verbaux.
>

ITALY'S DEMANDS CUT DOWN BEFORE

Two Ports Promised to Her Instead of Nine Wanted Before Entering War.

HOLDS SHE TURNED TIDE

Assertion at Paris That Germany Would Have Won Early Victory but for Her Aid.

PARIS, Feb. 6.—The case for Italy, as it will be presented to the five big powers in the Peace Conference when they take up the Adriatic east coast question for settlement, may be summarized as follows:

Her delegates will contest for Fiume as well as for everything promised to Italy by France, England, and Russia in the London treaty of 1915 on three main grounds. First, the territory so promised is necessary to the future protection of Italy and, therefore, the peace of Europe. Second, the territory promised by the Allies in 1915 is far less than what Italy asked at that time as her allotment for going into the war. So she should not be asked now further to reduce her claims in the interest of Jugoslavia. Third, Italy entered the war, agreeing to fight Austria with the co-operation of Russia, but Russia collapsed, leaving Italy to do the work alone; so that the territorial compensation now should at least be as great as what was originally promised.

A new feature in the situation so far as public knowledge and understanding are concerned, is revealed in that second point, to the effect that Italy got less than she asked instead of compelling the Allies under stress of war to grant all she demanded. As a matter of fact, Italy's original demand included Fiume and eight Dalmatian ports and all the islands off the Dalmatian coast 600 or 700 miles all told, including the coast lines of the islands. The ports she demanded in addition to Fiume, together with their hinterlands, were Segna, Carolopaga, Zara, Sebenico, Spalato, Matkovitch, Gravosa and Ragusa. Italy left for future use of the Jugoslav State (not then in existence) three more to the south: Cattaro, Antivari, and Dulcigno.

Ports Withheld in Treaty.

But this proposed boundary line as it was drawn by Italy, was materially altered before the London treaty was completed. The Russian Government was consulted specially on this point by France and England, because she was considered as the traditional friend of all Slavs and the protector of their interests. It was chiefly at Russia's suggestion that only two of the eight Dalmatian ports asked by Italy were promised to her by the London treaty. These two were Zara and Sebenico, with a block of the hinterland in Central Dalmatia, extending back from them about fifty miles to the crest of the Dinaric Alps. Italy also got all the islands. But Fiume and the six Dalmatian ports demanded were withheld. Fiume was not given to Italy because at that time it was supposed the Dual Monarchy would still exist after the war and that it would be needed as an outlet for Hungary.

So Italy contends she did twice as much war work as was first expected of her, but received much less than her original request; and she balks at further reductions. Incidentally, she adds that if Italy had not entered the war it would have been finished in six months with a German victory, that there would have been no France or Belgium left, and that England would have been powerless. Also, she holds that if Italy had not won the last ten-day battle in the closing days of the war by defeating Austria, Germany would not have been compelled to sign the armistice.

Contemplates a Greater Serbia.

Italy resents intimations from French, English, and American sources, that she is a mere land-grabber, insisting on the terms of a secret treaty that would make impossible the future national life of the new Jugoslav State. She declares that a critic of Serbia in a semi-official document ten years ago declared that if the Jugoslavs had Ragusa and five miles adjoining they would have enough coast line to assure their existence and commercial prosperity. But now, according to the Italian viewpoint, the Jugoslavs get by the London treaty an increase of 24,000 per cent. over what the critic said was sufficient, but still demand more and appeal to the sympathy of the world which is so much interested just now in raising up oppressed nations and setting them going.

Italy prefers to speak of Greater Serbia than of Jugoslavia. The Italian claim is that the first title more than truly represents the future aspirations of her rivals on the Adriatic but that it was dropped by Serbia as sounding too Imperialistic to fit the present times. Italy's hostility, however, is not chiefly against old Serbia, but the Croatians and Slovenes, who are among the groups included in Jugoslavia. These groups Italy denounces as having been among the worst enemies of the Allies in the war, and she does not want to yield land to them.

Italy takes the stand that the London treaty cannot be put in question before the Peace Conference by either France or England, because they both signed it. So it can be brought up only by America. But Fiume is another question entirely outside of the London treaty. Above everything else, Italy wants Fiume on the ground that it is an Italian city, the inhabitants of which themselves want to belong to Italy. Jugoslavia is also claiming Fiume, so that it is an open question within the Italian viewpoint. As a matter of fact, Italy is willing to take that question up even at the risk of having to yield a little of Dalmatia which was promised to her, as the price of getting Fiume.

URGING TERRITORIAL CLAIMS.

Claimants Pressing More Than Ever on Conference Delegates.

PARIS, Feb. 7.—The number of territorial conflicts now making their appearance in Peace Conference circles, it is said in some quarters, is attributable to the prospects of an early realization of a Society of Nations plan which will involve the examination of such claims by a legal tribunal of the society for adjudication with due regard to the wishes and welfare of the inhabitants of the districts in dispute.

It is thought that some powers whose titles to territories in conflict rest on ancient historical ties would prefer to commit the Peace Conference to their support in advance of the adoption of a Society of Nations plan. If they could do this they would avoid a conflict between their claims and the principles that may be laid down in the Society of Nations.

The community of interest of some nations on certain questions had led to hints of co-operation between those nations to make up a majority in the conference. Gossip in the corridors even mentions threats of resistance to any decisions adverse to those interests. The commission working on the Society of Nations plan is not moved by these rumors, however, and is going about its work quietly but rapidly.

At the same time the Supreme Council in short daily sessions continues its policy of hearing patiently all claims and generally referring them to committees for thorough examination.

Secret treaties that were made under stress of war, and may be thought out of harmony with the principles of which a Society of Nations is being organized, have provoked much comment. The American delegates, at least, have said that such agreements, in so far as they are in conflict with the principles of a Society of Nations, must give way.

Some other powers, while not openly depending upon these arrangements, have reserved decision as to their final attitude. Meanwhile, with the thought of lessening existing controversies and avoiding unpleasant scenes in the final meetings before the departure of Premier Lloyd George and President Wilson, efforts are being made by influential personages to compose the differences between the individual States. The efforts are said to have prospects of success.

Small crowds are beginning to gather around the Foreign Office, where the Supreme Council meets, but they do not disturb the experienced diplomats, who say that what surprises them is that the proceedings have been so remarkably harmonious, in view of the multiplicity and the complexity of questions.

SEE GERMAN VICTORY AT BERNE CONFERENCE

Swiss Papers Say Teutons Gained All They Wanted—Thomas Leaves for Paris.

BERNE, Feb. 7.—On the eve of the end of the Socialist Conference here, some of the newspapers say that the German delegates have obtained all that they desired at the expense of the Allies.

The Democrat, under the caption "Victory for the German Socialist Majority Party," says:

"The die has been cast. The internationale, which since 1872 has been the instrument of the German Imperialist party, continues its traditions. All the independents who had placed their hopes in the conference see them vanish."

Territorial questions were taken up today by the conference, which had before it for discussion a committee resolution containing these main points:

The right of self-determination of all peoples in disputable cases shall be settled by a plebiscite.

A society of nations must protect oppressed or threatened minorities.

The result of the deliberations on these questions will be submitted to the Peace Conference in Paris.

Opposition to commercial protection systems was voiced by Juan Justo of Argentina, who said that protection was "a barrier to internationalism."

"The development of international institutions, which form the best basis for international amity, is one of the predominating points of the Society of Nations," he said.

Gustav Francq, the Canadian labor leader, proposed to the conference that it claim a six-hour day and a five-day working week throughout the world.

Four British and four Italian delegates arrived today. Mr. Brunning, a delegate from England, announced that the British trades unions had finally decided to participate in the conference, and had appointed three committees to prepare an international labor charter.

FIXING GERMAN WAR GUILT.

BERNE, Feb. 7, (Associated Press.)—There is still a great mass of material to be examined in German quarters regarding responsibility for the outbreak of the war, said Kurt Eisner, the Bavarian Premier, in discussing this subject with the correspondent today.

"Entire archives are as yet unexamined," Herr Eisner said, "but already much material has been found in the secret archives of the Munich diplomatic correspondence proving Germany's guilt, her responsibility for beginning the war.

"For instance, there is a record of a conversation between King Ludwig of Bavaria and Count von Schön, the former German Ambassador at Paris, which was found among Count von Hertling's papers, which shows that Germany desired the war. The conversation took place in August, 1914, the King telling the Ambassador that this war must have a different result from that in 1870 and that Belgium must be annexed by Germany.

"To this," continued Herr Eisner, "the King added: 'Germany must also acquire the mouth of the Rhine, even at the expense of the violation of Dutch territory. Furthermore, Bavaria must receive a portion of Alsace-Lorraine. In the latter case Bavaria would renounce her territories in Baden and Hesse.'"

Emperor William was undoubtedly directly to blame for precipitating the war, Herr Eisner said, but the military caste was responsible to a greater extent for bringing it about. They must all be tried, but by a German tribunal, he insisted. He is in favor of all stolen property being restored and the robbers severely punished.

"It is to be hoped that the Berne conference will renew the Internationale. This is the first time that delegates of the hostile countries have met since the war, and I hope the Berne conference will not be without effect on that in Paris."

FRANCE TO BE FIRM ON REPARATION

total as something she has to strive to attain than she would pay if we tried to reduce it to what we think her capacity may be in the future.

"The burden of proof that she cannot pay must always be on Germany. If she declares, for example, that she is capable of raising only 60 per cent. of a certain installment, we shall examine the matter very carefully to see if a way cannot be shown her whereby she will be able to pay 75 per cent.

"France agrees with America that Germany cannot and must not be crushed or eliminated, but we also agree with Lloyd George that Germany must be made to pay until it begins to hurt. The payment will be partly in money, but largely in goods."

Members of the Conference Commission on Reparation, of which M. Klotz, the French Finance Minister, is Chairman, have been asked by him to put in a memorandum the general principles on which they think claims should be based. These claims are to be discussed on Feb. 19.

VOID ISHII-LANSING DEAL, CHINA URGES

Peace Delegates Seek Annulling of Agreement, Also of Concessions Wrung by Japan.

NO LONGER SUBMISSIVE

Chinese People Will Rise, It is Said, Unless Old Coercion and Humiliation Are Ended.

By CHARLES A. SELDEN.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Feb. 6.—So true and generally accepted is the fact that America came into the war without any desire for gain that it has been taken for granted also that America has done nothing in the past in the way of agreements, secret or otherwise, with other countries that will have to be set aside by the Peace Conference as inconsistent with Wilson's fourteen principles.

But there is one blemish, at least, in the opinion of the Chinese delegation on America's otherwise clean slate. Because of the general assumption that nothing contrary to Wilson's points will be left standing after peace is signed and the League of Nations established, China assumes that the Ishii-Lansing agreement, entered into by the Japanese Baron and the American Secretary of State in March, 1917, will be nullified automatically, thus meeting the fate of the various agreements between European States which America disapproves.

Part of this Ishii-Lansing arrangement was, briefly, that the United States recognized that Japan had a special interest in China. Such recognition in itself was and is seriously resented by China, but what made it far worse in her opinion was that it was entered into secretly at Washington by Baron Ishii and Secretary Lansing without consulting the Chinese Minister to America or the Government in Peking.

The first China knew of this agreement, which virtually concerned herself, was when it was announced from Tokio as an accomplished fact. China filed a memorandum of protest at Washington, and then the matter was dropped for the time being.

The United States was then about to go into the war and concentrate all her energies on the European western front, and for that reason, a Chinese statesman in Paris said today, China did not wish to embarrass America by trying to upset the agreement that Japan had determined to get.

China now bases her case against this agreement especially on the first of Wilson's fourteen points and in general on the spirit of the whole Wilson program.

But China, regardless of the fact that she thinks she got a blow in the face from her best friend, still regards the United States as that best friend and is not inclined to embarrass President Wilson at the Peace Conference by formally demanding that he repudiate the specific act of a member of his Cabinet, if she feels assured that the agreement will simply die automatically because of inability to live in the new atmosphere of fairness among nations and open covenants.

Furthermore, China assumes that the Ishii-Lansing agreement will go by the board along with two other matters against which she has filed specific protests with the Peace Conference. One of these is the group of twenty-one demands to which Japan forced China to accede at the very opening of the European war, and the effect of which was to take away from China railroad and commercial rights in her own country till the year 2007, and practically give Japan control of the Gulf of Pechili as well as the land approaches to Peking and Tientsin. Naturally China wants all the twenty-one demands wiped out of existence and asks the Peace Conference to do it for her.

She insists upon the assurance also that Kiao-Chau, which was taken by Japan from Germany at the outset of the war, shall be restored to China as agreed, and quickly, instead of being held by Japan, which is something China fears is being arranged against her.

China is not oversanguine of her success at Paris, but she made a beginning in getting representation, for that was against the wishes of Japan, as is a matter of record.

The suggestion of Japan was that she represent both China and herself at the conference. Japan's argument was that, as China was divided in her internal politics by a struggle between north and south, she could not claim national unity for herself at Paris.

China's countermove to that was selection by the north as one of the five delegates to the conference of C. A. Wing, a leading statesman of South China. He represents both sections of the country by common consent and selection of both parts. Moreover, there is now in session in Shanghai a conference of ten representatives of North China and as many of South China on the work of restoring harmony.

"If China," said my Chinese informant, "does not find herself freed by this Peace Conference from all Japanese domination and all handicaps and humiliations put upon her by arrangement among the other countries, the Chinese people will rise in protest. The temper of my people is no longer what it was. We have thrown off the Manchu yoke and have since survived two movements to restore the monarchy. This has taught us that abject subimission need no longer be our part in the world."

JAPAN PRESSING PEKING.

Said to be Asking Disavowal of Delegates' Course in Paris.

PEKING, Feb. 5, (Associated Press.)—Attempts are being made by the Japanese to induce the Chinese Government to disavow the action of its delegates at the Peace Conference because they are seriously embarrassing Japan, according to semiofficial Chinese sources here.

This development has caused depression in Government circles, which had previously been jubilant over the strong stand taken by the Chinese in relation to Japanese claims. This depression is intensified by the fact that the Government is hard pressed for money and may, it is said, yield to the Japanese wishes in order to obtain needed funds.

PARIS, Feb. 5, (Associated Press.)—The Chinese delegation to the Peace Conference has been advised from Peking of Japanese complaint regarding the activities of the Chinese delegates here. Dr. Wellington Koo and the other delegates express surprise over these advices, as they say that the Chinese case was stated fairly before the Council of the Five Powers, and that on the suggestion of a member of that council China offered to submit all the secret agreements between China and Japan. China, the delegates say, stands ready to do this and accept the verdict of the Society of Nations on the issues.

ASKS ONLY JUSTICE FOR JAPAN

Baron Makino Tells Why She Wants to Control Islands.

PARIS, Feb. 7, (Associated Press.)—Baron Nobuaki Makino, senior Japanese delegate to the Peace Conference, has prepared a document of 5,000 words, to be issued next week, outlining Japan's position at the Peace Conference respecting questions open for settlement in the Far East.

"Japan does not come to the conference with demands," the statement says, "but is asking only those things which appear just to us, in the light of Japan's position in and the future of the Far East. At the outset I desire to state that since Japan opened her doors to foreign intercourse, trade, and political exchanges all treaties and engagements entered into with other countries have been kept in good faith, in letter and in spirit, and with regard for the good name of the nation and the rights of others."

The statement carefully goes over the main facts in history in the last twenty years since the Chino-Japanese war, when Japan, "yielding to force majeure, was obliged to give up to Russia the territory of Liao-Tung the fortress of Port Arthur, and the town of Dairen."

Referring to the Marshall and Caroline Islands as peopled by wild tribes, Baron Makino says:

"We claim the right to occupy these islands for the purposes of peaceful development. A national sense of dignity inspires the whole people of Japan to the conviction that any other disposition would be a reflection on us, and the handing over of the supervision of these islands would be a just recognition of what services we rendered in maintaining the commerce of the Pacific and assisting our allies in the Indian Ocean and the Mediterranean. We contend, and shall continue to contend, that Japan should control the islands north of the equator, and that the future of the wild tribes inhabiting the islands must depend upon the development of their civilization, a development which Japan most certainly will not retard."

Continuing, Baron Makino says: "The Government and people of Japan have been the loyal allies of Great Britain and France and, we believe, useful friends to the United States and Russia. It is not for me here to enter into a relation in detail of the services we rendered in this war. It is sufficient to say that what has been given or spent and what has been lost in the cause for which the Allies fought and won has been contributed in the spirit of loyalty and sympathy, and the Japanese delegates to this Conference are here to assist in the work of building up barriers against future wars and in forging the links of friendship and understanding between the nations of the East and the West."

BELGIANS URGING QUICK INDEMNITY

Partial Reparation Needed at Once to Repair Losses, Says Peace Delegate.

THINKS CLAIM PARAMOUNT

He Depicts the Utter Helplessness of His Country After German Devastation.

PARIS, Feb. 7, (Associated Press.)—The financial claims of Belgium against Germany are urgent, Baron van den Heuvel, a member of the Belgian peace delegation and a member of the Peace Conference Committee on Reparations, said today.

Belgium, he added, did not have time to wait for an agreement to be reached on the exact figures of the indemnity due her before obtaining at least partial reparation. The Baron held that a percentage of the indemnity should be paid immediately.

Belgium, he said, needed food and machinery at once. Her working men were idle, her industries were at a standstill or working at a loss, and her foreign trade would go to other markets unless something was done without delay.

Baron van den Heuvel said that it would take much time to reckon the exact figure of Belgium's losses through military operations, occupation and enemy requisitions. The amount of damages was varied and the Government, cities, towns, villages, and private citizens had suffered heavy losses. The Belgian Government alone spent 3,000,000,000 francs for carrying on the war and more than 2,000,000,000 francs for feeding the populations in occupied territory.

Forced war contributions exacted from the provincial governments during more than four years aggregated 50,000,000 to 70,000,000 francs a month, the Baron said. Private citizens had been despoiled of their copper and other valuables and their sufferings through unemployment had been accentuated by the high cost of living. More than 50,000 houses in Belgium had been destroyed.

In an effort to ruin Belgium competition after the war, the Baron continued, Germany seized all raw materials and the greater part of the machinery and electrical installations in the iron, steel, and manufacturing plants. The Cockerill steel plant, for instance, which employed nearly 12,000 workmen before the war, had been stripped of all machinery and rendered useless. Out of the 3,200 breweries in Belgium, nearly 2,800 were robbed of their copper material of all kinds.

The Belgian farmers, the Baron said, had lost all their horses, especially blooded stallions, so sorely needed now for reproduction. All the cattle had been requisitioned and sent to Germany, and the very land itself was poorer for lack of fertilizer. The inundations of salt water in Flanders had affected a large part of the province and rendered that part of Belgium sterile for seven years.

"While the foregoing losses may be figured in francs, what cannot be reckoned in money is the very terrible ravages in health suffered by our population because of privations," the Baron continued. "One hundred and twenty thousand workmen were forcibly deported to Germany or to the zone immediately behind the fighting line; one hundred thousand have returned emaciated and in such a state of health that they are an easy prey to tuberculosis.

"In order that life may resume its normal trend in Belgium many things are indispensable which do not depend altogether upon the Belgians. What Belgium needs is the immediate re-establishment of means of communication, machinery, raw material, customs tariffs to protect home industries and the immediate payment by Germany of the war indemnity to the full limit of its resources."

Asked if he thought that his country had a claim to priority on the first installment on the indemnity to be paid by Germany, Baron van den Heuvel said:

"Can you name any country which is more deserving of priority than Belgium? However, arrangements have just been concluded by which France, Great Britain and America guarantee to send 10,000,000 francs worth of products and raw material to Belgium."

This is not expected. The articles approved are regarded as disposed of as far as fears of any major difficulties are involved, and the sanction given to them was provisional only out of excess of diplomatic caution.

None of the seven articles, however, touches the issue involved in the proposal to compel nations to submit their differences to arbitration. That proposal is contained in an article yet to be reached. But it has been gone over thoroughly in what may be called the side conferences—private exchanges of views between small groups each composed of a few members of the League of Nations Commission and some of the plenipotentiaries not serving on the commission. These private discussions have served to bring out difficulties in the way of obtaining the necessary unanimous agreement on the provision for compulsory arbitration of international disputes, which to some seem insurmountable. At the same time, those most interested in it—and these include the members of the American delegation—have not given up hope that some arrangement will be reached which will save the principle that Governments must perforce submit their quarrels to an international court of arbitration. There is a very widespread view that without this provision, the object of the League of Nations—which is primarily to prevent the recurrence of wars—will be nullified.

Doubt as to Senate's Attitude.

As I have told in prior dispatches, this principle is being compromised so as to provide that nations engaged in disputes shall have a choice of three methods of adjustment—arbitration, mediation, or postponement of hostilities pending inquiry by the League. It is evident that this compromise is unsatisfactory to the American delegates, and they are now doing their best to bring the other representatives into accord with the view that nations must accept arbitration by compulsion, without any election as to other courses. In this the American representatives, according to what I am told, find themselves embarrassed by fear that the Senate will not sanction any treaty containing a compulsory arbitration provision. It is in this connection that the American representatives would be glad to have an expression of opinion from home.

As President Wilson said at a meeting of the League of Nations Commission where these points were emphasized: "I should like to know what the man back in Nebraska thinks about it." This may not be the exact wording of the President's expression, but it indicates substantially what he said. The man back in Nebraska does not mean William Jennings Bryan, but is a generic term for the American citizen whose views approximate the opinion of a large section of the people.

The trouble with the man back in Nebraska, however, is that he is not getting the background upon which to form his views as to whether the League of Nations is being organized in a way that will fit in with his ideas of what the League should be. There is no orderly arrangement here in Paris for informing the American public of the attitude its representatives are taking in discussing this important matter or of the difficulties of foreign interests represented in the Peace Conference. The British and some others have machinery for educating the people at home so that they may be able to form intelligent opinions on the questions at issue in the making of peace. The American representatives' position appears to be that the people they represent must wait until agreements have been reached and formally furnished to the press before attempting to pass upon their soundness.

But upon this matter of compulsory arbitration the man back in Nebraska has an opportunity of expressing his views on the basis of what is taking place among those engaged in determining the character of the agreement on the subject. Does he believe that failure to provide for compelling nations to submit their serious disputes to the arbitration of a tribunal set up by the League of Nations will rob the league of its ability to prevent war? Does he believe that leaving to disputants the choice of three methods mentioned—one of which is the Bryan method of postponement of hostilities pending impartial investigation of the causes at issue—will be effective as a means of keeping the world from the danger of being again involved in bloody conflict?

Not Bound to Use Armed Force.

It has already been determined that there shall be no agreement among the nations signatory to the peace treaty to join in the use of actual force to punish a Government which declines to abide by the decrees of the League. With this in mind, the man back in Nebraska will have to determine whether the plan of giving disputing nations the election of one of the three methods of adjustment will be a potent means of preventing a resort to hostilities.

Of course, nothing in the proposed treaty will prevent the members of the League from determining, whenever the issue is presented whether they shall employ military or naval strength, or both, as part of the combined international force to inflict the punishment. There will be a provision in the constitution of the League of Nations covering this problem, but it will be clearly set forth that no nation shall be bound by the treaty or constitution to place its land and naval forces at the disposal of the League for punitive purposes, should a majority of the league determine this to be necessary to bring a recalcitrant nation to obey the league's mandate.

The French view, which is being increasingly emphasized this week, is that the League will be ineffective unless there is a solemn obligation taken by every nation in its membership to use its army and fleet to discipline any nation that goes contrary to the League's ideas of right and justice. France has always in view the possibility that Germany may again become a menace to the existence of France and may attain such strength as to dare to seek revenge for her downfall.

Unless the League of Nations furnishes assurances in advance that the Governments composing it would come to the assistance of France in such an event, then, according to the French view, the whole purpose of the League would fail. The representatives of the other great countries are not without a sympathetic understanding of the French position, but most of them feel that there will be real assurance of French protection against Teutonic aggression in the provisions to be contained in the constitution of the League for some sort of judicial adjustment of international disputes, for example, compulsory reduction of armaments, with which Germany will be obliged to comply, and other means which, backed by the principles and sentiments underlying the League organization, will be a long step in the direction of permanent peace.

STRAUS WOULD PUT BELGIUM OVER TURKEY

Thinks United States Too Busy with Our Own Affairs to Be the Mandatory.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 7.—Oscar S. Straus leaves here on Sunday for Paris, where he will attend the international discussions as Chairman of the League to Enforce Peace, and where, as he told THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent tonight, he intends to stay until the League of Nations is actually brought into existence. He expressed himself as very much pleased with the statements of progress which have been made, and offered an important suggestion as to the future of Turkey. Asked about the suggestion in today's London newspapers that the United States would consent to be the mandatory for Turkey, he said:

"All my three visits to Turkey taught me that the Turks have no constructive or governing power. It will be a good thing for themselves and for the races that have been subject to them to be put under the tutelage of one of the civilized powers. It will be a good thing for that power to undertake the duty as mandatory under the League of Nations, and I think it will be a good thing for the League if the nation selected should be Belgium or one of the smaller peoples enjoying some such particular international position as she does. I am merely speaking for myself and giving my own ideas, and, still speaking only for myself, I am of the opinion that the United States is too far removed from Europe and too fully occupied with the affairs of her own part of the world and her own possessions to undertake the work of a mandatory in Europe or the Near East."

OPPOSES RAISING BLOCKADE.

France Against Letting Foe Have Raw Materials, Says Tardieu.

PARIS, Feb. 6, (Associated Press.) Captain André Tardieu, one of the French representatives on the Commission on the Society of Nations, announced tonight that the program for the society would be ready some time next week. He went on:

"France is opposed to the raising of the blockade on raw materials against Germany until her damage to French industries has been made good. Germany was responsible for the destruction of one-third of the factories of France and, if allowed to resume production with equal facilities, it will be a serious economic handicap for us."

Captain Tardieu expressed the belief that the Allies would not disagree with the contention of France. He added that the Blockade Committee advocated the raising of the raw material embargo against neutrals at the earliest possible date, with the understanding that materials were not to be reshipped to Germany.

ASKS QUESTION ON MANDATES.

London Paper Thinks They Are Inconsistent with Monroe Doctrine.

LONDON, Feb. 7.—The Spectator, which has been friendly toward the United States, gives much space this week to criticism of American conference policies. The Spectator finds it impossible to reconcile the system of appointing mandatory powers for the German colonies with a continuance of the Monroe Doctrine.

While approving American intervention in Santo Domingo and Haiti, the newspaper asks if the United States is going to ask retrospectively for a mandate to be there.

"If she does not," The Spectator says, "she may aid a suspicion that there is to be one law for herself and another for the rest of the world."

The newspaper says that the Monroe Doctrine rules the whole hemisphere out of the possibility of serious imbroglios, and it finds it difficult not to sympathize with the Australian desire for a similar atmosphere of tranquillity. Under the "Australian Monroe Doctrine" The Spectator hopes that the conference will not go further in the League of Nations than one insisting upon the sanctity of international treaties.

The Spectator is puzzled by the President's naval policy. While sympathizing with the American desire for a great merchant marine, it thinks that naval competition on the lines of the long struggle with Germany is unthinkable.

GUERRILLA WAR AT BREMEN.

Hamburg Railway Workers Refuse to Run Trains for Spartacides.

BERLIN, Feb. 5, (Associated Press.)—Unconfirmed press dispatches from Bremen indicate that the insurgents there are continuing guerrilla warfare in the outskirts of the city and in the harbor, notwithstanding the government's assertion that the rising was quelled on Tuesday.

The casualties are estimated at thirty dead and more than one hundred wounded, the insurgents being the heaviest losers. Property damage is believed to be slight, as the communists failed to defend their stronghold stubbornly and beat a retreat towards the suburbs as soon as government troops began to advance in earnest.

AMSTERDAM, Feb. 7.—The casualties at Bremen will largely exceed the thirty dead and more than one hundred wounded in hospitals there, according to a Berlin dispatch to the Telegraaf.

One of the latest instances of the use of the strike weapon against the German extremists was at Hamburg, where the railway men refused to operate trains on which the Soldiers' and Workmen's Council intended to send reinforcements to the Spartacides at Bremen.

WANTS OUR HELP TO CARRY BURDEN

London Paper Thinks We Must Assume Large Responsibilities in the New Peace Era.

PART DUE TO LEADERSHIP

Natural Sentiment Here Against This Should Give Way, It Is Urged.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 7.—The London Times, in an editorial discussing French criticism of the League of Nations, and especially of the mandatory theory of such a protectorate, says:

"That the mandatory theory involves some infringement of the full theory of French colonial sovereignty is undeniable, but it is no greater infringement than we ourselves are ready to submit to in the case of those German colonies which are, geographically speaking, fragments broken off from the British mainland. Moreover, be it remembered that nothing is to be had in this world except at a price.

"The great gain of the mandatory principle is that if it is worked honestly it will transfer colonial questions, as between one nation and another, from the realm of politics to that of law, and let it be remembered, too, that of all the breaches with precedent that the establishment of a league will make, none is quite so important as the breach made by it in the political traditions of the United States.

"People sometimes speak as if an ideal were being imposed on Europe by America, who herself proposed to go back to her former state of 'splendid isolation.'

"Nothing of the kind. American advocacy of its principle means that she cannot possibly absolve herself from liabilities for its working out. She must assume some responsibility for the scheme of which she is one parent. She must on all questions in which the moral law of right and wrong, as expressed in the new international law, is involved henceforward be part of the European system.

"Here is a splendid and beneficent disturbance of the old, unstable balance, and France, now that the Russian alliance has lost its value for her, will be the first to see how much the entry of the United States into European politics by the gateway of the League may mean for her in the future, and not only for her, but for all the friends of liberty."

The London Times Paris correspondent writes:

"Something tangible must be achieved before the end of the week, and something must be done to make not only the world at large, but also some of the delegates, realize that the League of Nations, if it is to be any good at all, must be made really effective in its control.

"It is no good whatever to expect to rule the world and to abolish war by means of copybook maxims. A penal code, in other words, is useless without a policeman and his truncheon, and it is quite clear that no big nation can possibly help to make the league effective without accepting the responsibilities, and in some cases, sacrifices.

"American opinion, for many reasons, it is known, is anxious to accept the self-denying ordinance which would apply the principles of the Monroe Doctrine to extra-American affairs, but it may be that in view of the tremendous jolt given to the whole world by the war, America may yet find a useful field for civilizing activities in many tracts of the world where chaos and confusion prevail, and where political and territorial considerations make it difficult for the league to intrust a European power with a mandate.

"While it is known that American opinion is largely hostile to the acceptance of any such mandate, it is nevertheless hoped that after Mr. Wilson's return it will be brought to realize that it is impossible for the United States to go back to their own side of the fence and shirk the responsibilities of the great plan of which their statesmanship is the main architect."

DESIRES OF HEDJAZ STIR PARIS CRITICS

Arab Kingdom's Aspirations Clash with French Aims in Asia Minor.

PRINCE BEFORE CONFERENCE

Feisal's Presentation of His Case Will Probably Be Referred to a Special Committee.

BY ERNEST MARSHALL.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Feb. 6.—The Conference today heard the claims of the King of Hedjaz as explained by the delegation headed by Prince Feisal, a picturesque Arab who wears a khaki uniform and the resplendent headdress of the chiefs of his nation. It is not to be supposed that the presentation of the case of this recently created monarchy—for the King of Hedjaz was until the later stages of the war known as the Grand Shereef Hussein—could create disturbance within the inner circle of the Council of Ten, but it has caused at least a ripple of excitement on the surface of the Conference.

In one section of the Paris press there appears today a vehement onslaught on the procedure of the "Big Five" in calling Prince Feisal before them. The King of Hedjaz, it is asserted, is merely a vassal of Great Britain, receiving British subsidies and speaking only by the British book. Why, it is asked, should a serious-minded conference listen to claims which were on a par with the stories of the Arabian Nights? One French paper remarks that "the valiant Emir is asking for Hedjaz the whole Arab world, including Syria and Mesopotamia, Damascus and Bagdad.

Like most generalizations, this sweeping assertion is hardly in strict accordance with the facts; nevertheless, there are aspects of the Hedjaz claims to which from the French point of view there are serious objections. As for the charge that the King of Hedjaz is merely a vassal in British pay, it is pointed out that his actual independence was recognized by the Allies soon after he had in November, 1916, assumed his new title at the request of the Ulema and notables of Mecca, which contains the tomb of the Prophet and is the holy city of the Mohamedans, and that the subsidies he received from Britain were war grants furnished for the prosecution of the war, just like those made to other countries fighting Germany and her allies.

The main difficulty in connection with this particular problem lies in the treaty concluded between Great Britain and the King of Hedjaz, under which Damascus was to be included in the territory awarded to Hedjaz. Damascus lies near the border line between what were generally looked upon as likely to be the spheres of control of Great Britain and France. According to this purely tentative demarkation of spheres of influence, Palestine, from near the Sea of Galilee to the Egyptian border, would be placed under the aegis of Great Britain, acting as special guardian of the newly constituted Zionist nation, while the country north of the Sea of Galilee to Asia Minor would be within the sphere of French influence. One section at least of French opinion is strongly opposed to Damascus remaining under control of the King of Hedjas, by whom it is now being administered.

It is quite obvious that, while the Council of Ten may have considered that it had good reason to listen to the Hedjaz claims, their consideration of them must be merged in the solution of the much greater question of the disposition of all the Turkish dominions in Asia now occupied by the Allies. It was stated this afternoon that the probable course of action by the Council would be that, after hearing Prince Feisal's presentation of the Hedjaz case, it would refer these special claims to a committee which should study them in their relation to the whole problem of Turkish settlement.

The particular difficulties of the Hedjaz affair are only one illustration of many complexities of the whole question. "America to the rescue!" is the slogan heard in some quarters where it is urged that European rivalries in Asiatic Turkey can best be disposed of by the United States undertaking the administration of territory where it is universally agreed that it could have no selfish purposes to serve.

Failing American assistance, the disposition of the Turkish dominions under the trusteeship of the various European powers most interested will undoubtedly present many difficulties, but none which is in any sense insuperable. In fact, speculation is already keenly at work over various schemes of distribution under which this, that and the other special interest of Great Britain, France, Italy and Greece can be conciliated by processes of compromise. The study of these processes will be the work of special committees; so that at this stage it would be idle to predict which power, for instance, shall be trustee for Constantinople or the other cities and territories of the Turk.

England Suggested as Mandatory.

PARIS, Feb. 6.—The Supreme Council today heard the claim of Hussein, King of Hedjaz, speaking through his son, Prince Feisal. The Prince maintained that Arabia, including Syria and Mesopotamia, had a non-Arabic population of less than 1 per cent., and that the principles of nationality enunciated by President Wilson should leave the Arabs to govern Arabia, with possibly some mandatory to develop intercourse with the outside world.

The Prince is said to have advocated Great Britain as the mandatory for Arabia. This has aroused sharp criticism from French newspapers, owing to the French interests in Syria. The semi-official Temps asserted today that the Prince had received large British subventions, and asked in an editorial:

"Has the Prince who addressed the great powers today some particularly great powers today some particular obligation toward some of his hearers?"

PLAN BLOW AT SUFFRAGISTS

Antis Want Investigation of Bolshevism Extended to Them.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—The National Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage announced tonight that it would present a petition to the Senate tomorrow asking that the planned investigation of Bolshevist, I. W. W., and other radical propaganda be extended to include national and international societies favoring woman suffrage.

The Senate, a statement issued by the association tonight says, will be asked "to investigate the suffragists to determine what relationship exists between American suffrage societies and organizations of Socialists and Feminists in Europe, and to discover in what manner the vast sums of money said to be raised and spent by suffrage societies are used to affect legislation in the United States."

SEEKS MODEST AREA FOR PALESTINE

Jews Generally Hopeful That Britain Will Be Made Trustee for Their Land.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 6.—The Chronicle's diplomatic correspondent says:

"If the Peace Conference decides, as is probable, to give the trusteeship of Palestine to Great Britain, this will accord emphatically with Jewish sentiment, expressed by Jewish bodies all over the world. At least 10,000,000 have shown such a desire in Western Europe, in Poland, Czechoslovakia, Palestine, and America.

"Travelers in the last fifty years have recorded the strong desire of the Jews to reconstitute themselves as a nation in their Biblical home, to be under the protection of England. This springs from gratitude to England for her traditional generosity toward the Jews and from the feeling that, as the nearest great power to Palestine, she is peculiarly well suited to exercise such tutelage. Again, the self-governing of the British colonies particularly appeals to the Jews, who hope eventually to evolve in the same direction. For the moment they recognize that they are in the minority in Palestine, but they undoubtedly desire to set up a Jewish Council which should have a recognized representative status.

"It will be found that Jews have put forth quite modest claims for the frontiers of the new State. They are actuated by no desire to infringe upon the acquired rights of their neighbors. As nearly as possible, we believe the new Palestine under the Union Jack will be coterminous with the territory from 'Dan to Beersheba' of the Old Testament. Thus no foreign power can wedge itself between Lebanon and the Egyptian border. The territory extends on both sides of the Jordan, but it does not include the desert, though that belonged to ancient Palestine. It stops short at the Hedjaz Railway as a recognition of Arab rights. Nor does it take in Damascus, which is regarded as the Arab capital. For practical purposes, therefore, it is the old historic Palestine, with certain adjustments of an economic order, such as complete possession of the essential waterways.

"Thus it may be assumed that north of the Damascus line will be the French protectorate of Syria under the league, in accordance with the historic claims of our allies, which go back to the Crusades and rest in their modern application on the official protection of Christians.

"Even the Pope has blessed the projects of the Zionists to reform a nation of Jews after 2,000 years, and it has received the enthusiastic support of President Wilson. France, Italy, and Japan have also indorsed the declaration of Balfour on Nov. 2, 1917, which is the modern Jewish charter, and will appear, doubtless, in the treaty of the new State as part of its preamble. That declaration stipulated that 'His Majesty's Government view with favor the establishment of a national home for the Jewish people, and will use their best endeavors to facilitate the achievement of this object.'"

MINES SINK TWO SHIPS.

17 Men Lost with Danish Steamer—British Mine Sweeper Blown Up.

COPENHAGEN, Feb. 5.—Only one of eighteen members of the crew of the Danish steamer Carmen, 1,206 tons, was saved when the steamer was sunk by a mine on Sunday in the North Sea. The accident occurred near the Lister Fjorde.

LONDON, Feb. 7.—The British mine sweeper Erin's Isle struck a mine this morning near the mouth of the River Thames and sank. Twenty-eight survivors have been landed.

LANSING RECOGNIZES JUGOSLAV UNION

Welcomes the Combination of Serbs, Croats, and Slovenes in One State.

FRONTIERS TO BE ADJUSTED

Final Settlement Must Be Made by Peace Conference, the Secretary Announces.

PARIS, Feb. 7.—Secretary of State Lansing, in a formal statement issued today, stated that the Government of the United States welcomed the union of the Serbian, Croatian, and Slovenian peoples. The statement reads:

"On May 29, 1918, the Government of the United States expressed its sympathy for the nationalistic aspirations of the Jugoslav races, and on June 28 declared that all branches of the Slav race should be completely freed from German and Austrian rule. After having achieved their freedom from foreign oppression, the Jugoslavs, formerly under Austro-Hungarian rule, on various occasions expressed the desire to unite with the Kingdom of Serbia. The Serbian Government, on its part, has publicly and officially accepted the union of the Serbian, Croatian, and Slovenian peoples.

"The Government of the United States, therefore, welcomes the union, while recognizing that the final settlement of territorial frontiers must be left to the Peace Conference for adjudication according to the desires of the peoples concerned."

As the result of direct exchanges between Premier Orlando of Italy and Premier Protitch of Jugoslavia, it was said today, the differences regarding the boundaries of their respective territories, which have been an acute problem, will probably be amicably adjusted soon. Representatives of the two nations conferred with President Wilson yesterday, when it was stated that an effort was being made by him to mediate to settle their claims.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—Secretary Lansing's announcement in Paris today that the United States Government formally welcomed the new union of the Jugoslavs was received with joy tonight by Jugoslav leaders here. Professor Yovanovitch, Director of the Information Bureau of the new kingdom, said:

"You can rest assured that the official recognition of our kingdom will rouse the greatest enthusiasm and provoke a feeling of sincere admiration and gratitude to the Government of the United States, both by the Serbs of Serbia and by our brothers in race, the Jugoslavs of the former Austro-Hungarian monarchy. * * * We are proud that the first formal recognition of our new State comes from the Government of the great country who shared with us the honor of having taken up arms against the enemy of the world without having asked the cost of victory or its reward."

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

VIENNA, Feb. 4, (via Geneva.)—The Jugoslav Government announces in the official Gazette that the name of the new State will be the Kingdom of the Serbs, Croatians and Slovenes.

MONTENEGRINS AT ODDS.

Ex-King Insists Serbs Try to Prevent His Nation Joining Union.

PARIS, Feb. 6, (Associated Press.)—King Nicholas of Montenegro in a proclamation to his people charges the Serbian administration with conspiring to defeat Montenegro's legitimate aspirations to become a member of the Jugoslav Federation.

Simultaneously with the issuance of the proclamation, Dr. Peter Chotch, acting Minister of Foreign Affairs for Montenegro, sent an appeal today to the Peace Conference, declaring that Montenegro was besieged by Serbia and that its vital interests were being ignored by the Peace Conference.

Dr. Chotch asks to be informed how long Montenegro will be compelled to suffer. He says that since the early days of the war Montenegro has been treated like an outcast outside the pale of the law and that it is now left a prey to the imperialistic and dynastic ambitions of Serbia. He insists that Montenegro's rights shall be heard at the Peace Conference and demands a seat at the Conference.

There are two parties in Montenegro, one favoring full annexation by Serbia, and the other supporting King Nicholas.

REDS SHELL OUR LINES ON THE VAGA RIVER

Our Casualties From All Causes in North Russia 409 Out of Force of 4,925.

ARCHANGEL, Feb. 6, (Associated Press.)—The American positions on the River Vaga, at which an infantry attack by the Bolsheviki on Tuesday was repulsed, were under heavy shell fire from the Bolshevist artillery today.

The other sections on the northern front were quiet.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—Total casualties in the American forces in the Archangel region of Russia up to and including Jan. 31 were 180 killed, died of wounds, sickness or from other cause, or missing in action, and 229 wounded or injured, making a total casualty list of 409 out of a force that numbered 4,925.

This information was contained in a cablegram from Archangel dated Feb. 4 and made public today. The casualties were listed as follows:

Killed in action, 3 officers and 58 men; died of disease, 2 officers and 64 men; died of wounds, 1 officer and 12 men; accidentally killed, 3 men; drowned, 1 officer and 2 men; missing in action, 34 men; wounded in action, all ranks, 198; accidentally wounded, 25; wounded, other causes, 6.

Of these casualties, 63 occurred between Jan. 19 and Jan. 31, the period during which the Bolshevist forces were attacking the allied lines in such force as to compel a considerable retirement. The losses during this time on the Vaga front were: Killed in action, 11 men; died of wounds, 1 officer and 3 men; missing in action, 18 men; wounded, 2 officers and 28 men; total, 63.

On Jan. 31 the American force in the Archangel sector was comprised of 161 officers and 4,764 other ranks.

Another effort today by Senator Johnson of California to secure Senate consideration of his resolution favoring immediate withdrawal of American troops from Russia ended in failure. A motion by Senator Johnson to substitute his resolution for the Post Office Appropriation bill was defeated, 37 to 32.

LITHUANIA FOR PARLEY

But First Wants Recognition of Independence by Allies.

By CHARLES A. SELDEN.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES

PARIS, Feb. 6.—The Lithuanian delegation in Paris, representing the whole of Lithuania in Russia, comprising a population of about 15,000,000, has decided to reply to the Prinkipo invitation that they are ready to accept it, on condition of the indorsement of the principle by the Peace Conference of absolute autonomy and independence for Lithuania.

The representatives of the Lithuanians have placed their claims for such autonomy before the proper commission of the Conference.

REFUSE TO STOP FIGHTING.

BERLIN, Feb. 7, (Havas.)—During their parleys with the Polish delegates, the Prussian delegates asked for the evacuation of the Province of Posen by the Poles and also the restoration to their duties of authorities in East Prussia recognized by Prussia.

The Poles declined to acquiesce, and requested an adjournment of the conference for two weeks.

PADEREWSKI ASKS ALLIES FOR ARMY

CZECHS CROSS FRONTIER

Great Army of Bolsheviki Also Reported to be Preparing to Overrun the Country.

PARIS, Feb. 7.—Ignace Jan Paderewski has instructed the Polish National Committee in Paris to urge that the allied powers give their acquiescence to the sending to Poland of the Polish Army in France.

According to information received at Polish national headquarters from Paderewski Czechoslav troops have invaded Poland from the south, crossing the Galician and Hungarian frontiers at Chyrow, Eastern Galicia, and at Nowtarg, Western Galicia. The advices say that the Czechoslavs are committing atrocities in the invaded territory, on the ground that the inhabitants, being civilians, have no right to offer resistance to the invasion.

Paderewski, it is added, has been appointed a delegate to the Peace Conference in Paris and will shortly join his colleagues from Poland.

The Interallied Commission appointed by the Supreme Council of the Peace Conference to visit Poland, which will leave tomorrow for Warsaw, has appointed a Chicago newspaper man as the American press representative with the commission. It has refused to allow any representatives of the press associations or any special correspondents to accompany it. (The Associated Press now has a staff correspondent representing it at Warsaw.)

WARSAW, Feb. 3, (Associated Press.)—In heavy fighting in the last few days in Northwestern Galicia, Czechoslovak forces have advanced to within nineteen miles of Cracow, despite strong resistance on the part of the Poles. The Czechs have the advantage of greater numbers and better training and the Poles have been obliged to withdraw troops from Eastern Poland to join the fighting in Galicia. The Czechs are reported to be arresting a great number of civilians.

In the region of Lemberg (Eastern Galicia) the Poles are keeping the enemy in check. In the last few days the Poles have retaken some of their number who had been taken prisoners. Among the prisoners recaptured were sixty male nurses, who, according to reports from Lemberg, were impaled on pointed sticks by the Ukrainians. Four of the nurses are reported to be dying in a Cracow hospital.

General Sheptitsky, Chief of the Polish General Staff, says it will be necessary for the Poles, if the Allies do not do so, to open a route to Danzig in order to bring into Poland the army of General Haller as well as food supplies destined for Poland.

German soldiers who have arrived here from Russia express the belief that a great Bolshevist army is preparing to sweep over Poland. It is reported that General von Esterloff, formerly a member of the Russian General Staff, has captured Kharkov and is advancing into the Ukraine. The "black plague" is reported to be raging in Kovel, the Ukraine, because of lack of soap.

Countess Sanna Orda, 19 years old, has arrived in Warsaw from her estate near Pinsk and reports active Bolshevist operations in that region. The Countess for some months had been living in a cabin on her estate by herself in order to prevent, if possible, peasant bands from burning her château and destroying the crops. She declares that a great many other Polish women have remained on their estates, believing that they were discharging their duty to Poland in resisting the Bolsheviki to the last minute.

When Bolshevist troops reached her estate they attempted to capture the Countess, but she escaped on a German troop train. She says that the Bolsheviki are well armed and announced that they were going to invade Poland with a great army. She said that the Germans at Pinsk sold the Bolsheviki all their cannon. At the present time salt costs 40 rubles a pound in the region of Pinsk and bread 30 rubles.

The Bolsheviki, the Countess says, rob all their victims of their clothes and burn all the clothes they are unable to use themselves. She reports that some German soldiers are joining the Bolsheviki.

Manifestations were held in several towns and villages today against the Polish Committee in Paris in the belief that it was responsible for the failure of the Allies to intervene in the fighting between the Poles and the Czechs.

EBERT DENOUNCES ARMISTICE TERMS

and snowy streets to the theatre, for every one walked, save one carriage and one automobile party. Following a brief review of an infantry honor company, all sought the interior of the theatre, which was brilliantly lighted and transformed into a creditable imitation of a legislative hall.

The orchestra chairs had been shifted to writing desks, while the entire first and second balconies, holding the press representatives, had been so altered that each newspaper man had a small bit of table.

The stage had been changed by the addition of a platform, on which the presiding officer sat in an enormous high-backed chair upholstered in leather on which the German eagle is emblazoned. It is the old Reichstag Presidential chair.

Neutral Diplomats Present.

The theatre, especially the tribune of the President and the Government benches, was fairly buried in red, pink, and white carnations. The rear portions of the first and second balconies and the gallery were thronged with privileged visitors, including nautral diplomats in Germany who had arrived from Berlin on Wednesday.

Nearly three hundred of the members of the Assembly are new to politics, including twenty-eight women, of all ages, scattered about the house. The women were the distinct curiosity of the afternoon and the only mirthful event at the opening of the session was a hesitancy followed by a shrill, excited "yes" of acquiescence as the first woman's name was called. The second woman on the list had not expected to hear her name and showed evident embarrassment as it was almost shouted out.

To Name a Cabinet of Fifteen.

February 5.—At party caucuses yesterday held in anticipation of the meeting of the Assembly an attempt was made to induce the delegates to adopt by acclamation what is styled a "provisional constitution," which is in fact little more than a document embodying rules of order.

The attempt met with opposition, and it is expected that the subject of a Constitution for the German nation will have to be referred to a commission, which will mean that the sessions of the Assembly will have to be suspended pending the commission's report.

The plan now agreed upon is to name a Provisional Cabinet of fifteen members to conduct the business of the nation until the next general election. This Cabinet, according to present plans, will include Count Brockdorff-Rantzau, the Foreign Secretary, as a non-parliamentarian member, seven Socialists, and seven members from the bourgeois parties, from the ranks of the Democrats and the Centrists.

Socialist Ministry Opposed.

Some of the members of the democratic caucus, the correspondent was informed, favored a Cabinet made up entirely of Socialists, but the general opinion favor bourgeois participation in the Government.

A delegation of Austrian Socialists arrived today and took part in the Socialist caucus.

As a result of the caucuses, which lasted into the evening, it appeared that the conflict over the question of wiping out State lines within the nation, which had been predicted, was unlikely to materialize. The delegates favoring this plain, it is said, realize that elimination of State lines cannot be brought about at this time, and that the most they can hope for is a federated union of States with a strong central Government.

Intimated Rejection of Peace.

BASLE, Feb. 7.—Chancellor Ebert, according to a version of his address to the German National Assembly received here, said:

"The conditions of the armistice have been of unheard of severity and were carried out without shame. We warn our adversaries not to push us too far.

"Like General Winterfeldt (who resigned from the Armistice Commission) the whole German Government might also eventually be forced to renounce collaborating in the peace pourparlers and throw upon our adversaries all the weight of responsibility for the new world organization.

"Confident in the promises of President Wilson Germany lay down her arms, and now we await the peace of President Wilson, to which we have a right."

Steps to Prevent Weimar Raid.

BERLIN, Feb. 5, (Associated Press.)—Gustav Noske, who is in charge of military affairs in the Ebert Cabinet, has ordered the Soldiers' Council at Erfurt to return the arms which were illegally abstracted from the arsenal there and distributed among the civilians. If the order is not obeyed within four days, it is announced that the Government will take measures to disarm the civilians, who are said to be presumably organized for an attack on the National Assembly at Weimar.

The Berlin Press Club has adopted a resolution to be presented to the Assembly, in which it protests sharply against the seizure of newspaper plants throughout Germany by the Spartacides. The resolution calls on the assembly to authorize effective measures for safeguarding the liberty of the press, the men in its employ, and the physical property.

DANGER OF NEW WAR, DELBRUECK DECLARES

If Germans Are Made "Wage Slaves" by Allies They Will Rise Again, He Asserts.

BERLIN, Feb. 7, (Associated Press.)—If the Allies persist in imposing upon Germany demands which will make this country the "wage slave" of its enemies, the Allies must keep Germany in subjection for decades by armed force, against which the Germans would rise at an opportune moment and again plunge the world into war, Professor Hans Delbrück, historian and publicist, declared to the correspondent today in a discussion of the Paris Peace Conference.

Professor Delbrück said:

"The question of what constitutes a peace of justice can best be answered by investigating the last separate demands made, to see whether it is calculated to light the fires of war again at some future day or whether it serves the ideal of an enduring peace. Let me single out some of these questions.

"It is proposed to impose upon Germany a burden which it cannot throw off in a short time, but which would make the country the wage slave of its enemies for decades. This could be carried out only if Germany were to be kept subdued by armed force all this time. But there cannot be any doubt that Germany would rise against such slavery at the first opportunity and the world would again be plunged into war.

Charges Greed for Saarbruecken.

"Another example: France plainly indicates that it intends to take away the German territory of Saarbrücken, with its coal field. Saarbrücken has more than half a million purely German inhabitants. This territory was ceded to France through the first Paris peace of 1814, but only a year later was given back to Germany in the second Paris peace.

"The inhabitants had unanimously, in repeated appeals and petitions, especially in a great memorial, prayed for 'liberation from the French yoke and reunion with the German Fatherland,' and had solemnly vowed to do everything they could to serve this end. This land has belonged to Germany for a thousand years, excepting the very brief temporary periods of French domination.

"The problem of nationality is much clearer and more certain here than in Alsace-Lorraine. Even if the German portions of Alsace-Lorraine are given to France, it can safely be prophesied that a German 'irredenta' will spring up there very soon and threaten the peace of the world.

"This is true to a still greater degree in the case where territory like Saarbrücken, where nothing whatever that is French exists, is claimed by France out of naked greed for power in opposition to the principle of the people's right to self-determination.

Resents Housing Africans.

"A third example: The French did not occupy the territory given them by the armistice with native Frenchmen, but for the greatest part with their colored allies. These negroes are billeted on the citizens. As long as the war lasts we must endure this, terrible as it is for the inhabitants.

"Everything indicates that the French plan a very long occupation, after peace as well, until Germany has paid off the war indemnities. If this should really come to pass, it would not only be a barbarity but also an insult and maltreatment of the German people, which might lead at any moment to an outbreak and a new armed conflict.

"It is clear that the world cannot come to an enduring peace—that is, a peace of justice—by the road which French policy is following today."

ALL OF DUESSELDORF JOINS IN WALKOUT

Novel Protest Against Spartacide Terrorism Ties Up Business in German City.

BERLIN, Feb. 5, (Associated Press.)—The whole city of Düsseldorf has "walked out." Officials, clerks, and other employes in the service of railways, posts, telegraph, telephone, and service lines; bankers, lawyers, physicians, teachers, and other persons engaged in professions have quit work.

The employes on all public service lines are striking in keeping with the threat to the Executive Council of the communistic Government to call a general strike of all the bourgeois classes if their demands are not granted.

Theatres and restaurants are forced to close, as they are without service. Big industrial plants have shut down, as office forces everywhere have joined in the walkout.

This unique protest is the first of its kind to be applied on a big scale as a retaliation against Spartacide terrorism.

WHITE AND HERRON TO PARLEY WITH REDS

Kansas Editor and Socialist Professor Selected as American Delegates to Prinkipo.

PARIS, Feb. 7.—William Allen White of Emporia, Kan., and Professor George Davis Herron have been appointed the American delegates to the Marmora conference with the Russian factions.

Professor George D. Herron is already in sympathy with certain articles of the Bolshevist doctrine. He believes in trial marriages, and is a confessed advocate of the Socialistic State. These views brought him into conflict with the Trustees of Iowa College, where he was teaching applied Christianity in 1900, and with the First Congregational Church of Burlington, Iowa, where he was pastor, and he resigned from each.

Thereafter he openly identified himself with the Socialist movement, at first writing and lecturing on Christian democracy and then substituting the word industrial for Christian.

Professor Herron's first wife was Mary Everhard, and he married her in 1883. Later, while performing the duties of his pastorate at Burlington, he met Carrie Rand, the daughter of E. D. Rand, a local millionaire. Miss Rand's mother endowed a chair of applied Christianity at Grinnell College, Iowa, and Herron filled it. Meanwhile his wife obtained a divorce in Grinnell.

In May, 1901, it is said, he put his theories of trial marriage into practice by taking Miss Rand to wife without the usual vows, either civil or ecclesiastic. The ceremony, such as it was, took place at the New York home of Dr. Charles B. Patterson. There were present two poets, Edwin Markham and Richard Le Gallienne, and the Rev. W. T. Brown of Plymouth Church, Rochester, N. Y., who "announced" that Herron and Miss Rand were husband and wife.

The couple very soon after went to Italy. They continued to reside in the Lake Region and in Geneva, where they took a house called Le Retour, at 26 Chemin des Cottages, until Mrs. Herron died in January, 1914, leaving him $200,000, which he contributed to the Rand School of Social Sciences.

During his subsequent sojourn in Switzerland Herron came into contact with propagandists of the belligerents, both official and unofficial, and a year ago a story was circulated to the effect that he as an unofficial representative of President Wilson had received peace proposals from Professor Quidde of Munich which he had declined. In May, 1918, Professor Quidde denied the entire transaction in the German press.

Herron has written a score of books dealing with theology, Christian democracy, and such subjects as may be connoted by the titles: "Why I am a Socialist," "War and Peace Under Socialism," "Wagner and Parsifal," and "Woodrow Wilson and the World's Peace."

George Davis Herron was born Jan. 21, 1862, at Montezuma, Ind.

William Allen White became a national figure when his paper, The Emporia Daily and Weekly Gazette, printed an editorial article entitled "What Is the Matter with Kansas?" He was born in Emporia, Kan., in 1868, and has been editor of The Gazette since 1895.

In August, 1917, he was sent to France as an observer for the American Red Cross. Previous to his experiences at the front he had written several popular books—"The Court of Boyville," "In Our Town,"—and during the war "God's Puppets," "In the Heart of a Fool," and "The Martial Adventures of Henry and Me."

Mr. White is a member of the National Institute of Arts and Letters, a former member of the Progressive Party National Committee, (1912-16,) and was once Chairman of the Progressive Publicity Committee.

Soldier Tells of Etherization Halted by German Bombs.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMP UPTON, L. I., Feb. 7.—Lieutenant Reginald T. Mitchell of 958 Brooklyn Avenue, Brooklyn, who is here recuperating from shrapnel wounds in his left arm, tells of a strange experience he had in a hospital in Belgium while the German planes were bombing it on the night of Nov. 1.

Late in the afternoon the surgeons began to give him ether so they might operate on his arm, but bombs began to drop before he had become anaesthetized. When the surgeons were ready to give him more ether the bombers made another attack, and the hospital lights were put out. For eleven hours Lieutenant Mitchell lay on the operating table and a dozen attempts were made to etherize him before daylight came and the planes retreated. Lieutenant Mitchell was a member of the 2d Field Artillery, Brooklyn, and when the war started joined the 69th, so he could get to the front quickly. He was commissioned after the Château-Thierry engagement, and was assigned to the 361st Infantry of the 91st Division.

H. W. SHERRILL SENTENCED.

Second Member of Poughkeepsie Firm Must Serve Two Years.

Special to The New York Times.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Feb. 7.—Harold W. Sherrill, a member of the bankrupt brokerage firm of Atwater, Foote & Sherrill, which failed for a million and a quarter nearly one year ago, was tonight sentenced to Sing Sing prison by Supreme Court Justice Seeger. Sherrill had pleaded guilty to third degree forgery three weeks ago, and had been held in the county jail pending his recovery from influenza. His sentence is for a minimum of two years and a maximum of four years and eight months, the maximum statutory sentence for this offense.

Three weeks ago Justice Seeger sentenced Gilbert F. Foote, senior member of the concern, to serve a minimum sentence of two years and six months. In passing sentence on Sherrill, Justice Seeger said he now wished he could have made Foote's sentence more severe as he had become convinced that Foote's machinations were primarily responsible for Sherrill's misdeeds and the financial troubles of the firm.

STUDY MILK TESTIMONY.

Prosecutor Confers with Investigator of the Trade Commission.

Assistant District Attorney John T. Dooling, who is conducting the milk inquiry before Chief City Magistrate McAdoo, yesterday had a conference with Raymond Smith, the Federal Trade Commission investigator, who testified on Thursday relative to evidence obtained by him involving some officials and former officials of the Department of Agriculture.

"We have been going over the testimony thus far produced," said Mr. Dooling, "and checking it up to see what violations of the law are alleged and whether they have become outlawed. If violations occurred here, and are within the statute, they will be prosecuted here."

Mr. Dooling would not say whether he intended to request State officials and former officials mentioned by Smith in his testimony to appear and testify when the hearing is resumed next Monday.

political differences, provided he himself was satisfied with the definition.

Mr. Marshall asserted, as a result of six years' observation from the "obscured" post of Vice President, that the time had come when every one in this country should be an American when the hyphen should be dropped, and declared that he had taken a pledge with himself to stand firmly the rest of his life against politicians going into dark rooms for the purpose of trying to swing hyphenate votes of any alien nationality or against the swinging of any class vote for mere political success.

The occasion of Mr. Marshall's speech was Marshall Night at the Press Club, when he was the guest of honor, and when he was supported by Kin Hubbard of Indianapolis, of Abe Martin fame; Representative Barnhart, Wilbur D. Nesbit, and Surgeon Gen. Ireland, all Hoosiers.

Mr. Marshall appeared in natural Hoosier rôle of humorist during a great deal of his speech, and he smilingly spoke of having been the "tail twice to Wilson's kite" and went on record as wanting no other political preferment. He made frequent allusions to the apparent uselessness of his office as Vice President, remarking that many of the foreign representatives that had come to Washington since the beginning of the war seemed to think that as Vice President he occupied a real office.

Many of these foreign representatives with whom he had talked, he said, had submitted to him their ideas to to self-determination, and territorial claims, as if there was anything he "could do about it." He had been told of the Czechoslovak claims, the Jugoslav claims, and other claims, and the attorney generalship of one proposed new nation even had been offered to him. After hearing the various conflicting claims he was ready to sympathize with the President's tasks abroad.

"I don't know whether there is going to be a new heaven," concluded Mr. Marshall, "but if there is going to be a new earth made on the basis of giving all these claimants what they want, all of Europe, Asia and Africa would not be large enough to satisfy and accommodate them."

DEFENDS OUR MEN IN PARIS.

General Harts Repeats That Crime Stories Are Propaganda.

By WALTER DURANTY.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Feb. 6.—No less an anthority than General Harts, commanding the District of Paris, corroborates the view that hostile propaganda is at work here against the Americans. In a report which will appear tomorrow in The Stars and Stripes, the official mouthpiece of the American Expeditionary Force, General Harts characterizes as "malicious exaggeration" statements printed here to the effect that American soldiers have been responsible for 34 murders, 220 violent attacks, and nearly 500 bloody combats during the month of December in the Department of the Seine. General Harts's report continues:

"The persistent appearance of articles of this character has led to the impression that there is same anti-American propaganda at work in Paris, which some have ascribed to German sources. The real figures about crime reflect great credit on the 20,000 men of the American Expeditionary Force stationed in Paris and the 2,000,000 American soldiers in France, great numbers of whom visit Paris—more than 3,000 passing through the city daily."

According to reports of the Prefecture of Police, cases of crime of all sorts wherein Americans were concerned are as follows: Shooting affrays from June 24 to Dec. 18 of last year, 6. During December, assault and battery, 2; housebreaking, 3; disorderly conduct, 2. In January, attempted murder, 3; manslaughter, 1; assault and battery, 13; robbery, 4; auto thefts, 7.

General Harts adds:

"Careful search has been made of the records of this headquarters, and the facts disclosed reveal no unusual or undue number of shooting affrays."

Not so today, owing to the war.

As a result of our government's recommendation that the value of beans as a nutrient be more generally recognized, they have taken a prominent place among the mighty foodstuffs of creation.

Bulk for bulk they are more nourishing than meat and are a good meat substitute, in that they contain protein and produce fuel in the human body.

LONDON STRIKERS TO RESUME WORK

Hitch in Railway Settlement Is Overcome After a Long Conference.

ELECTRICAL WORKERS YIELD

Warrants Are Issued for the Arrest of Leaders of Belfast Tieup.

LONDON, Saturday, Feb. 8.—The railway strike was finally settled following a renewed disagreement, after a prolonged conference early this morning.

At the Board of Trade it was officially announced that the tube and district services would be resumed as soon as possible.

LONDON, Feb. 7.—The Electrical Trades Union this evening ordered an immediate resumption of work by its members. ending action by its Executive Council on the question of the change in the attitude of the Government with regard to the strike.

An official statement issued by the union reads:

"Owing to an extraordinary meeting of the Executive Council having been convened for Sunday to consider national action to secure a forty-hour week, and, further, owing to the extraordinary change in the attitude of the Government in first refusing to intervene and then intervening to safeguard capitalist interests by suspending the civil rights of trade union members, we order immediately a resumption of work pending national action."

The Westminster Gazette was unable to print its early editions today because its electricians had struck.

The management of the tubes and the London District Railway announced this afternoon that their employes had not returned to work and that no trains would be run today. This announcement come as a distinct disappointment to thousands of Londoners, who, after their trials in getting to and from work during the last four days, had expected from earlier reports a return to normal conditions before evening.

No official reason was given for the men's failure to return to work, but some of the employes who were willing to talk said that they were not satisfied with the agreement made by their representatives with the Board of Trade and would not go back to work, "today at any rate," and that they would not recognize the settlement.

The situation in the southwestern suburbs of London was relieved greatly by the return to work of the motormen on the Southwestern Railway electric system. There was also a full service on the electric lines of the Brighton railway.

BELFAST, Feb. 7.—Warrants were issued today for the arrest of the leaders of the strikers in Belfast. The warrants charge conspiracy to prejudice and injure public safety.

FOREIGNERS SUSPECTED OF INCITING STRIKES

London Papers See Revolutionary Influences at Work Among British Labor.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 6.—The Daily Chronicle prints a seriously worded editorial telling the public that it is in the presence of a direct assault on the order and stability of society, inspired by men whose real aim is anarchy and revolution.

"Anarchists behind the strikes, who had done all that in them lay to hinder the country from winning the war," The Chronicle says, "have seized the golden opportunity of the Peace Conference to try to render of no effect the sacrifices and sufferings and victory of the nation."

The Times says that every worker and every citizen must ask himself, among other questions, if he wants what happened in Petrograd to be re-enacted in London; if he is prepared to help those whose avowed aim is to install Bolshevism in Great Britain, or will he back the Government in taking vigorous action to fend off that catastrophe.

The Westminster Gazette tonight, in urging the Government to formulate a strong, definite labor policy, analyzes the situation of British labor. The Gazette says:

"It is suffering for the moment from unrest, which is partly a reaction from the long strain, and partly genuine apprehension of what is to come. It sees that millions of men have been demobilized from the army, that immense numbers of women workers have somehow to be provided for, and it fears that there will be unemployment on a large scale, and a new and aggravated form of competition which may take from the worker all he gained in wages and conditions during the war. It looks to the Government for guidance and, getting no clear satisfaction, begins to listen to other counselors."

1 etaoin shrdlu cmfwyp shrd aitonul

Consequently, The Gazette asserts, labor expects the Government, which picked industry to pieces for the war, to put it together again for peace.

In The Pall Mall Gazette J. T. Brownlie, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Amalgamated Society of Engineers, the powerful union which has just repudiated the Clyde, Belfast, and London engineers strikes, says:

"It would have a salutary and calming effect on the workers if the Prime Minister would make an announcement as to the intentions of the Peace Conference in regard to industrial matters. A universal code of labor laws, taking in housing, wages, and general conditions of labor, should form an integral part of the League of Nations. Industrial peace is quite as necessary to the general welfare as military peace."

Meanwhile it is fully recognized that outside of the purely economic and social causes of unrest, there are deep political influences at work. The afternoon newspapers definitely accuse German agents of being at work in all the Entente countries, and warn the public that as Bronstein masqueraded as a Russian, calling himself Trotsky, and Sobelsohn pretended to the Ukrainians that he was Rakovsky, so foreign agitators were likely to parade under English surnames for the sake of their campaign here.

This announcement has revived memories that at the recent election some extremist candidates boasted that if they were defeated at the polls they would carry on by other means their war against the established peace and order of the country.

NORTH HUNGARY ON STRIKE.

General Shutdown as Protest Against Action of Czechs.

AMSTERDAM, Feb. 7.—A great general strike which embraces the whole northwest of Hungary started Monday at Konorn, according to advices from Budapest. All business was suspended and hotels and cafés closed.

On Thursday the strike spread throughout upper Hungary, embracing the merchants, public officials, and the railway postal, municipal, and law employes, who declare their determination to continue the strike until the Czechs alter their behavior.

The Czech commanders threatened the postal strikers with death, but without being able to secure the men's return to work.

23-YEAR-OLD SUIT ENDS.

Estate of P. J. McArdle Finally Released to Heirs.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 7.—After litigation extending over a period of twenty-three years, the case of George L. Courtney of New York City against the estate of the late P. J. McArdle, an Albany junk dealer, was settled in the County Court here today when a discontinuance order was entered. The terms of the settlement reached by the attorneys for the parties concerned were not made public. The estate is estimated to be worth $500,000. A daughter of the late junk dealer recently petitioned the Surrogate of Albany County to be allowed to draw upon the estate, claiming that she was in want of funds to care for and educate her children. This petition was denied.

The case originated in 1896 to determine whether Courtney was a partner of McArdle and should have a share of the receipts. The Court of Appeals finally decided that a partnership existed for five years, and since then the question of what amount of the profits was due Courtney has been a subject of litigation.

P. J. McArdle died in 1915, but because of the litigation the heirs never have been able to get a share of the estate. The estate greatly increased in value because of the war, McArdle having possessed a vast amout of metals in 1914 which he is said to have disposed of at a great profit to munition manufacturers.

The heirs include three sons, Charles of Albany and Frank and George of New York City, all engaged in the waste business; two daughters, Mrs. Michael Blake of New York, who recently attempted to draw upon the estate, and Miss Alicia of New York, and also Mrs. Stephen McArdle, also of New York, a widow of a son of P. J. McArdle.

EMPLOYERS OFFER TERMS TO JOINERS

Appoint Committee to Conciliate and Urge Men on Strike to Resume Work.

UNION ASKS WRITTEN TERMS

Officers Say Any Proposal Will Be Received—General Strike or Lockout Considered Improbable.

Steps which may lead to a settlement of the strike against the Building Trades Employers' Association by the members of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners were taken yesterday by Ronald P. Taylor, President of the Employers' Association. He said that a committee had been appointed to negotiate with the carpenters' union immediately, provided the strikers would return to work.

William J. Bowen, President of the Bricklayers', Masons', and Plasterers' Union, repeated his declaration that a general strike in the allied building trades would be called at noon today if the Building Trades Employers' Association put its threat of a lockout into effect. When Mr. Taylor's words were repeated to William L. Hutcheson, President of the United Brotherhood, he said that if Mr. Taylor would make the statement in writing, a settlement might be reached.

"But I will give fair warning," he said, "that if the association carries out its threat of a lockout against the hoisting engineers, bricklayers, and plasterers, a general strike of workers in all trades will follow wherever the association is interested."

At the conference held on Monday with members of the association, Mr. Hutcheson added, there was no talk of settlement. The association attempted, he said, to convince William J. Bowen that the carpenters were unjust in their demands for $6.50 a day. This meeting failed to impress the leader of the allied trades, said Mr. Hutcheson, and the promise of the general strike followed.

This strike, it was said yesterday, would not affect 2,000,000 men, as previously announced, but would include at least several hundred thousand workmen throughout the country. Mr. Taylor did not consider seriously the threat of a sympathetic strike because, he said, comparatively few workers were engaged on building projects at the present time. The building industry had suffered during the war, he asserted, and was now at its lowest point.

"I doubt whether there are more than 400 or 500 bricklayers actively employed here," he said, "and there is a smaller number of hoisting engineers. The association stands ready to confer with the carpenters' union as soon as they call off the strike. We have appointed a committee which would meet them within two hours after such action on their part. But the association will not discuss any question with strikers. If we established this precedent it would be a weapon the union could use again."

Benjamin Schlesinger, President of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, the members of which are on strike, declared last night that he would announce today the names of twenty members of the Dress and Waist Manufacturers' Association who had settled with the union. He said that the same settlements which were made with more than 400 independent manufacturers would be put into effect with the association members. They would grant the forty-four-hour week, 15 per cent increase in wages, and right to review cases of dismissal, he announced, and approximately 2,000 more workers would return to work on Monday morning.

BLAME PASSAIC WORKERS.

Mill Owners Say Shutdown Was Forced by Employes.

PASSAIC, N. J., Feb. 7.—The Industrial Council of Passaic made its first statement tonight concerning the strike of nearly 10,000 operatives in the woolen and worsted mills of this city. It announced that the Botany Worsted Mills, the Forstmann & Huffman Company, the Garfield Worsted Mills, the Gera Mills and the New Jersey Industrial Spinning Company have shut down their plants entirely until further notice.

The statement said that the greater part of the operatives left their work before presenting any demands, and in spite of the fact that the mills had already voluntarily agreed to grant them a basic forty-eight-hour week, with time and a half for overtime, which for a week of fifty-five hours is equivalent to an increase of about 7 per cent. in wages. Such arbitrary abandonment of work by the operatives, the statement said, was disastrous. Several of the mills suffered great loss in their finishing departments, in goods left in mid-process in the machines, thus entailing great deterioration in the fabrics.

In order to protect themselves against further similar losses the mills were compelled to shut down, concludes the statement, adding that the workers have totally ignored present conditions in the woolen industry, which, like all other industries, is now passing through a period of radical readjustment from a war to a peace basis.

Two alleged I. W. W. agitators were escorted from this city tonight by Captain of Detectives Turner, after they were reported to have interrupted a meeting of woolen and worsted workers. The majority of these workers are unorganized, and I. W. W. agitators have been seeking to introduce them to the radical organization.

Coal Roads Cut Expenses.

READING, Penn., Feb. 7.—Orders were issued today to the heads of departments of the various railroads entering this city to curtail expenses all over this section, especially in the anthracite coal region. The cutting down of the normal number of loaded coal cars handled in a day from 1,400 to half that figure greatly reduces the volume of work for railroad crews and car shops. This curtailment is due to the suspension of many mines.

MAJOR PAUL DALY IS CITED FOR BRAVERY

New Yorker Wins War Cross for Heroism Displayed in Fighting Near Soissons.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3.—A new list of American soldiers who have received the Distinguished Service War Cross for extraordinary heroism in action was made public today by the War Department. Among the latest men to be so honored by General Pershing are:

Lieutenant J. K. Morrison of Statesville, N. C.; Sergeant C. C. Young of Millbrook, Mich.; Lieutenant T. W. Saul of Portland, Ore.; Lieutenant John Gleason of River Forrest, Ill.; Captain Malcom Rice of Hagerhill, Ky.; Sergeant J. R. Mansfield of Florence, Mass.; Private J. C. Olson of Valparaiso, Neb.; Lieutenant A. R. Cole of Bridgton, Me.; Major H. E. Roan of Danville, Ill.; Captain W. A. Brophy of Hertersville, Penn.; Lieutenant A. N. Bergstein of Pottsville, Penn.; Private P. W. Wilt of Wanton, Md., and Private S. F. Gilliland of Boston, Va.

The list also includes several men from this city and nearby places whose home addresses and the specific acts for which they have been cited appear below:

Maj. Paul Daly, 18th Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action near Soissons, between July 19 and 22. Although wounded, he took command of the first battalion of his regiment after the previous battalion commanders had been wounded, displaying highest courage in advancing and holding the objective of his battalion. Three days later he was again wounded, but remained with his command, until he was ordered to the rear by his regimental commander. Home address, Daniel Daly, Nassau Street, New York City, N. Y.

Corp. Albert J. Zimborski, deceased, Co. C, 345th Battalion, Tank Corps. For extraordinary heroism in action near Bois de Montrebeau, Oct. 4. While running his tank into a woods to rout a machine-gun nest his tank was hit and set on fire. He fought on until compelled to leave because of the excessive heat. While he and his gunner were leaving the tank they were both wounded, and when making an advance on a machine gun he received further wounds, which caused his death. Next of kin, Mrs. Albert J. Zimborski, wife, 2 Foye Place, Jersey City, N. J.

Pvt. Charles D. Merritt, Co. C, 345th Battalion, Tank Corps. For extraordinary heroism in action near Cheppy, on Sept. 26. While he was directing a column of tanks through a mine field, assisted by another soldier, his companion was wounded, but Pvt. Merritt continued with his work until all tanks had safely passed through. Returning, he assisted his wounded comrade to safety, after which he carried messages through an intense bombardment of artillery and machine guns. Home address, Mrs. Susie Merritt, mother, 246 Grant Avenue, Jersey City, N. J.

Corp. John J. Poillon, Co. C, 311th Machine Gun Battalion. For extraordinary heroism in action near Montfaucon on Sept. 29. Although engaged as company clerk, and when the platoon to which he was attached was required to advance over a heavily shelled territory, he volunteered and carried messages from his company commander to the platoon, the journey being made under most hazardous conditions and under severest shell fire. Home address, Mrs. Henrietta Poillon, mother, 465 West 157th Street, New York City, N. Y.

Pvt. Edwin S. Mills, Co. D, 312th Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action near Grandpré on Oct. 23. Private Mills, while acting as a runner, volunteered and carried messages through several heavy barrages and under direct enemy fire, always accomplishing his mission. Home address, Mrs. Catherine Mills, mother, 116 Collins Avenue, Collingswood, N. J.

AGAINST ALL SUBMARINES.

Britain Said to Favor Total Prohibition of Their Use.

LONDON, Feb. 7, (via Montreal.)—In reference to the suggestion of the abolition of submarines which has been before the Paris Conference, Reuter's learns on high authority that the British Admiralty strongly favors the total prohibition of submarine building and of the use of the submarine in warfare.

This naturally would be subject to a general international agreement and to rigid guarantees and safeguards.

BOY HALTS NEARING TRIAL.

Upsets Court Decorum by Unceremoniously Mounting the Bench.

During the trial of Scott Nearing in the Federal Court yesterday for violating the Espionage act a small boy employed by a news association broke up the decorum of the courtroom for a few moments and escaped without censure from Judge Julius M. Mayer, who said that the incident was a good joke. The boy, who had just been hired, was told to go up to the Federal Building and get a reporter's "copy."

Keen on making a good record, the boy in some way got by the attendant at the door and got inside the railing where counsel and the defendant sit. At that moment Seymour Stedman, counsel for Nearing, was addressing the jury. He was unceremoniously brushed aside by the boy, who ascended the bench, seized the arm of Judge Mayer, and in a voice audible over the courtroom said: "Hurry up with that copy. The boss is sore. They're waiting for it down at the office."

Court attendents by that time seized the small boy and carried him back into the courtroom. Judge Mayer and the jurors laughed heartily at the incident. "That's a bright boy," Judge Mayer said. "He was told to get something, and he went straight to headquarters."

The day was consumed yesterday by the opening arguments of counsel in the Nearing case. The trial will continue today.

END STRIKE TODAY, ORDER IN SEATTLE

work at once, and the reopening of one union barber's shop.

The Post-Intelligencer, a morning newspaper, announced tonight that it would publish a four-page paper without advertisements, mainly to "quiet the many disturbing rumors that have been causing unnecessary worry to the law-abiding citizens of this city." It was announced that the paper would contain some Associated Press news, the strike situation, and other local news. The paper is to be distributed free of charge.

Operations of the union "soup kitchens," by which means the strikers have endeavored to feed their own members and those dependent upon restaurants, showed a noticeable falling off in patronage today. This was due to the fact that the strikers experienced difficulty in obtaining food supplies for their own places and to a rise in price of meats to the strikers themselves, which placed them on a par with other persons patronizing the places.

In the State Legislature at Olympia today it was announced a bill was in preparation appropriating $100,000 from the military fund for the use of the Government in suppressing strikes and maintaining order during labor troubles.

From Portland, Ore., came word of an exodus from Seattle to Porland hotels of persons who in many cases said they had left Seattle to escape the discomforts and possible dangers of the general strike. San Francisco advices report that the Pacific Coast Steamship Company, operating a line of coastwise passenger and freight boats, had abandoned Seattle as a port of call until the strike is ended. Other companies, shipping men said, were expected to follow this lead.

Major E. H. Keene of the office of the Adjutant General in Washington stated today that the thirteen companies of the Washington State Infantry and four companies of independent State troops had been ordered to drill tonight, to be ready for any call.

The regular army has taken every precaution to prevent interruption of communication that might interfere with troop operations, and wireless stations have been erected on the roof of the Capital Building at Olympia and on grounds across from the Tacoma Armory. These stations will be in communication with the Government-controlled wireless station at Seattle.

Brig. Gen. John L. Hayden, when asked how many troops he had in his command, replied: "We have enough."

General Hayden has established headquarters in the Post Office Building. Some of his men are quartered at Fort Lawton, near here, while others are at the downtown armory.

Tacoma Cars to Run Today.

TACOMA, Feb. 7.—A declaration by officials of the Street Car Men's Union that street car service would be resumed in Tacoma tomorrow morning was the predominant feature of the general strike situation here tonight.

Troops have been stationed at the telephone and telegraph offices and at other points connected with Government operations.

The appearance of the News-Tribune on the streets today was the cause for general commotion among strikers. An order was immediately issued that any striker or any member of organized labor buying The Tribune, which was compelled to suspend yesterday on account of the strike, would be fined $10. Threats from striking newsboys who congregated in groups outside the crowd made it necessary to increase the protection of the sellers. A detachment of soldiers with sidearms arrived soon afterward and the crowd dispersed.

OLE HANSON A MAN OF FORCE.

Seattle Mayor Direct and Democratic in His Methods.

Many persons in the East are not aware that Mayor Ole Hanson was a radical before he was elected Mayor of Seattle by the Business Men's party in that city. Hanson, who always referred to himself as the friend of the "under dog," changed his politics as a result of a snub which the radical elements gave him when he wanted to be a candidate for some office on their ticket. He went before them on several occasions and pleaded for their support, but for some reason they rejected him.

When the Mayoralty election came around he had modified his views to such an extent that he found favor with the Business Men's party, and he was nominated for the office of Chief Executive of the city. He made a picturesque campaign.

Mayor Hanson went to Washington not long ago to get permission from the Capital Issues Committee for the City of Seattle to raise money to extend its electric light plant. His first plea to the committee met with a rebuff, and he decided to take it up with President Wilson. A friend arranged an interview with the President, during which Mayor Hanson talked so fast that he became overheated.

"You don't mind if I take off my coat, Wilson?" he asked the President. Mr. Wilson laughingly told him to go ahead.

"You know, Wilson," he went on to say familiarly, while his friend, who was present, gasped at his audacity, "this little Capital Issues Committee is only about so high."

President Wilson, according to the accounts, was unable to speak for a moment for laughing.

The next day Mayor Hanson appeared before the Capital Issues Committee and made his plea anew. He was being bowed out of the room when Bernard Baruch entered. Mayor Hanson had taken off his coat and waistcoat while he was talking to the members.

Mr. Baruch had heard from the President's lips of the interview of the day before. When he learned the identity of the perspiring man, Mr. Baruch said:

"Stay right here, Mr. Hanson, I wish to speak on the matter in which you are interested."

LAYS STRIKE TO ALIENS.

Congressman Johnson Demands Deportations from Seattle.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—Representative Royal Johnston of Washington, discussing the Seattle strike today, said that most of those arrested were aliens and bore Russian names. He said that most of those making the trouble were prominent in the I. W. W. movement, and this was a good argument why the immigration laws should be suspended for four years.

"These great strikes were preceded by a series of riots on Sunday, and after one of the riots the authorities in Seattle arrested thirteen of the leaders," said Mr. Johnson, "took them to the police station and took their names. There was a great array of Slovinskys and Ivan Kerenskys and names of that sort. Out of the thirteen there were two Americans, of whom one said he wished he was not an American. The other eleven were aliens, and more than half of the eleven were Russians.

"I am informed that the Commissioner of Immigration at Seattle stated that he would take no steps toward the deportation of these men. My suggestion is this, without knowing much about the details of those strikes, which began only last Thursday, that if our Government officials will proceed under the Federal laws which we have enacted here in Congress, and deport those aliens who come here undertaking to tell how to run our Government and our affairs, we will have less trouble from these strikes.

"I was astonished to read this list of names and what they had to say about the United States, and to learn that no steps were proposed to be taken to deport them. People can think of that as they are suffering from strikes which paralyze every activity in two great cities of the Pacific Northwest.

"I have often wondered why it is that so many people in the United States insist that these foreigners, who come here and preach, not only from pulpits but from soapboxes, telling us how to run our Government on an international plan, should be allowed to remain here, whereas if any one of us should go to Russia, Japan, or any other country and undertake to tell them how to run and operate their affairs we would find there would be very short shrift for us. It is time for the United States to get busy and do a little bit on its own account for its own people."

STRIKE SPREADS ON COAST.

8,000 Out in San Francisco Bay Region—17,000 May Quit.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Feb. 7.—Approximately 8,000 shipyard and other mechanics in the San Francisco Bay region were idle today. If the condition is continued, all of the East Bay shipyards and the contract shops in the whole bay region will be forced to close and more than 17,000 men will be out.

The biggest unit of workers involved, the Oakland boilermakers, numbering 5,000, took a holiday today to vote on the question of striking next Monday for $1 an hour wage.

In San Francisco more than 2,000 machinists and 1,000 boilermakers in the outside shops were on strike because of differences with their employers over the latest wage award of the Federal Shipbuilding Labor Adjustment Board.

Hurley May Act on Strike.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7. — Shipping Board officials indicated today that absolutely no change in the policy of refusing to arbitrate the controversy with shipyard strikers at Seattle would be made. It was said, however, that the progress of the general strike there was being closely watched and that Chairman Hurley of the Shipping Board, who will arrive in New York on Monday, had been fully informed of the situation and the steps taken.

I. W. W. CALLS MEN OUT OF MONTANA MINES

Will Attempt General Strike in Copper Region—Moyer Denounces It.

BUTTE, Mont., Feb. 7.—I. W. W. members at a meeting here today voted to go on strike in protest against the wage reduction in the copper mines. It was said that an attempt would be made to make the strike general here.

The entire day shift of the Elm Orlu mine, owned by ex-Senator Clark, numbering about 250 men, walked out this morning.

These men marched to Finn Hall, where mass meetings were called by the I. W. W.

The I. W. W. men are demanding a six-hour day and $6 a day wage scale. The wage scale put into effect today is for $4.75. It is a reduction of $1 a day from the recent scale, and is based on the contract entered into several years ago with the Western Federation of Miners.

DENVER, Col., Feb. 7.—"The men who quit work at the El Morlu mine in Butte, Mon., today are not members of a bona fide union affiliated with the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, but, instead, are members of the I. W. W., which has attempted to create trouble in that district twice during the last two years," said Charles H. Moyer, President of the International Union, today. "The announced reduction in wages paid mineral miners in the copper districts of the country shows the fairness of the copper producers toward the miners, in that they will continue production rather than throw thousands of miners out of employment at this time.

"As a result of the maximum production of the copper mines of the country during the war period, the sudden termination of the war found the producers with approximately a billion pounds of copper on hand for which there was no market. The copper and mineral mine workers are employed under a sliding wage scale and the reduction announced yesterday is merely the natural result of this overstock of copper."

JEROME, Ariz., Feb. 7.—Mining companies of this section tonight rescinded an order for a cut in copper miners' wages of 75 cents a day. The reduction was to have gone into effect tomorrow, but final decision has been withheld until next week, when a smaller cut may be made.

SIX ARRESTS AT LAWRENCE.

Police Search for Those Responsible for Fatal Shooting.

LAWRENCE, Mass., Feb. 7.—Five men and a girl were arrested for minor disturbances in connection with picketing about the time the mill gates opened today. Intimidation was the charge against them. From the windows of houses near the mills bottles were hurled into the streets, and in one instance a stone was aimed at a policeman.

A systematic search of the district in which Biaggio Ventino, a striker, was shot early today was begun by the police at daybreak. The shooting was the first fatality of the strike.

One shot was fired during the noon hour today while two policemen were arresting Sheldron Massond, a strike sympathizer, charged with annoying operatives.

WOONSOCKET, R. I., Feb. 7.—The mills of the Falls Yarn Company, Woonsocket Spinning Company, Alsace Worsted Company, and Guerin Spinning Company were closed today after some of the operatives had gone on a strike.

PAWTUCKET, R. I., Feb. 7.—The Hamlet Textile Company closed its mill today for the remainder of the week and announced that on Monday it would start on a schedule of forty-eight hours a week.

4,000 SHIPWORKERS OUT.

Strike at Bristol Over a Technical Union Rule.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., Feb. 7.—Dispute over whether a foreman should be a member of a labor union caused a strike today at the Merchants Shipbuilding Corporation at Bristol, involving about 4,000 metal workers. An appeal has been made to the War Labor Board at Washington. Men included in the strike are boilermakers, forces in the angle and plate shops, iron workers on the ships, riveters and their helpers.

The company announced that it has been customary for a member of a union upon being promoted to foreman to withdraw from all union activities.

"The corporation," the statement said, "emphatically disclaims any objection to a man holding membership in a union; but it does desire to point out the impossibility of a foreman, who is part of the management of the corporation, properly representing its interest when so closely identified with the men who are subject to his orders."

According to A. A. Rogers, Indianapolis, organizer of the Association of Boilermakers, Iron Shipbuilders, and Shipbuilders and Helpers, the action of the men hinges on the open and closed shop question.

"By dropping out of the unions the foremen would lose all of the sick and death benefits and other features to which membership entitles them," he said.

MAYOR HYLAN JIBES AT CITIZENS UNION

"The Biggest Bunch of Fakirs in Town," He Tells Wallstein at Meeting.

BANGS GAVEL AT RETORT

Mayor Hylan and Leonard M. Wallstein, Commissioner of Accounts in the Mitchel administration, and at present legal representative of the Citizens' Union, had a controversy at yesterday's meeting of the Board of Estimate. It was the last meeting of the board the Mayor will attend before going on a three weeks' vacation to Palm Beach. The matter of the proposed authorization of the appropriation of $4,500,000 of corporate stock for subway work was under consideration. In the discussion Mr. Wallstein mentioned the name of Acting Chairman Travis H. Whitney of the Public Service Commission, and the Mayor referred to him as "a pupil of the Citizens' Union."

"Yes," retorted Mr. Wallstein, "he learned something about city government there which you don't know."

"He will learn something more before he gets out of the Public Service Commission," responded the Mayor.

Controller Craig entered the fray and Mr. Wallstein accused him of always "looking for a chance to rap someone."

"The Controller ought to be congratulated for showing up things concealed by the last administration and the Public Service Commission," broke in the Mayor.

"That's a characteristic statement which I don't think all the members of your board will agree with," said Mr. Wallstein.

"Certainly I don't think Governor Smith, who had to live eight months with this board, would agree with. He is a fair-minded man—"

"I'll bet you didn't support him in the last election," interrupted the Mayor.

"The Citizen's Union didn't support anyone," Mr. Wallstein replied.

"That's the biggest bunch of fakers in town," said the Mayor.

"With the single exception of one individual," retorted the former Commissioner of Accounts, looking hard at the Mayor.

The Mayor brought down his gavel with a bang and ordered Mr. Wallstein to sit down. Mr. Wallstein repeated his remark and then sat down.

Craig and Connolly Dispute.

The issue of the stock was authorized and then Controller Craig and Maurice Connolly, Borough President of Queens, got into a dispute over a proposal of the Controller to return $100,000 in corporate stock to a subway contractor by way of "retained percentages," which, it was explained, meant that the contractor was allowed certain sums which had been deposited as a guarantee. In the discussion the Controller accused President Connolly of holding up subway construction.

"There's a lot in what Mr. Wallstein says about the unfairness of your arguments," said Mr. Connolly, "and I want to make it clear that your discussion was between you and Mr. Wallstein and not between the board and him. As a matter of fact, this is an attempt by the contractors to finance themselves at the city's expense instead of their own. Your arguments have become almost nauseating to every one I've discussed them with. This matter is like giving a bonus to the big contractors. The little ones don't come in and ask, because they know it's wrong. I never understood how the others get it."

Mr. Connolly added that the Corporation Counsel had told him that what he called a "similar case" was illegal. The Controller replied that the Corporation Counsel had approved all the matters and said he construed the Queens Borough President's remarks as charging that the Controller was doing something illegal.

"You're misquoting, as usual," remarked Mr. Connolly. "I didn't say you were doing anything illegal."

As in the previous case, the item was approved, although President Connolly and President Riegelmann of Brooklyn voted in the negative.

Calls Union Inconsistent.

In the course of further argument the Controller accused the Citizens Union of being inconsistent, in that it opposed the appropriation for the Queens Boulevard some time ago.

"When you see Whitney of the Public Service Commission and the Citizens Union opposing anything, you can bank on it that the people would be benefited by what they oppose," commented the Mayor.

Later on the Controller referred to his previous charge that the Public Service Commission had "covered up $10,500,000 by methodical concealment of subway construction costs."

"Others are very clever at camouflage," Commissioner Wallstein retorted.

A little later the report of the Committee on Salaries and Grades, favoring a report of the Aldermanic committee that employes of the Street Cleaning Department should not be made to work seven days a week, was taken up. The Mayor told Alderman Farley, introducer of the resolution, that the employes of the department would receive no more increases in salary.

"If some of you people would mind your own business and let employes alone we would not have so much trouble," said the Mayor.

A man named Fitzgerald, who said he was an acting foreman in Brooklyn, announced that he appeared for the street sweepers. He said he had obtained a leave of absence for two days without pay to appear in behalf of the sweepers.

"What reason did you give for the absence?" asked the Mayor.

"Important business," replied Fitzgerald.

"Well," said the Mayor, "I'll see to it that there is more important business than this before you get another leave. I'm going to see that the Commissioner keeps you working from now on and you'll cease your agitation."

Alderman Farley tried to speak further, but the Mayor told him he had said enough and ordered him to take his seat. He also ordered the policeman on duty to see that his mandate was obeyed. The resolution was referred to the Committee of the Whole.

What the Frenchman Said to the Germans.

MAY PASS TAX BILL BY MONDAY NIGHT

Prompt Senate Action Promised if House Expedites Today's Motion by Kitchin.

MAY RAISE $6,077,200,000

SEMI-LUXURY TAX IN DOUBT

Kitchin Still Plans a Joint Resolution to Eliminate This Feature Later.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—Action on the War Revenue bill, which it is estimated officially will result in the raising of $6,077,200,000 in taxes in the fiscal year ending June 30, will probably be moved in the House tomorrow by Representative Claude Kitchin, Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, and if approval is given before adjournment, the proposed legislation will be placed before the Senate on Monday. It is predicted by Senator Simmons, Chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, that favorable action in that body can be obtained by Monday night, if this program is carried out.

Steps were taken today to begin the distribution of forms on which tax statements will be made out, as soon as possible after both legislative branches of the Government have approved the bill. The measure will not actually become law until the signature of President Wilson is attached, and it is now certain that no effort will be made to get it before the President before his return from France. As it seems assured that he will sign the bill, the machinery of the Treasury Department will be put into operation in anticipation of such action on his part.

The contents of the voluminous document were studied carefully today by Senators and Representatives, but there was little comment. It is expected that Representative Kitchin will make an extended statement in moving for action on the bill. It was the general belief, joined in by Mr. Kitchin, that it would pass the House after a few hours' debate without alterations which would make necessary its return to conference. Senator Simmons believes the Senate will follow a similar course when the bill is presented to that body.

There is a possibility that the so-called semi-luxury taxes, enumerated in Section 904 of the bill, as agreed upon by the conferees, will be eliminated from the bill by the adoption of a joint resolution which Representative Kitchin may himself introduce.

The taxes in this section (904) on articles such as neckties, shirts, and hats costing more than a certain specified price were the subject of much debate during the meetings of the conferees, but no agreement could be reached to strike them out. In order to facilitate the adoption of a conference report on the more important features of the bill this section was passed over and remained in force.

May Repeal Semi-Luxury Tax.

Now report has it that Mr. Kitchin is ready to support a joint resolution for the repeal of the semi-luxury tax section if guarantees are given him that no steps will be taken in the Senate or House to bring about the repeal of the present zone system and rates of taxation on second-class mail matter. At the conference on the Revenue bill the Senate conferees attempted to obtain approval of Mr. Kitchin and his followers to modify the law as to second-class mail matter, but failed. It has been reported that a movement was on foot to accomplish the same purpose by action on the floor of the Senate.

Whether an agreement can now be obtained to abandon efforts to change second-class postal rates in return for the repeal of the semi-luxury tax section is still in doubt. No definite steps will be taken to this end, it is understood, until after the Revenue bill, with Section 904 incorporated in it, is approved by the Senate and the House.

Section 904, as incorporated in the conference report, levies a tax on twenty classes of semi-luxuries. The compromise now talked of would not affect taxes on other so-called luxuries included in other sections of the excise tax title.

Increase of $48,000,000 in Revenue.

The estimate of $6,077,200,000 as the amount of revenue which will be raised during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1919, was made by experts of the Ways and Means Committee of the House. That total is approximately $48,000,000 more than the bill as passed by the Senate and sent to the conference for adjustment would have raised. This revenue, $6,077,200,000, represents the taxes raised during the portion of the fiscal year ending June 30, 1919, to which the present revenue law, (the law of 1917,) is applicable, and the taxes to be paid during the portion of the fiscal year to which the new revenue bill applies.

Another estimate made by the experts of the Ways and Means Committee of the House is that the 1918 Revenue Act as agreed to in conference would raise $5,788,200,000, if its provisions alone were extended over a given twelve months' period. The fact that this total is lower than the $6,077,200,000 is due partly to the fact that the revenue from beverages in any stated period of twelve months after July 1, 1919, because of the coming of prohibition, will be reduced to a negligible amount.

The official statement as given today by the Ways and Means Committee stated that under the combined operation of the 1916 revenue law and the 1917 law, a total of $3,672,847,000 had been collected in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1918. This total was lower by $258,816 than an estimate of the taxes collected in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1918, made on Sept. 5 last by the House Ways and Means Committee.

Complete official tables showing the revenue estimated as likely to be raised by the bill as reported from conference were today made public by the House Ways and Means Committee. The estimated revenue receipts under the existing law and the Revenue act of 1918, as agreed to by the conference committee for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1919, and under the Revenue act of 1918, as agreed to by the conference committee for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1920, were given out as follows:

PROTEST AGAINST WAR TAX.

Manufacturers Say Pending Bill Will Bankrupt Industry.

Stephen C. Mason, President of the National Association of Manufacturers, issued a vigorous protest yesterday against the pending Revenue bill. In Mr. Mason's opinion, "the adoption and enforcement of the pending Revenue measure will intensify and make more general the present condition of industrial stagnation. It will contribute," he said, "toward the longer duration of the existing period of business uncertainty and unemployment, and most seriously hamper desirable rapidity in the readjustment and expansion of our industries.

"The underlying principles of the proposed war and excess profits tax seems to be that in order to penalize the comparatively few 'big business' concerns, and people of extra large incomes, the framers of the bill are willing to jeopardize the existence and continued operation of those comparatively small manufacturing institutions which are likely to be made bankrupt and permanently put out of business under its enforcement.

"The injurious effects of the pending legislation could be avoided if the Government would undertake to meet its fiscal requirements through the issuance of bonds, and require each manufacturer and individual to purchase bonds equal in amount to war profits and excess profits taxes that would be assessed upon them under the terms of this bill.

"Wage earners of the country have just as vital an interest in the far-reaching effects of the pending legislation as the owners and managers of our industrial enterprises, because, in my opinion, it will result in serious impairment and immediate reduction of the ability of employers throughout the country to pay wages in accord with present standards of living."

DISCUSS STATE INCOME TAX

Proposed to Find Revenue and Relieve Real Estate Burdens.

At a meeting of the Committee on Taxation and Retrenchment of the Governor's Reconstruction Commission yesterday afternoon, a new State income tax bill was discussed by the members and Henry Ives Cobb, representing the Merchants Association; Professor Henry C. Emery of Yale, and Clarence Kelsey of the Title Guarantee and Trust Company. The bill has been drawn by the Advisory Committee on Real Estate, and will be proposed to the Legislature by Walter Lindner of the Title Guarantee and Trust Company. In outlining its features, Mr. Lindner said that it was intended to limit the tax on real estate and to give a system of classified income taxation.

"While all figures are tentative," said Mr. Lindner, "the present scheme is to tax all incomes in excess of $1,000 in the case of single men, and incomes in excess of $1,500 in the case of husband and wife living together, with an exemption of $100 for each child in the family."

Alfred E. Marling, Chairman of the committee, announced in opening the meeting, that the purpose was to determine whether a personal tax should be lieved to make up the probable deficit in the State income. Mr. Cobb held that a personal property tax could not be levied equitably, while Prof. Emery said that under competent administration it should be successful.

JULIUS KARP A SUICIDE.

New Yorker, Fearing Blindness, Takes Poison in Chicago Hotel.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Feb. 7.—Julius Karp, 220 Wadsworth Avenue, New York City, ended his life with poison tonight in a room in the Great Northern Hotel. A letter revealed the reason—fear of total blindness. He left two notes, one addressed to the manager of the hotel and the other to his wife.

In the letter to the hotel he said: "My sincere apology to you, Sir, for the inconvenience and embarrassment. Please be good enough to inform my brother-in-law, J. J. Briefer, 66 Vermilyea Avenue, New York City, by wire. Inclosed you will find bill to cover cost of room and telegram."

In the letter signed J. Karp was a $5 bill. The other letter was addressed to his wife. In it he said:

"My sight is constantly becoming weaker and weaker. Between eventual total blindness and death the latter is preferable. My last fond farewell to the two women who are uppermost in my mind and whose portraits are facing me now, my mother and my wife.

"May both forgive me. Also my love to all those who will give me a kind word despite my deed. My last wish is that my body be cremated."

This letter was signed "Julius." Papers among his effects showed that he was a traveling man and had been making Texas cities for the Reform Initial Company of New York. He was apparently about 40 years old. The pictures of his wife and mother, framed in a leather folder, stood upon a dresser in his room.

FONCK NOW A CAPTAIN.

French Flier Entertained on Eve of Sailing for America.

PARIS, Feb. 7.—Rene Fonck, the leading French aviator, who was notified this morning of his promotion from Lieutenant to the rank of Captain, was the guest of honor at a luncheon given today by the Foreign Service Committee of the Aero Club of America before his departure for the United States tomorrow on the steamer La Touraine.

Ambassador Sharp, who presided, paid tribute to the great French ace, saying: "I would not be a bit surprised to learn that Captain Fonck, after receiving a great welcome in the United States, was returning to France by airplane."

SEES HEARST'S HAND IN PLEA FOR COHEN

Becker Thinks Plan Is to Discredit Him Because He Attacked Editor's Loyalty.

SWANN MAKING INQUIRY

Refuses to Turn Over to Deputy Attorney General Evidence Gathered Concerning Baff Case.

The request sent to Governor Smith by United States Senator James A. Reed of Missouri for a stay of the execution of the death sentence on Joseph Cohen, convicted of complicity in the murder of Barnet Baff, and an investigation started by the District Attorney concerning alleged perjured testimony at the trial were characterized last night by Deputy Attorney General Alfred L. Becker as new efforts to discredit him because he had dared to investigate the loyalty of William Randolph Hearst.

"It was known to me that District Attorney Swann had been for some time trying to get proof that some crime had been committed in obtaining the Hearst affidavits," said Mr. Becker. "Now, this is obviously a new attempt on the part of the Hearst-Reed combination to discredit those who dared to investigate Hearst's loyalty."

Commenting upon the letter of Senator Reed to the Governor, Mr. Becker said there was much in it that was incorrect, but that such parts of it as stated facts in connection with the Baff case and the trial of Cohen brought out nothing new in the way of evidence. All the facts had been dealt with in court, he said. The Court of Appeals and the United States Supreme Court have sustained the conviction of Cohen, and, according to Mr. Becker, in these new moves the fate of the man is but a mere incident of the purpose of those who are trying in some way to discredit the prosecution of the Baff slayers.

It may be recalled in connection with Mr. Becker's suggestion concerning the motives that have brought a United States Senator into the case just when District Attorney Swann was investigating it that the prosecution of the Baff slayers was taken from the District Attorney by Governor Whitman, who appointed Mr. Becker as a special Deputy Attorney General to prosecute them.

At the District Attorney's office it was said yesterday that the investigation was for the purpose of determining whether perjury or subornation of perjury had been committed at the trial of Cohen. Certain persons had been questioned and others were to be examined and the investigation was still in progress, it was said. District Attorney Swann and his assistant, Ferdinand Pecora, withheld the names of those examined. It was rumored that one of those questioned was Jacob Lubin, but the name of the informant or complainant upon whose charges the investigation was based was not made public.

Mr. Becker, who is confined to his home by illness, wrote to the District Attorney yesterday, telling him he had heard that a certain man had made a statement concerning the Cohen case and asked that the statement be sent to him. Mr. Swann refused to comply with the request. Mr. Becker, in his letter, said further:

"This request applies also to any other statements which may have been taken by you or any of your assistants in relation to the case of the People vs. Joseph Cohen or any other cases growing in any way out of the murder of Barnet Baff. I base this request upon the express terms of Section 62, Subdivision 2, of the Executive law, which provides in effect that after an order by the Governor directing the Attorney General to take charge of a criminal prosecution, the District Attorney shall only exercise such powers and perform such duties in such action as required of him by the Attorney General or the Deputy Attorney General in charge of the case."

The District Attorney in his reply said:

"This office has procured no affidavits in the cases referred to in your letter and we have taken no statements which in any way conflict with the order of the Governor transferring to you the cases against those accused of the murder of Barnet Baff. Complaint has been made to this office that in connection with the trail of Joseph Cohen the crimes of perjury and subornation of perjury were committed, and this office is investigating the evidence on those complaints. You will, therefore, observe that the Attorney General has no jurisdiction over these complaints and that they are not covered by the order of the Governor heretofore issued or the Executive law."

Mr. Becker said he had no comment to make at this time upon the District Attorney's refusal.

COHEN MAY BE REPRIEVED.

Governor Will Consult Attorney General Newton Before Acting.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 7.—Governor Smith said today that he had received a letter from United States Senator James A. Reed of Missouri asking him to grant a stay in the case of Joseph Cohen, convicted of murder in the first degree in connection with the slaying of Barnet Baff on Nov. 24, 1914.

Governor Smith said before leaving for New York that he would consult Attorney General Charles D. Newton regarding the case, and that until he had heard from him he was not in position to make any statement regarding it. Under the impression that the letter from Senator Reed was merely an application for clemency on behalf of Cohen, the Governor turned the letter and other papers over to ex-Judge Owen L. Potter, executive pardon clerk, for recommendations.

According to an attaché of the Attorney General's office, there is nothing Governor Smith can do beyond granting a reprieve to Cohen if in his opinion the circumstances should warrant it. This undoubtedly will be done, unless Attorney General Newton should advise against it, which is not expected.

HEAR HOTEL 'PHONE PLEA.

Proprietors Tell Service Board Systems Are Run at a Loss.

Hotel proprietors who object to the 5-cent telephone rate ordered by the Federal authorities told the up-State Public Service Commission at the hearing at the Hall of Records yesterday that their telephone service caused them a loss. Fred A. Mushenheim, manager of the Astor, Chairman of the Telephone Committee of the Hotel Men's Association, said he could not tell how many operators there were at the Astor, but declared that the cost of telephone service was reckoned in fixing rates charged to guests.

William T. Ruty, general manager of a number of hotels, including the Great Northern, Grand, Netherland, Navarre, Endicott, and the Bell Apartment Hotel, objected to coin boxes in his hotels. He said his hotels did not want customers from the streets using the chairs and other hotel furniture simply because they spent five cents for a telephone call. Mr. Ruty testified that the telephone service in all his hotels was operated at a loss. He was asked to produce the records of the hotels for the Commission.

then, both in their news and editorial columns, have made statements in regard to the conduct of the Police Department which recklessly disregarded the truth. This was particularly true in connection with the demotion of one Inspector.

A short time before you took office, on Oct. 19, 1917, Daniel E. Costigan was promoted to the rank of Inspector. Only a few months prior he had been promoted from Lieutenant to Captain, without ever having served a day as a police Captain in charge of a precinct, and having spent but little time on regular police duty as a Lieutenant. His activities in the Police Department had consisted entirely of "shoo-fly work" and with the so-called Vice Squad.

Criticises Costigan's Record.

Inspector Costigan was assigned to the First Inspection District, and during 1918, while in command of this district, 316 arrests were made for gambling within his district by Chief Inspector Daly's special squad and by the Special Service Division; during the same period Inspector Costigan's own men made only forty-one arrests for gambling, of whom thirty-one were discharged, five convicted, and five cases are still pending. This record is by far the worst made against any Inspector in the department, notwithstanding the fact that gambling has been usually more prevalent in other parts of the city than in the First Inspection District.

A record has been maintained, and I intend to continue to maintain it, of the activities of each Inspector in regard to the suppression of vice in his own inspection district, and unless they perform their duty in a satisfactory and decisive manner they will be displaced. My policy toward the Inspectors will continue to be in the future the same as it has been in the past, and that is, to exact honesty and efficiency in the highest possible degree from each one of them, and from every other officer and man in the Police Department.

Very truly yours,
R. E. ENRIGHT,
Police Commissioner.

The Mayor made no comment on the letter when he gave it out at the City Hall.

A TIMES reporter, with a summary of the Police Commissioner's letter, sought Captain Costigan in his new precinct last night to afford him an opportunity, if he desired to take advantage of it, of braving the department regulations by replying to the allegations it contained. The Beach Street precinct, where the search had to be prosecuted, is known among the elect in police circles as "The Farm," because it is so lonesome at night. It is tenanted mostly by empty trucks, and its lonesomeness may be judged from the fact that the reporter, in walking from Broadway to the police station at the corner of Beach and Varick Streets, encountered exactly two persons on foot and one automobile. Except for these the district was as deserted as a graveyard after sundown.

Captain Costigan was found returning from his new nightly patrol to see that nobody seemed to be stealing a truck. He listened patiently to the reporter's recital of the charges contained in the letter. At the request for comment, his gaze became steady—almost sorrowful. Then he shook his head.

"Nothing to say," said the Captain at last, thus vindicating the regulations.

ASSAILS FRENCH CABINET.

Socialist Deputy Belittles Bill Against Food Profiteers.

PARIS, Feb. 6.—During the debate on the bill introduced in the Chamber of Deputies today by Louis Nail, Minister of Justice, imposing severe penalties on profiteering middlemen, Deputy Pierre Laval, Socialist, said the measure had been introduced "simply in an effort to quiet popular recriminations."

He predicted that it would prove "wholly ineffective," saying the cause for high prices was "insufficient foodstuffs in France to meet the demands of consumption." He added that the Ministries of Transportation, Justice, and Provisions were to blame for the situation.

M. Nail defended the bill and demanded an immediate discussion of the work of the Food Ministry.

Victor Boret, Minister of Provisions, then told the Chamber he was unwilling to bring his colleagues of the Ministries of Transportation and Justice into the matter and was ready to discuss the food shortage and the high cost of living at any given date that would suit the Socialists. He asked that a special session be held tomorrow afternoon for the purpose.

AIR RAID IN PORTUGAL.

Warships and Troops Leave Lisbon to Fight Monarchists.

LISBON, Feb. 4.—Two seaplanes of the Portuguese Republican forces have dropped proclamations on Oporto, the Monarchist stronghold, and returned safely to Aveiro. They also bombarded and damaged the railway from Espinho to Granja.

Don't blame the dealer

for the shortage of Victor products

– the Government needed us!

To the thousands of people who have been temporarily inconvenienced through their inability to get the Victrola and Victor Records they wanted; to Victor dealers everywhere who in the face of this extreme shortage stood loyally by us and steadfastly refused to offer inferior substitutes, we feel that an explanation is due for this scarcity of Victor products.

Upon the entrance of the United States into the great world war, the Victor Company immediately decided to do its utmost in making war materials. It voluntarily offered its entire plant whole-heartedly to the Government, regardless of the fact that its regular production would be seriously curtailed, regardless of the setback which would temporarily result to the business it took years to build up, regardless of the profits which would necessarily be sacrificed.

It would have been possible to hold off—to keep right on with our regular work and let others do war work. But the Victor Company is a thoroughly American concern, and it does things in the big characteristic American way. It chose to help the Government to the very limit of its resources.

The Government recognized the high state of perfection and thoroughly modern equipment of the gigantic Victor factories, and made more and more use of them until as much as 90% of the plant was at one time engaged in war work. If it were possible to disclose Government secrets and tell of the scientific experiments which were conducted and of the devices and products which were manufactured, the public would appreciate what a valuable help the Victor plant was to the Government in winning the war.

Those parts of the Victor factories which continued to produce Victrolas and Victor Records could not, of course, supply even a reasonable amount of Victor products to the public. And the shortage was made even more pronounced because thousands of Victrolas and still more thousands of Victor Records were diverted to the use of America's fighting forces on land and sea—to entertaining and inspiring them, as well as to teaching them French and wireless telegraphy through the Victor special study courses.

Great though the sacrifices were which the Victor Company willingly made to help its country in its hour of need, we would not have it otherwise. And though the inability to get Victor products was exasperating to the public, we do not believe they would have had us shirk our duty. We count it an honor that we were able to serve our country. We are gratified that the Government found our factories of such value.

And with the coming of peace, we recognize the great task that devolves upon us. It is imperative that we supply as quickly as possible those people who rather than accept inferior substitutes, decided to wait patiently until they could get the genuine Victor products they wanted. Added to this there is the increased demand that will come from new sources, for thousands of our returning heroes have learned to appreciate what the Victrola means in their daily lives. The demand upon our resources will be greater than ever, but we return to our chosen work with full confidence in our ability to meet the needs of the future.

So while the Victor plant did its full share in helping to win the war, it is now again bending its energies to supplying the musical needs of the nation—of the whole world. From a gigantic bee-hive of war-time activities, the Victor plant again resumes as the greatest musical industry in the entire world.

THREE SHIPS BRING 1,975 TROOPS BACK

SAXONIA BRINGS WOUNDED

Over a Thousand Disabled Men in Party from Brest—New Yorkers Tell of the Last Fighting.

Two liners and one transport arrived yesterday from France, bringing 1,975 troops, of whom 104 officers and 1,172 enlisted men were sick and wounded, but with only twenty-eight stretcher cases among them. Thirteen totally blinded soldiers came on the Saxonia, which brought 1,276 sick and wounded from Brest and was the largest hospital ship to arrive in New York since the France came early in December. There were many soldiers crippled by loss of arm or leg.

They stood at the rail on the upper promenade deck as the ship came up the Bay, and enjoyed the welcome given to them by the men and women of the committee on the police boat Patrol, while the band on her deck played popular airs, from "Home, Sweet Home," to the latest ragtime waltz. The blind soldiers in their cabins on the top deck heard the music as the Statue of Liberty was passed and asked their attendants to lead them out. Each one had a soldier detailed to look after his comfort, and there were twelve Red Cross nurses attached to their deck. The group was under the surgical care of Major Robert H. Fowler.

In addition to the thirteen blinded soldiers, there was another blind man on board, Walter Ernest Baker, who went to France a year ago to act as instructor to the French blind soldiers and was transferred last October to the American base hospital at Savenay, near Nantes, where he had fifty American soldiers who had been deprived of their eyesight under his care.

Baker had been blind since he was six years old and graduated from the Columbia University Blind School in 1912.

"You see, they had plenty of people to tell them what they could do, but I as a blind man myself was able to show them how they could learn to do it," he said.

Corporal Henry A. Bitter, who was the only one of the blinded soldiers who wore blue spectacles in addition to the bandages round his head, because he could still see a glimmer of light, is a member of the 352d Infantry, and his home is at Dubuque, Iowa, where he practiced as a pharmacist before the war. His injuries were received after the armistice was signed, on Nov. 16, through a defective hand grenade. He was at the divisional school at Toul, instructing his squad, when one of the grenades exploded, blowing off both his hands and destroying his sight.

The most seriously wounded of the thirteen blinded soldiers was Sergeant Stanislaus Nagorka of 4,416 Merrimac Avenue, Chicago, who lost both his eyes and both arms by a high explosive shell.

Private W. T. Whalen of Company D, 305th Infantry, whose home is at 209 Eighteenth Street, South Brooklyn, lost his sight and his left hand by a grenade which exploded in his bag during the fighting on the Argonne.

Both the blind and the sick and wounded officers and men were all sent to the debarkation hospital in the Grand Central Palace.

Two officers who have been decorated with the D. S. C. for bravery returned on the Saxonia. They were Lieutenant Harry E. Semmes of Washington, D. C., and Lieutenant Frederick Hahn of Savannah, Ga. Semmes won his Cross in the fighting at Xivray on Sept. 12 and Sept. 28. Hahn, who is a member of the Headquarters Company, Seventh Field Artillery, went over on Aug. 19 and got his citation at Cantigny on May 28 for keeping open his lines of communication between artillery and infantry under extraordinary conditions.

Lieutenant Hahn was rushing through a communicating trench when a shell struck the bank, burying him under tons of dirt, and he remembered nothing more until he was revived in the field hospital. Next day he left his cot and went back to the front lines. Later Lieutenant Hahn was cited for bravery at the second battle of the Marne, near Pont-à-Mousson, where he was wounded twice.

One of the senior surgeons on the Saxonia who had been serving in France was Lieut. Col. John McCoy of 292 Broadway, Paterson, N. J., who went over a year ago in charge of Base Hospital 1, the Bellevue unit. Since then he has been with Evacuation Hospital 114, which was moved from time to time and was in the Argonne, when it handled 28,000 cases from Sept. 26 until the armistice was signed. To do this work Lieut. Col. McCoy had a staff of 75 surgeons, 60 nurses, and 400 attendants.

Private Charles P. Green of the 20th Engineers came back yesterday with five wound stripes on his sleeve. He was wounded at Soissons March 24, twice at Conde, May 18, and again at Château-Thierry, July 17, and at the Verdun front on Oct. 26. Green is 46 years old, stands more than 6 feet without his shoes, and lives in Utica, N. Y.

Among the 422 troops on the steamship Espagne, from Brest, were three companies of the heavy artillery instructional school of Limoges, numbering 2 officers and 158 enlisted men. This school, under the comand of Lieut. Col. W. W. Rose, trained 20,000 men during the war.

Private Jack Nugent of Elizabeth, N. J., was attached to the Headquarters Company of the 165th as a dispatch rider, and was cited for the D. S. C. on July 30-31 and Aug. 1 at Château-Thierry for carrying messages under fire between brigade and regimental headquarters. He said that he had "done nothing worth talking about."

There were eighty-five Red Cross workers on board the Espagne, who have been serving on all fronts. In the party was R. Grover Hutchins of 55 East Sixty-fifth Street, this city, who for the last ten months has been in charge of the Home and Hospital Division of the American Red Cross in Paris.

Lucius M. Boomer, of the McAlpin Hotel, who has been working in France with the American Hotel Service, also returned on the Espagne. He established the American Officers' Hotel, which was formerly the Louvre Hotel, and the Officers' Club, at 4 Avenue Gabriel, formerly the home of the Prince of Monaco, which provides accommodation for more than 2,000 men.

Another Red Cross worker was Professor J. Borgeroff of the Western Reserve University at Cleveland, O. Also on the Espagne was Joseph Cummings Chase, the American artist, who has spent a year in France completing 200 paintings for the War College.

Edmond Bapst, the new French Ambassador to Japan, was on the Espagne, accompanied by his family, and will rest a few days in New York. He said that he had arrived from Norway only a few days when he received orders in Paris to proceed to Tokio. From what be heard in Paris, the Peace Conference will last some time.

The American transport Zacapa, which had on board 121 officers, men, and nurses, anchored in the bay and sent her passengers to Hoboken on a naval tug. One of those on board, Captain Daniel W. Strickland of New Haven, attached to the 102d Infantry, said he fought with the same division as his grandfather did in the civil war, the old 2d Connecticut Division, known as the "National Blues." At Toul, on Jan. 21, he was in a three-day fight, during which his company was cut off.

"They died fighting," he said. "There were ten of us left when we were surrounded, and our position hopeless. We got machine gun, shrapnel, hand grenade, mustard, and phosgene gas, and, in fact, received all the horrors of war in one lump. We were taken prisoners, and marched three days before we received medical attention.

"However, we were saved by the Red Cross. I had my eye open for an escape and bribed a sentry with a loaf of bread. I got as far as a railroad station, and was caught. My next bribe was two cans of beef, which the sentry took, and immediately threatened to bayonet me if I attempted to get away. Later I smuggled my way to Warsaw, and the Poles wanted to install me as General. But it didn't appeal to me, and I gradually worked my way down to Italy, and then to France.

Lieutenant H. G. Mayes of Charleston, W. Va., was a pilot in No. 9 Aero Squadron, and was for five months a prisoner in Germany. In July, when flying behind the German lines, he was attacked by six Fokker machines. He fell a distance of 7,000 feet, but knows nothing about it. Fourteen days later he woke up in a German hospital, where he said he was well treated, but was less fortunate later in the Karlsruhe prison camp.

ASKS RELIGIOUS FREEDOM.

Bible Society Would Have All Nations Open to All Creeds.

This cable message has been sent to President Wilson in Paris by the American Bible Society, urging that ample provision be made at the Peace Conference for maintaining complete religious freedom throughout the world:

President Wilson, American Embassy, Paris:

Inasmuch as there are numerous parts of the world where, under various exercises of authority, religious freedom does not exist, and where Christian missionaries and Bible distributors cannot engage in their work, the American Bible Society respectfully urges the representatives of the nations about to convene in Paris to establish the foundations of, and provide the means for, insuring permanent peace to further their great object by making ample provision for securing and maintaining complete religious freedom throughout the world. We would not restrict this freedom in any manner so as to exclude any creed or profession of faith. We believe that no other foundation can be laid than that which is laid in the Holy Scriptures known as the Christian Bible, but we would leave all peoples free to follow God's leadings in their comprehension of His truth.

ADMITS ONE MORE COLLEGE.

Carnegie Foundation Includes Allegheny Among Institutions on List.

The Carnegie Foundation announced yesterday that it had increased its list of associated institutions by the addition of Allegheny College at Meadville, Penn. This is the first college to be admitted to the group of institutions drawing upon the funds of the Foundation since it changed its plan of pensioning Professors to that of financing a scheme of contributory annuities.

Allegheny College was founded more than a century ago under the influence of Harvard University, and is, the announcement says, "one of the best known of the smaller institutions with adequate resources and a well-trained Faculty." Dr. William H. Crawford, who has been President for twenty-five years, has been prominent in war work overseas.

NAMES WAR CLAIMS BOARD.

Baker Provides Vehicle for Settlement of Contracts.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—Secretary Baker announced today the creation of a War Department Claims Board, to supervise and co-ordinate the work of the various department agencies in the settlement of claims resulting from the termination of contracts by reason of the armistice and to authorize and approve such settlements.

Assistant Secretary Crowell was appointed Chairman of the board. Other members are C. H. Dorr, Assistant Director of Munitions; Brig. Gen. George W. Burr, Assistant Director Purchase, Storage, and Traffic; Brig. Gen. Herbert M. Lord, Director of Finance, and Lieut. Col. Herbert H. Lehmancy, assistant to General Goethals. Special members have been chosen for each of the department bureaus, to sit with the board when matters affecting their bureaus are before it.

GIVES WARNING TO KARL.

Austrian Authorities Suspect Him of a Restoration Plot.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

VIENNA, Feb. 4, (via Geneva.)—According to a reliable report the Austrian Chancellor, Renner, has visited Emperor Karl and presented in the course of conversation the advisability of the Emperor's leaving Eckartsau Castle with his family, recommending that he seek Artstetten Castle, the burial place of Archduke Franz Ferdinand, for his future residence, or go abroad. The Emperor is undetermined on his course.

The Emperor and his entourage are suspected of encouraging or fomenting a movement to restore the monarchy.

PIGS GO TO MARKET IN FAST MOTOR CARS

Great Truck Industry Built Up Through Giving Better Service Than the Railroads.

OFTEN OUTRUN A PRICE DROP

Quick Delivery and Elimination of Flesh-Reducing Discomfort Offset High Costs.

To get a bunch of live stock to market quickly before a drop takes all the joy out of a season's profits, is one of the things motor transport is enabling farmers to do. Uncertain railroad transportation and car shortage have led to a marked increase in the numbers of fat hogs, sheep, and cattle hauled to market in motor trucks in the last year. The fat stock travel with greater comfort and are not so long on the road where the truck supplants the freight train.

Although the movement of live stock to market by motor usually costs more than by railroad, this extra expense is more than balanced by the quick delivery of the stock before the market has much opportunity to fluctuate. Furthermore, when the lorry is used, as a rule, hogs from a single farm are loaded in one truck, and there is less danger of the animals fighting and injuring each other in transit than when a carload of mixed hogs is shipped by rail.

In investigating the extent of motor truck transportation to the Omaha live stock market, the Department of Agriculture found that for forty years the movement of live stock by wagon from farms from five to twenty-five miles away had been fairly large. Development of better highways and more rapid means of transportation, that is, the motor truck, has greatly extended this territory and fat farm animals now are hauled by truck to South Omaha from farms at much greater distances than those formerly served by wagon. A number of commission firms cater particularly to the motor truck, or less-than-carload trade. Their business is increasing, because many farmers are purchasing trucks for the special purpose of delivering live stock.

Motor truck companies have been formed in many towns and cities within a radius of fifty miles of Omaha to meet the demands of farmers for such service. These companies are developing not only the live stock trade, but also a "back haul" trade of groceries, merchandise and general freight such as feeds, fertilizers and farm supplies. On one morning this Winter between 5:30 and 8 o'clock forty truckloads of live stock were delivered at the Omaha yards, and of this number nineteen of the vehicles were owned by farmers.

The charges for hauling stock by motor vary with the distance. Some companies charge a flat rate of 25 cents a hundred pounds, and add 1 cent per hundred pounds per mile. Other firms charge by the load, from $10 to $15 for the trip, depending on the distance and the number of animals carried. Although the rates are considered extremely high, as the truck hauler charges 50 to 60 cents a hundredweight, compared with a 12-to-15-cent freight rate still the farmers seem to find the motor-truck method profitable.

The carrying capacity of the truck varies with the size, age, class, and weight of the animals. A standard two-ton truck will carry about twenty head of hogs. The floor space of the truck, when small stock, such as sheep and hogs, are transported, is often increased by double-decking. As a rule, the motor express companies operate trucks of four or five tons capacity, while the vehicles owned by farmers usually carry one or two tons.

Figures indicate how the motor truck delivery of live stock at the South Omaha yards has increased in the last two years. In the first nine months of 1917 there were only 52,129 hogs in the Omaha "drive in." There was an increase of 90 per cent. in the same period in 1918, 142,220 hogs being delivered by truck. The cattle "drive in" from July to September, inclusive, 1917, was 12,189 head, and in the same period in 1918, 17,681 cattle.

The Cincinnati, Indianapolis, and Louisville markets receive a large part of their hogs directly from the farms by motor trucks. One typical, double-deck truck load of live stock unloaded at the Cincinnati stock yards in the presence of a representative of the Department of Agriculture, consisted of three 850-pound cattle, seven calves weighing 150 pounds each, and 11 hogs averaging 185 pounds. Another load consisted of seven 750-pound cattle, while other loads were made up of from 10 to 25 hogs, weighing from 175 to 225 pounds each.

The custom in hauling stock by motor truck to the Cincinnati market is to charge a flat rate of from $15 to $30 a trip for the use of the large truck to convey the stock from 15 to 40 miles. One shipper reports that he hauled 25 hogs 43 miles in four hours, and that the actual shrinkage of these hogs, which weighed approximately 200 pounds apiece, was from six to ten pounds.

At Kansas City a marked increase in the local "drive in" has resulted largely from the increased use of motor trucks. During the first eight months of 1918, 72,887 hogs were handled by motor truck and wagon, an increase of 21,505 over the same period in 1917. Denver notes an increase of 223 per cent. in sheep, 12 per cent. in hogs, and 13 per cent. in cattle in the local "drive in" during the first eight months of 1918, compared with 1917. At St. Joseph, Mo., the "drive in" during the last year has more than doubled through the use of trucks. In a single day at St. Joseph 1,400 hogs, 200 cattle, and a considerable number of sheep were brought to the market in 190 motor trucks.

With good, permanent roads on the boom in all parts of the country, and transportation by truck more satisfactory in every way, the department investigators believe that the future promises cheap and efficient marketing of stock in power vehicles. The effect of market fluctuations is reduced to the minimum, because, in the main, only a few hours are required from the farm to the stockyard.

REJECT HUDSON TUBE RIDER

Senate Votes 40 to 12 Against Calder's $6,000,000 Tunnel Project.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—After a preliminary tangle, the Senate late this afternoon rejected by a vote of 40 to 12, the proposition of Senator Calder of New York for a $6,000,000 vehicular tunnel under the Hudson River. Senators France of Maryland, Frelinghuysen of New Jersey, Jones of Washington, Kenyon of Iowa, Lodge of Massachusetts, McNary of Oregon, New of Indiana, Spencer of Missouri, Sutherland of West Virginia, Thomas of Colorado, Wadsworth of New York, and Weeks of Massachusetts, voted for the proposition which was submitted in Senator Calder's absence, by Senator Frelinghuysen as an amendment to the $400,000,000 Post Office bill.

Senator Thomas made a point of order against the amendment. The Vice President made a ruling, but after a vote was taken, Senators became confused as to what the actual situation was. They began to change their votes, and then to rechange them. Senator Borah of Idaho changed his vote three times. The Senate was in laughter. An agreement was reached this afternoon to take a final vote upon the Post Office bill tomorrow.

Open Letter to Senator Frelinghuysen OF NEW JERSEY

Senator JOSEPH S. FRELINGHUYSEN,

Dear Sir:

Inasmuch as a second vote on the Federal Suffrage Amendment is scheduled for Monday, February 10th, we beg to remind you that in your speech on the floor of the Senate on the occasion of the previous vote, (Sept. 26,) you said in part: " * * * an alien woman who is married to a naturalized American citizen automatically becomes a voter under the law without the safeguard which is thrown around the male alien. The male alien must have five years' residence; he must declare his intention to become a citizen; and then, after two years, the court of jurisdiction in the locality in which he resides shall examine him as to his allegiance, as to his loyalty, as to his educational qualifications; but, under this joint resolution, without that safeguard, automatically we enfranchise thousands of women who are married to American citizens who may be at heart alien in loyalty to this country."

You further stated: "As the joint resolution is drawn, I believe it is a sinister menace to the electorate of this country. I believe that the joint resolution should be amended."

As the amendment proposed by you was defeated, we who oppose the Federal Suffrage Amendment hoped that you would vote "No." As you voted "Yes," we infer you were bound by a pledge. When the measure is again voted upon next Monday we believe that you will vote against this "sinister menace to the electorate."

Since your previous vote the election in the neighboring State of New York has alarmingly justified your statement.

NEW YORK CITY VOTE

	1916	1918 With Women Voting	DECREASE	Increase	Per Cent.
Republicans	303,057	293,516	9,541	.....	3%
Democrats (Tammany)	321,510	559,278	....	237,768	74%
Socialists	27,173	86,427	....	59,254	220%
Whole Vote	652,740	939,221	....	286,481	44%

TOTAL NEW YORK STATE VOTE

	1916	1918 With Women Voting	Increase	Per Cent.
Republicans	835,820	956,034	120,214	14%
Democrats	686,862	1,009,936	323,074	48%

With women voting Democrats and Republicans were obliged to combine in 4 Congressional Districts and 4 Assembly Districts as the only means of protecting the United States Congress and the State Legislature against Socialist Members.

In view of the above indisputable evidence of the increased strength with women voting of the Revolutionary forces now under investigation by the U. S. Senate, and in view of the fact that you received the emphatic mandate from the voters of your State, expressed at the polls in 1915 against Woman Suffrage, we solemnly petition you to reconsider your previous stand in favor of the Federal Suffrage Amendment and put the State of New Jersey on record against this Revolutionary change in government.

GILLETT IS FAVORITE IN NEW YORK CAUCUS

14 of 24 Representatives Express a Preference for Him as Speaker.

NEW ATTACK ON PENROSE

Pinchot Appeals to Senators to Defeat His Aspirations to the Finance Chairmanship.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—New York Republicans in caucus on the Speakership, today discussed the entire situation facing the Republican Party and took a vote which showed that fourteen of the twenty-four members favored Representative F. H. Gillett, five were for Representative James R. Mann, and five were noncommittal.

After the meeting it was announced that Mr. Gillett would have nineteen votes, and perhaps the whole delegation, should his candidacy gain in strength before Feb. 27, the date of the Republican conference. The action of the New York Republicans has considerably strengthened the candidacy of Mr. Gillett, who already has nearly a majority of the members of the Pennsylvania and Indiana delegations supporting him.

The caucus followed the dinner which the delegation had last night at the Hotel Willard, which was attended by ex-Secretary Elihu Root and others. At this dinner speeches were made, the general tenor of which was that it was incumbent upon the Republican Party to organize the House along progressive business lines, and not fall into the error of placing the same men at the helm who directed party affairs in the House during the period in which the party was rent asunder.

Prepared by the informal conferences, and inspired by the speeches delivered last night, the caucus immediately got down to business. It was thought at first that it would be wise to try to bind the delegation by a majority vote, but this was abandoned at the suggestion of men who were noncommittal. Luther W. Mott of Oswego presided, and was elected Chairman of the delegation. Frank Crowther of Schenectady, who succeeded Representative George R. Lunn, was elected Secretary.

The most interesting fight in the delegation pivots around the representation of New York State on the Ways and Means Committee. Representative Mott and Representative Norman J. Gould are candidates for this place. The contest has been very spirited. The delegation avoided an open rupture today by electing Representative Thomas B. Dunn of Rochester a member of the Committee on Committees, which nominates the House committee. Mr. Dunn was not instructed as to the composition of the Ways and Means Committee, but it is believed that his selection is favorable to the election of Mr. Gould.

Fess's Candidacy a Complication.

The entrance of Representative S. D. Fess into the Speakership contest, long expected, but informally announced last night, promises to complicate the situation, and may divide the party into bitter factions, the existence of which will be detrimental to party success in the next Congress. Mr. Fess said that he had decided to enter the lists in response to letters from members, representing thirty-five Republican States, and upon the support given him by the religious and educational press, as well as the political press in Indiana, New Jersey, and Minnesota.

On the basis of reports obtained from the managers of the campaign for Mr. Mann and Mr. Gillett these candidates are running very closely, with Gillett probably leading slightly on account of the gains made today in the New York delegation. There are 230 Republican members of the next House, and the successful candidate must obtain 120 votes. Of the Republican members seventy will serve for the first time, and it is from the latter class that Mr. Fess expects to obtain his strongest support.

In order to win it is necessary for the successful candidate to capture the votes in the Middle and Far West.

Gifford Pinchot, former Chief Forester of the United States, has written a circular letter to Republican members of the United States Senate in opposition to the selection of Senator Boies Penrose to be Chairman of the Senate Finance Committee when the Republicans come into control of Congress, after March 4. On Jan. 25 Mr. Pinchot wrote an open letter to Senator Penrose asserting that his election to the Chairmanship of the Finance Committee would prove an asset for the Democratic Party and would threaten Republican chances in the 1920 Presidential election. Senator Penrose replied by newspaper interviews.

Pinchot's Letter to Senators.

The letter Mr. Pinchot has now addressed to Republican Senators and Republican Senators-elect says in part:

"Under date of Jan. 25 I wrote an open letter to Senator Penrose, since widely published, giving reasons why, as Chairman of the Committee on Finance of the next Senate, he would be a Republican liability and a Democratic asset in the Presidential election of 1920.

"To this letter Senator Penrose has not replied except by a characteristic outburst of personal abuse in a newspaper interview. But the issue raised in my letter cannot be settled by abuse. It demands a serious answer, if not from Senator Penrose to me, then from the Republican leaders to the Republican voters. Therefore, I have taken the liberty of addressing this letter to each of the Republican members of the Senate, in whose hands the answer necessarily lies.

"The coming Presidential election will be the most important of our time. No such war and no such period of decision following it have ever faced the world before. By 1920 our politics, now fluid after the war, will be ready to crystallize. They must not harden with the Democrats in power, for the party which wins the next election may well hold the Government for a generation.

"If any proof were needed, the arrogant, costly, sectional, partisan blundering of the Democratic Party in its handling of the problems of the war, and of preparedness before the war, has proved it unfit to handle the vast problems of reconstruction. These problems must be put in the hands of a Republican Administration, with the Republican habit of getting things done. What we do with reconstruction will affect every man, woman, and child in America for generations to come. It is too vital a matter to be left to the mercy of Democratic political manipulation.

"As a most important part of reconstruction, we must have a Republican tariff which will give fair and adequate protection to business, labor, and the farmer. The bill for this tariff will bear the name of the Chairman of the Finance Committee. If the Republican Senators turn over to Senator Penrose the virtual leadership of the party in the Senate, together with the tremendous power now exercised by the Chairman of the Committee on Finance, the tariff bill will lose the confidence of the rank and file of the party. Many will contend, and with justice, that Senator Penrose is incapable of writing a tariff bill free from the influence of the corporations and monopolies which in politics he has always served. So with the Revenue bill which must come from the Committee on Finance. To the average voter the name will tell the story.

"In 1920 millions of women will vote, many of them fresh from suffrage victories. His position on liquor, child labor, and equal suffrage has helped to make Senator Penrose peculiarly offensive to women voters.

"The last election made it clear that the Middle West holds the controlling position in American politics. Senator Penrose grates upon the Republicans of the Middle West.

"There is no present danger of a split in the Republican Party. On the other hand, no agreement between leaders in Washington can of itself deliver the progressive Republican vote. We know that Mr. Wilson already is planning a special appeal to progressive voters. Many anti-Penrose Republicans who revolted in 1912 have not yet returned. Senator Penrose must not be allowed to prevent them from coming back. Without them our victory in 1920 is by no means secure. Only the removal of the cause which brought about the revolt in 1912 can make our party whole."

NEW YORKERS WIN CROSS.

Nine Local Men Among Latest Named to Receive the D. S. C.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—Nine officers and men from New York and vicinity are in the two lists of American soldiers and sailors announced today, to whom the Commander in Chief, in the name of the President, has awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for heroism in action. The following are those cited from New York and New Jersey:

Private (First Class) William F. Thebert, A. S. No. 51,702, Co. K, 23d Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action near Saint Etienne-a-Arnes, France Oct. 3-9, 1918. Acting as battalion runner, Private Thebert carried messages through intense artillery and machine gun fire. This soldier has been on duty as runner since June 6, being intrusted with especially important messages because of his carefulness and reliability. Home address, Mrs. Margaret Thebert, mother, Fort Covington, N. Y.

Lieut. Col. A. C. Arnold, 9th Infantry, for the following act of extraordinary heroism in action near Thiaucourt, France, Sept. 12, 1918. Lieut. Col. Arnold is awarded a bar to be worn with the Distinguished Service Cross awarded him Nov. 22, 1918. At a critical moment in the advance this officer went through a barrage and stopped the assaulting lines of a neighboring unit which had failed to halt on their objective and were in danger from their own barrage. His coolness in walking up and down the line under heavy enemy bombardment inspired confidence and restored order in his wavering line. Home address, Mrs. A. C. Arnold, 256 West Ninety-seventh Street, New York City.

Corporal William J. Boyle, A. S. No. 41,319, Machine Gun Company, 9th Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action near Medcah Farm, France, Oct. 5, 1918. Corporal Boyle saved the lives of many of his comrades by killing two enemy machine gunners and putting the guns out of action. Home address, Sam Vatterson, friend, 432 West Twentieth Street, New York, N. Y.

Corporal Michael Mabreski, A. S. No. 40185, Company I, 9th Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action near Thiacourt, France, Sept. 12, 1918. Corporal Mabreski, with about twelve men, assisted in flanking a machine-gun nest, and then captured a German ammunition dump with about sixty-five prisoners. Home address, Mrs. William Herrman, friend, 25 Kent Street, Beacon, N. Y.

Private Fred E. Smith, A. S. No. 41183, Company K, 9th Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action near Faubourg, France, Nov. 8, 1918. In the absence of officers Private Smith took command of two platoons and led them with great fortitude and bravery. When one of his men was wounded he made his way alone through heavy shell and machine-gun fire, brought the wounded man to our line, and applied first aid. Home address, Mrs. Hatty Russel, mother, 936 South State Street, Syracuse, N. Y.

Private (First Class) Hyman Lashiwer, A. S. No. 40,917, deceased, Company M, 9th Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action near Jaulny, France, Sept. 12, 1918. Private Lashiwer, with three other soldiers, volunteered to carry wounded men of other companies from in front of our advanced positions and carried this work on under violent machine-gun fire while a counterattack was developing. Home address, Mrs. Eva Kastle, 512 Seventeenth Street, College Point, L. I., N. Y.

Private Tony Wagner, A. S. No. 40,969, Company M, 9th Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action near Jaulny, France, Sept. 12, 1918. Private Wagner, with three other soldiers, volunteered to carry wounded men of other companies from in front of our advanced positions and carried this work on under violent machine-gun fire while a counterattack was developing. Home address, Helen Watneck, sister, 1,079 Manhattan Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Lieut. Thomas J. Taylor, 23d Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action near the Côte de Chatillon, France, Nov. 1, 1918. When all the other officers of his company had been incapacitated, Lieut. Taylor took command and successfully led his men throughout the five days' operations, capturing a strongly held position with more than a hundred prisoners. Home address, Mrs. Anna E. Taylor, mother, 753 Carroll Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Private Ernest Washington Porter, A. S. No. 108602, deceased, 23d Company, 6th Machine Gun Battalion, United States Marine Corps. For extraordinary heroism in action near Thiaucourt, France, Sept. 15, 1918. While taking cover with the remainder of his gun crew from a heavy artillery barrage, Pvt. Porter answered a call for volunteers to combat an enemy airplane. Upon reaching his gun he was instantly killed by an aerial bomb. Next of kin, Ernest Porter, father, 671 Summer Avenue, Newark, N. J.

NEW DRY ORDER AT COBLENZ

Nothing Alcoholic Allowed Except Light Wines and Beer.

COBLENZ, Feb. 6, (Associated Press.)—The names of all Germans convicted of violations of army regulations in territory occupied by American forces are being published in German newspapers, together with the address of each, the offense charged and the fine or sentence imposed. Publicity was decided upon as being likely to prevent an increase of minor offenses, such as selling liquor, or imitation liquor, to soldiers.

By a new order, which has been published for the guidance of civilians, the sale or gift of any substance containing alcohol, or any preparation susceptible of being used for the purpose of making alcoholic beverages, excepting light wines and beer, is forbidden. This regulation is supplementary to a previous order forbidding the sale or gift of all alcoholic drinks excepting light wines or beer.

Assistant Secretary of the Navy Franklin D. Roosevelt called on General Dickman today on his way back to Paris from Cologne. He inspected the United States Marine contingents at Andernach, but spent less than an hour at headquarters here. He has been on a sightseeing trip to occupied districts along the Rhine.

REDFIELD SUBMITS A PROSPERITY PLAN

Proposes Semi-Official Price Fixing to Avert Stagnation in Business.

INDUSTRIAL CHIEFS AGREE

President Asked to Name Committee and Public Co-operation Will Be Sought.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—Stabilization of prices, through Government intervention in the basic commodity markets, as a means of removing threatened industrial and business stagnation, with its attendant unemployment, has been recommended to President Wilson by a conference of Cabinet officials and industrial leaders who have made an exhaustive study of the situation.

In making this announcement today, Secretary of Commerce Redfield, at whose instance the conference was called, said the plan proposed to the President was the appointment of a representative committee to investigate production costs in all fields and recommend prices at which the Government, through its various departments, would do its purchasing. Producers, consumers, and labor representatives would be asked to co-operate in determining the prices.

Secretary Redfield said that those attending the conference here this week were convinced that the determining of fair prices in the semi-official and co-operative manner proposed would release "latent consuming power," now dormant because consumers were awaiting price stabilization, and thus bring about an immediate increase in production in all lines of business.

Return to pre-war prices is not contemplated, Mr. Redfield said, nor is it proposed to use the Government's war powers or to seek legislation from Congress. The whole plan depends entirely upon voluntary co-operation by all interests involved, it was explained, and the Government's purchasing power would be used only in carrying out the prices agreed upon. It is agreed that many heads of divisions of the War Industries Board, which dissolved on Jan. 1, have expressed willingness to serve on the general committee and that special sub-committees have been suggested to make the investigation in each industry.

Redfield's Statement.

"Following a series of conferences between members of the Cabinet and others," said Mr. Redfield, "a meeting was held in Washington Feb. 5, which was called by the Secretary of Commerce to consider the industrial situation with particular reference to the unemployment problem and the prospect of resumption of active buying. At this meeting there were present a number of the former heads of the more important divisions of the War Industries Board, representatives of various Government departments and others interested in the subject.

"It was recognized by the meeting that a considerable amount of unemployment existed and that with the return of the troops this unemployment would tend to increase. It was also recognized that in a large measure the unemployment was seasonal and due to the impossibility of carrying out open air construction in certain States at this time of the year. It was, however, agreed that a second important cause was the reluctance of buyers to purchase more than their emergency requirements at the present level of prices, and it was felt that a determination of a post-war level of prices for basic commodities was urgently needed.

"It was the general opinion, illustrated by many specific cases, that a large latent buying power existed in the country which needed only a satisfactory level of prices to become effective. It was pointed out that the establishment of a satisfactory level of prices at this time offered particular difficulties because war prices, as fixed, are recognised as abnormal; on the other hand, there is no prospect in the immediate future of the restoration of pre-war prices. It was felt that wages would remain on a higher level than before the European war, and that no readjustment in the true wages of labor as measured by purchasing power should be attempted, though it was felt that, as the cost of living is reduced, labor would readily agree to the corresponding adjustment in money wages.

"If events were left to take the natural course, the establishment of post-war prices would probably be a difficult and protected matter, since prices of one commodity affect other commidities, and producers would wait for one another to take the first step. Such a course of procedure would involve much unemployment and a loss to both labor and capital.

Look for Patriotic Help.

"It was the sense of the meeting that the fine spirit of voluntary co-operation in industry which had proved such a valuable factor in the conduct of the war should be availed of to ease and expedite the processes of readjustment, and that the manufacturers of the country would be willing to take the first step. After a full discussion of the situation, which occupied the greater part of the day, a resolution was adopted asking the Secretary of Commerce to seek the approval of the President to the appointment of a committee to deal with the situation.

"It was contemplated that this committee should call into conference the representatives of the basic industries of the country to examine conditions in industry with a view to the formulation of a scale of prices at which the Government departments and other buyers would be justified in buying freely, and at which manufacturers would be willing to sell, with a view to maintaining or restoring business activity to a full volume.

"It was felt that time was the very essence of the problem and that, therefore, the appointment and action of the committee should proceed with all possible speed. It was believed that public announcement of the conclusions of such a committee would have a great value in establishing confidence in a level of prices and would be accepted by bankers and others as a basis for credit."

American Paris Hospital Closed.

PARIS, Feb. 6.—The American Red Cross Hospital at Neuilly, organized in the first week of September, 1914, by several prominent Americans, including William K. Vanderbilt, Mrs. Vanderbilt, Robert Bacon, and Mrs. Bacon, was closed today. The hospital has been one of the most conspicuous establishments in caring for the wounded during the war, its work drawing enthusiastic praise from the French people.

OUR SHIPS GOING UP RHINE.

Will Use Rotterdam as Base — To Rush Troops Homeward.

PARIS, Feb. 6.—American ships will soon steam up the Rhine, using Rotterdam as a base, according to information made public here today. It is announced that the transport of Americans to their homes is progressing as rapidly as possible and that during February the number of men to be taken to America will be considerably augmented.

The health of the American soldiers in France is excellent and their morale is of the highest. They show willingness to re-enter the fray if occasion demands, there being a feeling apparently that the war ended too soon for some of them, although all are satisfied to accept the situation.

The number of cases of influenza among the troops is negligible. The excellent physical standards set by the American army guaranteed the men against disagreeable effects from the climate and the hardships of campaigning.

BLOCKS PURCHASE OF RADIO SYSTEMS

House Amends Naval Bill to Prevent Diversion of Steam Engineering Bureau Funds.

FORDNEY WARNS OF COSTS

Says Country Will Be Called Upon for $10,000,000,000 in Next Twelve Months.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—The Naval bill was amended today to prevent Secretary Daniels acquiring radio systems through the use of money appropriated for the Steam Engineering Bureau.

Representative Lehlbach of New Jersey, who sponsored the amendment, recalled that the Secretary of the Navy last year had taken $3,000,000 from this fund and applied it to the purchase of ship-to-shore stations of the Marconi and the system of the Federal Wireless Company.

This action, taken after the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries had declined to recommend a bill specifically authorizing the department to purchase wireless plants, has brought down a storm on the department, and a resolution calling upon the Department of Justice to force restitution of the money has been introduced in the House.

Representative Lehlbach rehearsed the history of the transaction and said the Merchant Marine Committee only a few weeks ago again refused to report a bill for the acquisition by the Navy Department of the wireless systems of the United States.

"To prevent the Navy Department acting as it did last year, under the loose authority of the Navy bill, I wish to press my amendment," he added.

The House, in Committee of the Whole, adopted the amendment to the $85,000,000 Steam Engineering Bureau item. It read:

"Provided further that no part of this appropriation shall be expended for the acquisition of radio stations in whole or in part, to be used for the transmission or reception of messages."

Great progress was made in consideration of the bill, but the controversial section, providing for the big three-year building program, advocated by President Wilson, was not reached today. Indications are that there will be a stout fight against its adoption, but the advocates of a big navy probably will be strong enough to win out.

During debate today Representative Fordney of Michigan, ranking Republican member of the Ways and Means Committee, reviewed war expenditures and said it would be necessary to pass another revenue bill, in addition to the pending one, in a very few months, or issue more bonds.

Some of the outstanding obligations, which, he said, would call for additional revenues, follow:

"On Dec. 31, 1918, the outstanding obligations of the Government, bonds, certificates of indebtedness, War Savings Stamps and so forth, amounted to $21,000,000,000. The interest on this indebtedness is estimated at $1,000,000,000.

"The naval appropriation we are now considering calls for an expenditure of $746,000,000.

"For hospital construction, $30,000,000.

"The merchant marine will cost us conservatively about $650,000,000.

"The extra for war in discharging men from the service will be at least $500,000,000, and possibly double that amount.

"The aircraft appropriation of from $25,000,000 to $30,000,000 does not include the proposed aerial mail, and that undoubtedly will call for an expenditure of $50,000,000 more.

"The Government operation of the railroads already has furnished a loss of $755,000,000 during the first year of Government control and this probably will be increased to $800,000,000 before the roads are restored to their owners.

"Government contracts have been authorized up to $3,000,000,000, and if the Government is able to settle these on the basis of 50 cents on the dollar these claims will amount to $1,500,000,000.

"The guarantee to the farmers on wheat conservatively estimated will be $1,000,000,000.

"The war risk insurance will require $150,000,000.

"The European food bill recently passed carries $100,000,000.

"Extra clerk hire to members of the House will exceed $500,000 in the next twelve months.

"The Federal Employment Bureau is asking for $14,000,000 for the next year.

"The bonus for soldiers provided in the Revenue bill—$60 per man—will amount to $255,000,000.

"This is the amount the Congress of the United States is going to be called upon to collect from the public in the next twelve months, amounting to $6,795,000,000. This does not include the ordinary expenses of the Government, but it is true the tax bill will collect, if the estimates made are correct, in round numbers $6,000,000,000.

"Let us call your attention to this fact, that all the money in the United States amounts to only about $6,000,000,000 and we are going to be called upon for $10,000,000,000 in the next twelve months. We are not satisfied just to reach out and take all the money that all the people have, but we want one and a half times the amount that they have."

Lay Preacher Acquitted of Wife Murder Recovers from Nervous Collapse.

SACO, Me., Feb. 7.—Henry H. Hall of Wells Depot, the preacher acquitted of the murder of his wife, has virtually recovered from the nervous collapse which followed the announcement of the verdict on Wednesday night. He says he has not made any definite plans for the future.

"I have felt in my heart of hearts from the very first," he said, "that my God, who knoweth and ruleth all things, would not forsake me when my hour of greatest need came. He has guided my life through the storms of the deep and on land, and He surely has been with me in this, the severest tempest in Saco."

Jury Finds Jobbers Not Guilty of Restraining Trade.

Twenty individuals and sixteen corporations, members of the National Association of Automobile Accessory Jobbers, who have been on trial before Federal Judge Learned Hand on a charge of violating the Sherman anti-trust law, were found not guilty yesterday by the jury. The defendants hailed from practically all parts of the country.

The usual charges of seeking to restrain trade by fixing prices and limiting output were made.

After the verdict the defendants, who were in court, shook hands with the jurors.

FOOD PRICES SWING HIGHER ONCE AGAIN

Even Butter and Eggs, Halting After Drop in Market Here, Take Upward Turn.

The upward tendency of prices of certain food commodities the last few days was more pronounced yesterday, as shown by the daily quotation of retail prices at the Washington Market, given out by Commissioner of Public Markets Jonathan C. Day. Lamb, mutton, and pork showed an increase of 3 to 5 cents over the prices of the day before. Several commodities showed increase over the prices of a week ago. While butter and eggs are much lower than a few weeks ago, the prices have been almost stationary for several days, with an upward tendency. The wholesale price of eggs increased 4 cents on Thursday, the retail price remaining at 47 and 49 cents.

Commissioner Day explained that the increase in prices was due to the fact that retailers, expecting the prices to go much lower, did not make their usual purchases, and then, when the stocks became low, they all went on the market at the same time, thus creating a demand that exceeded the supply. He though that the present prices would come down within the next week.

P. Q. Foy, of the Market Report, had another reason for the increase in prices. He said that the stiffening of prices of pork products was because the Government is allowing $17.50 for hogs. Beef and lamb products are also up because of Government contracts, he said. Mr. Foy predicted a big slump in prices of these commodities as soon as the present contracts are filled.

A comparison of prices at the Washington Market yesterday with those of Friday of last week shows an increase in a number of items and a decrease in some. The prices follow:

Commissioner Day has announced that a comparison of retail prices in Manhattan and Brooklyn markets showed that Brooklyn prices were at the time appreciably higher. He said eggs were from 5 to 10 cents a dozen higher and meat from 5 to 10 cents a pound higher.

Persons who take their meals in restaurants have noticed that, although the retail price of eggs has slumped about 30 cents a dozen in the last few weeks, the prices in the restaurants remain the same. The price of eggs in "popular-priced" restaurants remains 30 cents for an order of two. There has been no decrease noted in any prices in these establishments.

GLASS TO HEAR PLAN FOR LOAN CAMPAIGN

Secretary of Treasury to be Guest of Reserve Bank Officers Here.

DISCUSS TWO NEW ISSUES

Bond at High Rate, Liable Only to Surtaxes, is Proposed—Campaign Date Not Settled.

Secretary of the Treasury Carter Glass will be a guest on Friday at a dinner to be given by the officers of the New York Federal Reserve Bank, and while he is here he will confer with the local Liberty Loan Committee. The committee will have a definite plan for the Fifth Liberty Loan campaign ready for his consideration.

While no final agreement has been reached by the committee, a plan which has the approval of some of the individual members, calls for the issuance of two classes of bonds. One is a bond of high interest rate, but liable only to the income tax surtaxes, thus making an appeal to the citizen of limited means. Another is a bond of low interest rate, exempt from all income taxes, normal and surtax, and probably containing some exemptions on corporation taxes. This latter issue, it is believed, would draw large subscriptions from individuals and corporations.

As to the rates of interest on the proposed two classes, it is believed that the tax-exempt issue could be floated on a 4 per cent. basis, and might even be successful at a rate as low as 3½ per cent. For the other classification, it is believed that the rate would have to be close to, if not quite, 5 per cent. Advices from the South and West indicate that bankers there are anxious for a 5 per cent. bond, but here the opinion is that a 3½ per cent. or 4 per cent. tax exempt issue would be well taken.

It is predicted here that the size of the Victory Loan will be $6,000,000,000. Bankers point out that there would be some difficulty in dividing this, or any other arbitrary sum, into the two classes proposed, so that if the dual issue is finally decided upon, it is expected that subscriptions for unlimited amounts will be asked for, with the Secretary of the Treasury having the authority to accept all or any part of the responses. This would be following the general lines of war finance in Great Britain and other countries. It would, however, be a new departure in American war finance.

Another novel feature of the proposal likely to be made to the Secretary of the Treasury is that the new bonds have a maturity of not more than five years, and that the Government reserve the right to call the bonds in two or three years. This would allow the Government to refund the loan on more favorable terms if interest rates declined and funds became more plentiful after the war.

A report that the Victory Loan campaign would be postponed until June was generally discredited by bankers yesterday. The original intention of starting the campaign the first week in April is not expected to prevail, but it is believed that the campaign will be opened directly after Easter, which comes the latter part of April. Some bankers think it would be advisable to wait until June before offering the loan, to take advantage of the mid-year accumulation of investment capital. The majority opinion is that this would be of little or no value to the Government because of the size of the loan, and it is generally believed that the sooner the operation is out of the way the better it will be both for the Government and general business.

The women of the Second Federal Reserve District are beginning to organize for the next Liberty Loan campaign. Mrs. John T. Pratt, District Chairman, has issued a call for a meeting in her home in this city on March 7, when the Chairmen of all the districts will discuss the plan for the Victory bond issue. Announcement also was made yesterday at the headquarters of the War Savings Committee, that William Fellowes Morgan, President of the Merchants' Association, had accepted the Chairmanship of the new Trades Committee to promote the sale in 1919 of War Savings Stamps.

JAPAN PLEDGES $50,000,000.

Takes Treasury Certificates to Stabilize Exchange Rates.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—Secretary Glass tonight announced that the Japanese Government made a subscription of $50,000,000, through the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, to the fifth bi-weekly offering of Treasury certificates of indebtedness in anticipation of the Victory Liberty Loan soon to be floated.

This is one of the various methods directly or indirectly used by the Japanese Government to keep within bounds exchange rates between the two countries during the last three years. "The action of the Japanese Government," said Mr. Glass tonight, "is very helpful in its effect upon the international exchange and is greatly appreciated by the Treasury."

The fifth bi-weekly offering of Treasury certificates of indebtedness was oversubscribed. The minimum amount offered was $600,000,000, and the total subscriptions aggregate $687,381,500. The aggregate of subscriptions for certificates in anticipation of the Victory Liberty Loan to date is $3,225,099,500.

The results by Federal Reserve districts, arranged in order of the percentage of subscription of their quotas, are as follows:

Federal Reserve Bank.	Quota.	Subscription.
New York	$203,200,000	$265,844,500
St. Louis	24,000,000	29,678,500
Chicago	84,000,000	103,048,500
Minneapolis	20,800,000	24,600,000
Cleveland	54,400,000	60,786,500
Philadelphia	42,400,000	46,173,000
San Francisco	42,400,000	45,400,000
Richmond	20,800,000	20,836,500
Boston	52,000,000	48,800,000
Atlanta	17,600,000	16,262,500
Kansas City	24,000,000	20,000,000
Dallas	14,400,000	5,951,500
Total	$600,000,000	$687,381,500

Secretary Glass tonight, under authority of the act approved Sept. 24, 1917, as amended by the act approved April 4, 1918, offered for subscription, at par and accrued interest, through the Federal Reserve banks, $600,000,000 or more Treasury certificates of indebtedness, Series V. F., dated and bearing interest from Feb. 13, 1919, payable July 15, 1919, with interest at the rate of 4½ per cent. per annum. Applications will be received at the Federal Reserve banks. Subscription books will close at the close of business Feb. 20, 1919. Certificates will be issued in denominations of $500, $1,000, $5,000, $10,000, and $100,000.

Pebeco neutralizes mouth acids

"Acid-Mouth" is the cause of far too much tooth agony and tooth decay. Dental authorities believe that 19 out of 20 persons have it.

According to the law of averages, you have "Acid-Mouth," and so have several members of your family.

What will you do to check a condition, which if left unchecked, may doom you to a toothless old age?

Have your teeth examined twice yearly by your dentist. Use Pebeco Tooth Paste twice a day.

Then you will have reasonable assurance of sound teeth for life.

There's a canker worm in the tire industry—you know it! It destroys the best tires ever put together—brings 75% of them to an untimely end—gets them black-balled unjustly.

WRONG INFLATION—That's It.

We have the answer in the greatest valve improvement since pneumatic tires were thought of. When you see it you will say that the importance of this new valve cannot be overestimated.

THANKS HARVARD UNIT.

Balfour Cables Britain's Appreciation to Dr. Lowell.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Feb. 7.—President A. Lawrence Lowell of Harvard made public today a letter from Arthur J. Balfour, British Foreign Secretary, expressing the appreciation of the British Government for the work accomplished by the Harvard surgical unit while it was overseas. The letter says in part:

"Now that the Harvard unit has fulfilled its noble mission to the British troops in France and has earned the tribute of their undying gratitude, I desire to offer to that splendid organization some expression, however inadequate, of my deep appreciation of the great work that it has performed.

"May I, therefore, count on your good offices to let every member of the unit know how grateful his Majesty's Government feels for the generous offer made and carried out in December, 1916. Through two strenuous and memorable years the work of General Hospital 22, the largest hospital unit serving with the British Army, has held a record for skillful and untiring treatment of our wounded.

"The memory of so much service and self-sacrifice can never pass from us. It will be cherished in perpetuity by the relatives and friends of those whom the Harvard unit has tended with such admirable devotion."

MORE MEMBERS QUIT VICTORY COMMITTEE

18 OF 25 NOW ARE OUT

Several Contributors Ask for the Return of Money or Its Transfer to the Red Cross.

Resignations of members of the Brooklyn Victory Celebration Committee, due to the acceptance of the resignation of Chairman Nathan S. Jonas by Borough President Edward Riegelmann, continued to pour into the office of the Borough President yesterday. Among those who resigned was Arthur J. O'Keefe, former Bridge Commissioner. His resignation was the eighteenth of the twenty-five members of the Executive Committee appointed by the Borough President.

James T. Underwood and Josiah O. Low, honorary Vice Presidents, also sent in letters of resignation, making twelve who have resigned their places since reports of the demands made by the Hearst forces upon Borough President Riegelmann became current. Fifteen members of the General Committee also asked yesterday that their names be stricken from the list, bringing the number of resignations from that body to more than sixty.

Several requests were made yesterday that contributions to the fund, now amounting to more than $40,000, to be spent on the welcome to the returning troops, be returned to the senders or donated to the Red Cross organization. The first letter of such a nature, written by Rabbi Alexander Lyons of the Eighth Avenue Temple, in part was as follows:

"It is with deep regret that I find myself unable to continue on the Brooklyn Victory Celebration Committee as at present constituted and conducted. It has been degraded from a lofty patriotic purpose to a low political personal profit. It is an honor to get out of it. So please drop my name at once.

"The little contribution I made for the use of the former committee I do not now regard as wisely bestowed. If, as I think, I have any moral claim upon that sum, I would prefer it withdrawn and diverted to the use of the Red Cross, where it may serve a noble purpose in an unquestionable manner."

The second letter demanding the return of a contribution was from the Heads of Department Association of the Board of Education in Brooklyn. It was written by Mary A. Horn, Treasurer of the organization, and said:

"In view of the fact that the Brooklyn Victory Celebration Committee has, within the past week, undergone reorganization, it is the desire of the Brooklyn Heads of Department Association that a donation of $25, sent to the committee on Jan. 27 last, be returned to the association.

James S. Lawson of 192 Broadway, in his letter of resignation, wrote:

"I decline to be on any committee to welcome soldiers as long as Mr. Hearst dictates what is to be done. I am prompted to take this step, as I do not care to serve on a committee even in a general way where the actions of its Executive Committee appear to be under the control and influence of the Mayor of the city and Mr. William R. Hearst."

Borough President Riegelmann yesterday refused to make any statement concerning the affairs of the Celebration Committee.

SENATORS DEMAND CAMP INVESTIGATIONS

Lodge and New Criticise Two in France, La Follette Two in America.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—Investigations of military camps here and abroad were demanded in the Senate today by Senators Lodge of Massachusetts, La Follette of Wisconsin, and New of Indiana.

Senator Lodge presented a teelgram from John J. Bush of the Michigan Society of New York, in which it was reported that returning soldiers called Camp St. Aignan, France, "Camp Agony," because it was overcrowded, and said that wounded men dropped dead in line, and that the mud reached above the soldiers' boot tops.

Senator La Follette offered resolutions asking for the investigation of Motor Transport camps at Gum Springs, near Alexandria, Va., and Camp Humphreys. The resolutions alleged that Companies 553 and 516 of the Motor Transport had been employed at Gum Springs on road building at the soldiers' pay of $1 a day, while negroes worked beside them under contractors at $4.50 a day; that the men had no military training, and that the commanding officer was disinclined to allow applications for discharge.

Senator New renewed his demand for investigation of the much-criticised Camp Pontanezen, at Brest. He asserted that the Democrats had blocked the resolution he introduced for an investigation, and that, although the resolution had been reported to Secretary Baker, nothing had come of it.

One Falls 13 Stories, Another 5.

Richard Dewright Hudson of Hempstead, L. I., a salesman for the Monroe Calculating Machine Company, was instantly killed yesterday morning by a fall from a window of the company's office on the thirteenth floor of the Woolworth Building. The identification was made by the manager of the office, who refused all other information. While crossing the roof of his home, 963 Sixth Avenue, Joseph Kelly, a clerk, of the Down Town Association, tripped over a low-hung clothes line and fell five stories to the ground. He is in Bellevue Hospital in a critical condition.

GAS SUIT TO COST $100,000.

Service Board Asks Appropriation to Defend Consolidated Case.

The Legislature has been asked by the Public Service Commission to make a special appropriation of $100,000 to pay for defending the suit brought in the Federal courts by the Consolidated Gas Company to have the eighty-cent gas law declared unconstitutional and confiscatory and to defend the law generally from other attacks upon it by gas corporations.

In a statement made public yesterday fear is expressed that the litigation will be long and costly, that other similar actions probably will be instituted, and that it will require a deal of preparation and many expert accountants, engineers, and extra counsel properly to defend the suit.

In its complaint the company says it has invested in its plant not less than $69,697,700, and that its net revenues for the year ended Oct. 31, 1918, represented a net return of 6 per cent. on only $99,241.65.

It was said yesterday that the plan of defense that is being mapped out may include an appraisal of the company's property.

What Union Labor Will Demand at Peace Table

The man with the hoe has broken the silence of the centuries. Almost every dispatch from Paris emphasizes the fact that the most potent voice in the reconstruction of the world after the great war is that of labor. It is speaking at the peace table itself. The laboring forces of almost every country are making demands. What every American, be he employer or employee, desires to know is what demands American labor is making and should make at the conference.

To answer this question, THE LITERARY DIGEST has asked the editors of journals voicing various phases of labor opinion in this country to give it their opinions, and the result is published in this week's LITERARY DIGEST, dated February 8th, together with the demands of English, French, Belgian, and other labor leaders. These spokesmen for organized labor have very clear ideas as to what ought to be done in Paris and Bern, and there is no doubt that this highly informative article will be widely read and discust.

For more than six years, THE LITERARY DIGEST has been the most important general clearing-house for those who need buildings and their equipment, and those who furnish building materials and technical skill.

If you are going to build a private residence, a building for industrial or manufacturing purposes, a skyscraper, a garage, or any other sort of structure, you will be interested in reading the announcements of the building material manufacturers appearing in this week's issue of THE LITERARY DIGEST. There is a wealth of practical information in this number that is not only interesting but of much importance to every one. You will find interesting suggestions as to the construction, equipment and decoration of modern buildings.

SURPRISE IN FINAL OF TENNIS DOUBLES

Team Work of Misses Wagner and Cassel Brings Victory Over Noted Net Stars.

BOSTON GIRL BEARS BRUNT

Miss Bjurstedt Defeats Mrs. Candee in Straight Sets in Semi-Finals of Cup Singles.

The harmonious team work of Miss Marie Wagner and Miss Clare Cassel carried the pair to a decisive victory over Miss Molla Bjurstedt and Miss Eleanora Sears in the final of the women's cup doubles at the Casino Heights in Brooklyn yesterday. The New York state champions won in straight sets, 6—4, 6—4. The remarkable tennis played by Miss Wagner and Miss Cassel was surprising and at times their work was so sensational that there was no question about their superiority.

The crafty manoeuvring of Miss Wagner and Miss Cassel in directing the fury of their attack at Miss Sears brought the brunt of the battle to the Boston girl, the state title holders being very careful to keep the ball away from that part of the court inhabited by the Norse girl. While the victors played a hard smashing game, their shots were nevertheless carefully directed and well placed. Even when the going was at top speed, they never succumbed to the tendency of wildness and held their advantage at all times with coolness and caution.

The combination play of Miss Wagner and Miss Cassel was so smooth that they left no openings whereby the Norse-Boston duo could make capital of errors. There was a decided improvement in Miss Wagner's play and her game at all times was formidable. Her service worked perfectly and she gained many service aces. She did unusually effective work at the net and the combined efforts of Miss Bjurstedt and Miss Sears could not drive her away from this position. Most of her volleying and hard drives were directed at the Boston girl.

The action was so skillfully concentrated at Miss Sears's position on the court that some of the time Miss Bjurstedt was left helpless to lend any aid. Miss Wagner smashed with astonishing speed and on more than one occasion she hit Miss Sears with the ball. While Miss Wagner patroled the fore court, Miss Cassel was back at the baseline, ready for the few lobs which the defeated pair could send back.

The order of service was Miss Bjurstedt, Miss Cassel, Miss Sears and Miss Wagner. In both sets Miss Wagner and Miss Cassel were always in the lead and not once did they relinquish their advantage. The score was in their favor throughout. The Norse girl and the Boston player may have been a little over-confident at the start and the harmonious team play and aggressive attack of the state titleholders gave them a surprise at the start from which they never fully recovered.

As may be imagined, this match between four of the ranking women players of the country brought forth the fastest type of tennis. By directing the attack at Miss Sears, thereby barring Miss Bjurstedt from the rallies, Miss Wagner holding steadfastly to her place at the net was able to out-volley the Boston girl and even slam her with the ball before she could get out of the way. Even with Miss Bjurstedt at the base line, Miss Cassel often gained points with passing shots which were so beautifully placed that they sped by the girl from Norway unmolested.

James Burns, the professional at the Harvard Club was the umpire of the match and had words of praise for the manner in which Miss Wagner and Miss Cassel carried off the most sensational victory of the tournament.

While Miss Bjurstedt went down in defeat in the doubles, she came through the semi-finals of the women's cup singles with triumph, for she defeated Mrs. de Forest Candee in straight sets at 6—0, 6—1. The work of Miss Bjurstedt in this match was impressive at all times. She set such a fast pace in the opening set that Mrs. Candee was unable to win a single game. The Heights Casino champion was unable to cope with the superior play of her opponent and the best she could do in the second set was to gain one game. The scores were 6—0, 6—1.

The other semi-final in the singles will be played this morning at 10:30 when Miss Wagner will meet Miss Eleanor Goss in a match which should be one of the fastest of the tournament. The final between Miss Bjurstedt and the winner of the Wagner-Goss match will be played at 1:45. This match will be followed with an exhibition mixed doubles which will bring together Miss Bjurstedt and Frederick B. Alexander and Mrs. George Wrightman of Boston and Harry McNeal, professional at the Casino.

The summaries:

Heights Casino Women's Cup Doubles.—Final round—Miss Marie Wagner and Miss Clare Cassel defeated Miss Molla Bjurstedt and Miss Eleanora Sears, 6—4, 6—4.

Heights Casino Women's Cup Singles.—Semi-final round—Miss Molla Bjurstedt defeated Mrs. de Forest Candee, 6—0, 6—1.

TIGERS BEAT CRESCENTS.

Goal by Dickinson in Last Minute Wins Game.

A goal by Dickinson within one minute of the end of the game gave the Princeton Informals, the Nassau Five, a victory over the Cresent A. C. quintet last night in a nip-and-tuck game in the New Moon gymnasium in Brooklyn. The score was 28 to 27. This setback makes the second the Crescent A. C. five has suffered this week. The contest was one of the closest of the season for the club players. The score alternated frequently until Dickinson's goal near the end of the game put the collegians in front by a point margin. At the end of the first half the New Mooners were leading by 14 to 13.

NINE FOR HORACE MANN.

Poly Prep Five Is Defeated by 35 to 14 Score.

Horace Mann School's basket ball quintet annexed its ninth victory yesterday by trouncing the Poly Prep School five on the former's court by a score of 35 to 14. The victorious team clinched its success with an effective offensive in the second half. Eder, Van Benschoten and Pulleyn led the Horace Mann attack.

DEMPSEY HERE MONDAY.

Heavyweight Challenger Is Delayed at Kansas City.

Jack Dempsey, the Salt Lake City heavyweight, will not sign articles for the match until Monday. Dempsey was expected to arrive today, but encountered delay in his journey from Salt Lake City to New York. The challenger of Jess Willard is now en route from Kansas City, and is expected to arrive here tomorrow night or early Monday morning. It is planned to have a meeting between Promoter Rickard, Jack Kearns, Dempsey's manager, and the boxer, Monday afternoon, when the signatures of principals in the transaction will be affixed to articles of agreement.

Jack Kearns said he had received a wire from Dempsey, from Kansas City, in which the challenger notified his manager of severe illness in the Dempsey family. The heavyweight's brother expired from influenza and several other members of the family were down with the disease. Kearns is now in Philadelphia, awaiting a telegram from Dempsey conveying news of when the fighter will arrive in New York.

CANNEFAX FINISHES STRONG

St. Louis Player Beats Otis at Three Cushion Billiards.

Robert Cannefax of St. Louis, former three-cushion billiard champion, defeated Charles Otis of Brooklyn last night in the final block of their three nights' match at the Rational Recreation Academy in Brooklyn by a score of 57 to 48. The contest lasted eighty-six innings.

Cannefax made a high run of seven as his best effort, and also had two runs of five points. One of the latter runs was unfinished. Otis had a high run of four. The result of this block enabled Cannefax to come from behind, and take the match by a total score of 150 to 148.

Princeton Five Beats Rutgers.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Feb. 7.—Princeton's basket ball team defeated the Rutgers quintet here tonight by the score of 22 to 20. The contest went to an extra five-minute period before the winning team was decided. Opie, one of the Princeton forwards, caged the goal which gave the Princeton five victory. Opie's tally came within one minute of the final whistle.

No Deal for Chase Yet.

CINCINNATI, Feb. 7.—John J. McGraw, Manager of the New York Nationals, before he left Cincinnati tonight for Washington, said he had made no deal for any Cincinnati player. McGraw arrived here early today and during his stay discussed baseball matters with President August Herrmann of the local National League Club.

TITLE TOURNEY GOES TO WEST SIDE CLUB

National Tennis Singles to be Played at Forest Hills—Major Adee Re-elected.

The West Side Tennis Club at Forest Hills will again be the scene of the blue ribbon event of the tennis world, the national singles championship. The event was awarded to the Long Island club last night at the annual meeting of the United States National Lawn Tennis Association, at the Waldorf-Astoria. The date of the big tournament has not yet been decided, but it is probable that August 28 will be the day of starting. Besides having the singles, the West Side club will also hold the national, juniors', boys', father and son and veterans championships.

The convention yesterday was a quiet, harmonious affair, and the expected controversy over the equalization of voting power in the association failed to materialize. Clinton L. Childs of Pittsburgh, Chairman of the committee which has the matter in hand, recommended that the subject of voting power be postponed for another year. This policy was adopted, and the delegates gave up all their time to boosting the coming season, which promises to be the most active in the history of the organization.

The national juniors championship was made a fixture and new rules of eligibility were adopted governing the event. Hereafter juniors will be eligible whose eighteenth birthday is not later than March 1 of the year of competition, and in the boys' championships boys are eligible whose fifteenth birthday is not later than March 1 of the year of competition. These changes were made so that youngsters would not be barred from the title events at the end of the season, if they happen to pass the age limit during the season of competition. The association is doing everything in its power to encourage competition among the young players who have already attained a higher place in the game than ever before.

The association adopted the recommendations of the Davis Cup Committee that the international competition be resumed in 1920. The cup is now held by Australasia, and it was officially stated at the meeting that France had already challenged for the cup, and that the matches would probably be played before the end of 1919. President Adee told the convention that the United States would probably be invited to join the International Tennis Federation, an organization which was formed in 1913. The United States National Lawn Tennis Association declined to join at that time because its amateur rule did not conform with the amateur rule laid down by the federation.

This international body had not got under way, however, when the war stopped its activities, but France is now reviving the organization, and President Adee said that the United States would probably be asked again to join. The object of the body is to unify the tennis rules for all tennis playing nations and to establish world's championship events. S. W. Merrihew told the delegates that the difference in the rules in this country and those of foreign countries differ only in minor features and he advocated a unification of the rules in all tennis playing countries.

A change was made in the rules governing the playing of the nationals doubles championship. The policy reverts to the manner in which it was formerly played. Only teams will be eligible which have won sectional titles. There are eleven sections in the association, and these sections will each hold a championship, the winners playing in the national tournament. The winners will then play the championship team of the previous year for the title. The championship doubles was awarded to the Longwood Cricket Club of Boston.

The other title fixtures for the season were awarded as follows: National clay court championships, South Side Tennis Club, Chicago; women's singles and doubles championships and girls' and junior singles and doubles, Philadelphia Cricket Club.

he indoor championships, men's, women's, juniors, and boys, and the girls' tournaments were awarded to the Seventh Regiment Tennis Club of this city.

Officers and sectional delegates were elected as follows: President, Major I. Adee; Vice President, Julian S. Myrick; Secretary, Edwin F. Torrey; Treasurer, Alfred H. Chapin. For members of the Executive Committee, Joseph S. Clark, Henry W. Slocum, and Major Robert D. Wrenn. For Sectional Delegates, Middle States, Joseph M. Jennings of Philadelphia; Middle Atlantic, Abner Y. Leach, Jr., of Washington, D. C.; Delegate at Large, Capt. R. Norris Williams 2d, Captain Watson M. Washburn, and Lieutenant Craig Biddle.

Last night the association held its annual banquet, which was a victory dinner for Major Adee.

HOCKEY TEAMS IN TIE.

Jamaica Now on Even Terms with Manual and Erasmus.

Jamaica High School's hockey sextet moved into a tie with Manual Training H. S. and Erasmus Hall H. S. in the chase for the P. S. A. L. Brooklyn scholastic hockey title last night by trouncing the Boys' H. S. skaters to the tune of 5 goals to 0. The Long Island lads easily outclassed their rivals and never left the issue in doubt. R. Thompson and H. Thompson, brothers, made a family matter of the contest, each scoring two goals. Jamaica's success placed the team on even terms with Manual Training and Erasmus Hall, each school having won 3 games and lost 1.

Poly Prep School's sextet of skaters made a walkaway of their game against Manual Training H. S., which furnished the other half of a double-header. The Poly Prey skaters won by 9 goals to 0. This result was achieved principally through the remarkable ability of Frank Farah, the Poly Prep centre. He scored five of his team's goals, three in the second period and two in the first. H. Farah, a brother accounted for two goals. The lineups:

Poly Prep, (9.)	Position.	Manual T., (0.)
Lott	G.	Caddy
Dopple	P.	Kelly
Jelliffe	C. P.	Titus
F. Farah	C.	Maas
H. Farah	L. W.	Drysdale

TELLIER GOES TO BRAEBURN

Noted Golf Pro Engaged on Newton Course for Coming Season.

Word was received last night to the effect that Louis Tellier, at present employed in this city, has been engaged as professional by the Braeburn Club. Tellier was the Brookline "pro" last season.

According to an official of the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association there is no certainty that the intercity matches for the Griscom Cup will be held over a Long Island course. It will be recalled that at the recent annual meeting of the association Mrs. J. E. Davis stated that either Piping Rock or Nassau would be glad to handle the attraction. There is a belief, however, that a Westchester course may be chosen.

The Elmira Country Club has engaged Tom Bonnar as its professional for the coming season. Several other clubs are expected to sign up new professionals in the near future. The Essex Fells job is open and the same may be said of Ridgewood, St. Albans, Hollywood, and Richmond County.

CLASS C CUE TITLE WON BY NEUSTADT

Brooklyn Billiard Player Wrests National Championship from Unger Handily.

Joseph Neustadt of Brooklyn won the national amateur Class C 18.2 balkline billiard championship last night at Lawler Brothers' Academy in Brooklyn, when he defeated Ferdinand A. Unger of Newark, N. J., last year's titleholder, in the closing game of the N. A. A. B. P. tournament by the convincing margin of 150 to 113.

The contest was completed in twenty-seven innings and furnished a peculiarly fitting climax to one of the best championship tournaments of this class ever held.

Neustadt, playing in Class A form in his latter innings, averaged 5 15-27. He had high runs of [illegible] and 22. Unger showed the strain of the arduous campaign he has had in trying to successfully defend his crown. He averaged 4 9-26 and had a high run of 19.

Neustadt did not loom up dangerously until the seventeenth inning. A run of seventeen in this inning gave the Brooklynite a two points' advantage. This spelled disaster for Unger. Two innings later, Neustadt collected twenty-three and went to the front never to be displaced.

Neustadt's accomplishments in this tournament have been remarkable. He was competing in his second tournament, although he has played billiards for years. From the very beginning the Brooklynite displayed a type of playing that attracted immediate attention—so much so that early it was predicted he would displace Unger.

Unger started off in the lead, and at the fourth inning had a margin of 41 to 5. This was cut down by Neustadt at the ninth inning, when Unger showed in front by 46 to 44. At the fifteenth inning the Newark player had again forged to the front, leading by 85 to 67. Neustadt's remarkable display started shortly after, and Unger was displaced as champion. A record crowd witnessed the match.

The score:

J. Neustadt.—0 2 0 8 4 1 2 23 1 5 3 0 4 10 7 15 7 0 22 1 0 0 1 0 14 16—150. Average, 5 15-27. High runs, 23 and 22.

F. A. Unger.—12 11 2 1 8 3 0 0 2 0 0 1 4 12 19 3 1 1 2 8 0 0 1 11 1 3 1—113. Average, 4 9-26. High run, 19.

RUTGERS PLACE FIVE WINS.

Defeats Salem-Crescents for Sixth Victory.

The Rutgers Place basket ball team won another victory last night in the 145-pound A. A. U. championship tournament, defeating the Salem-Crescent five by a score of 34 to 29. The Rutgers Place team has now won six games.

LAGONIA HAS CLOSE SHAVE.

Noted Boxer in Hard Bout with Silverstein Before Tars.

Frank Lagonia, metropolitan and New York State amateur 1[illegible]-pound boxing champion, narrowly escaped defeat last night in the tournament conducted by the New York A. C. for the wounded soldiers at Embarkation Hospital 5, Grand Central Palace. Lagonia opposed S. Silverstein, Union Settlement A. C., and after three hard rounds the title holder was awarded the judges' decision.

J. Spartan, Pastime A. C., and M. Hill, unattached, furnished an interesting four-round session at 135 pounds.

The summaries:

140-Pound Class.—F. Verona, Bronxdale A. C., defeated B. Miller, unattached, one round; referee's decision. E. Crozier, Bronxdale A. C., defeated R. Bokma, Pastime A. C., three rounds; judges' decision.

TIGERS LOSE HOCKEY GAME.

Princeton Skaters Defeated by Newark Seven, 6 to 4.

Princeton's hockey seven was defeated by the Newark Hockey Club skaters last night in an interesting game at the Newark Ice Palace, Newark, N. J. The score was 6 goals to 4. This contest opened the season for the Newark H. C. team, which displayed excellent form and outplayed their collegiate rivals.

Herder, a former Terra Nova, Canada, player, led the Newark club's attack and accounted for two goals. A brace of goals was also scored by F. Winter and D. Winter, brothers.

The lineup:

Newark H.C., (6.)	Position.	Princeton, (4.)
Dodd	G.	Piper
Loutrel	P.	Haight
F. Winter	C.P.	Lincoln
Hart	R.	Rue
Herder	C.	Raleigh
Jewett	L.W.	Scheeler
D. Winter	R.W.	Keyes

Goals—First period: For Newark H. C.—F. Winter, in 2:00; Herder, in 5:00; Jewett, in 14:00. For Princeton—Raleigh, in 4:00; Rue, in 10:00. Second period: For Newark H. C.—Jewett, in 11:00; Herder, in 13:00; D. Winter, in 14:00. For Princeton—Lincoln, in 5:00; Keyes, in 12:00. Substitutions—For Princeton: Taylor for Piper, Knox for Lincoln, Roberts for Scheeler. Referee—H. J. Koehler, Jr., East Orange. Goal umpires—Messrs. Boyd and Smith. Timekeeper—Mr. Gray, Princeton. Time of periods—Twenty minutes.

MOTOR SHOW TO END WITH NEW EXHIBITS

Passenger Car Section Closes Tonight to Make Way for Commercial Vehicles.

OPENS AGAIN ON MONDAY

Many New Trucks and Tractors to be Shown — Manufacturer Praises New York Dealers.

Automobiles continued to attract fully as much interest toward the end of the passenger car show week yesterday in Madison Square Garden and the Sixty-ninth Regiment Armory as on the opening day. It was Engineers' Day, and several hundred delegates who have been attending the annual meeting of the Society of Automobile Engineers were present. The attendance was as large as on the opening day.

The first section of the show will close tonight and on Monday the second week's show, which will be restricted to motor trucks and smaller commercial vehicles, tractors, and trailers, will be opened in both buildings. Appreciation of the action of the New York dealers in conducting the show when it was deemed best by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce to abandon it for 1919 was expressed in a letter received yesterday by the officials of the show from Edward S. Jordan, President of the Jordan Motor Car Company.

"The manufacturers must be sensible of the great work you have done," he wrote. "Those who said the dealers could not work together must be thrilled by the results of the sincere and united co-operative action. The show has been a tremendous success."

The Cole "Aero-eight" cars have been one of the attractive exhibits in the Garden. They retain practically the same appearance as last year, but show many minor improvements which enhance the attractiveness of both the open and closed models. The roadster accentuates the straight line effect of the aerotype body, and is finished in a naval gray, with gray fenders. On one side is a golf compartment, and a baggage receptacle on the other.

The Cole tourster has a rich blue body with wheels to match. Among the closed models showing attractive designs and the best appointments are the coupé, sedan, and town car. The latter is only made to special order.

One of the newer cars which has attracted considerable interest is the six-cylinder American, of which a chassis, the roadster, and five-passenger touring car are shown. A new transmission is one of the year's improvements, and the slanting wind shield is another new feature.

The King eight-cylinder models have been slightly modified in their lines and the finish of the top. A new type of ignition has been installed this season and the former propeller shaft brake has been removed, placing both brakes on the rear wheels. The wheel base length of 120 inches is still retained. The rear suspension is the cantilever spring used in the King cars for several years.

The Marmon cars have been one of the most popular exhibits in the Garden. Their characteristic features are the generous use of aluminium, the Z-section frame, the three-piece touring body, the compound cantilever cross-suspension type of rear springs, and the transmission held in suspension on the front end of the torque tube.

The Maxwell cars, both open and closed models, use the same chassis. The body designs have been improved in many respects and the three-passenger coupé has been one of the features of the show for a low-priced closed car. The sedan is a very roomy car for a moderate wheel base. The small and large Chalmers open touring cars, displayed with the Maxwell product, have been designed with the particular aim of giving the utmost comfort for long trips.

BOYS DO BIG SOLDIER TRADE

MINEOLA, L. I., Feb. 7.—The military police were startled today when they found three New York newsboys in camp, the oldest 17, with $2,050 cash among them. Earlier in the day the authorities had revoked all passes to Camp Mills, so the three boys, who were selling tidies, embroidered pillowcases, looking glasses, and other attractive novelties to solders just returned from France, were gathered in.

The boys were not alarmed over the lack of passes, and that they should have so much money they looked upon as a matter of course, explaining that business had been brisk. They said the money represented their capital and earnings of the last few days. Samuel Feschmar of 237 East Houston Street had $1,600, Isadore Fox of 161 Broome Street $250, and little Morris Falkenstein of 123 Christie Street $200.

For the most part, the boy merchants said, they found the soldiers good spenders and not inclined to haggle over prices. Sometimes when business got dull they livened it up by giving free copies of newspapers. They were allowed to go after promising to take their money right home.

BARNES CHIDES WOMEN.

Says They Must Now Approach Public Matters Regardless of Sex.

ALBANY, Feb. 7.—Woman suffragists of Albany who objected to the selection of United States Senator Wadsworth as a speaker at the first annual luncheon of the Albany County Republican Women's organization next Wednesday because of his anti-suffrage stand were admonished by William Barnes today "to approach public matters regardless of sex."

The protest against Senator Wadsworth as a speaker was sent to Mr. Barnes by Mrs. J. Archibald Clark, a local suffragist, who announced that unless the senior Senator from New York were withdrawn from the speaker's list many suffragists would refuse to attend the luncheon.

Mrs. Clark today received a reply from Mr. Barnes in which he said:

"The women of the State of New York, having secured the franchise, have no right to approach their responsibility as women, but as citizens, as men should do. The conferring of the privilege of voting compels them, in justice to themselves, to approach public matters regardless of sex."

POST FOR ARGONNE VETERAN

Lieut. Johnson, Wounded in France, Made a Deputy Attorney General.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 7.—Lieutenant Cortland A. Johnson of Nassau, who lost an arm while fighting the Germans with the 165th Regiment, was today appointed Deputy Attorney General in the New York City Bureau by Attorney General Charles D. Newton.

Lieutenant Johnson lost his arm in the drive in the Argonne Forest. He has been decorated for distinguished service, and is now in the Walter Reed Hospital in Washington. The salary of his new post is $4,000 a year.

OPERA

By James Gibbons Huneker

Galli-Curci as "Lucia."

We regret that Amelita Galli-Curci saw fit to make her re-entrance last Tuesday evening in "Linda" instead of "Lucia di Lammermoor." Last night at the Lexington Theatre she sang "Lucia," with the Chicago Opera Association, and in a different mood. Maestro Campanini was at the helm, and he squeezed every drop of blood from the venerable but still vital score. A huge audience responded generously to this prima-donna, and that, no doubt, contributed to her brilliant work. And Marcella Sembrich sat in the Director's box and evidently the presence of this great artist stimulated the younger woman.

She sang her first scene and aria in excellent voice and the cantilena was luscious and legato. She overemphasizes portamenbo in her phrasing and sometimes creates an appealing effect; but it is a mannerism that is apt to grow apace. Her deviation from normal pitch persists, and probably will persist, so the best thing is not to notice it, rather not allude to it, for a Spanish proverb says that in the house of the hangman no one speaks of the rope. Her tendency to flatten should be accepted as we accept a slight cast in the eye of a pretty woman. The blemish through force of habit becomes an ornament.

Her mad scene was successfully sung, and the cadenzas were repeated after thunderous applause. The top-tone was as clear and crystalline as a bell—a velvet bell. Her coloratura was good, but not unique. Her acting was the acting of a lady with an anxious larynx. But what sweet lyric voice is hers, and when the staccato hifalutin is finished her artistic career will surely be clear for better things.

A veritable triumph was the début in opera here, for he sang in concert last Sunday night at the Hippodrome, of Alessandro Dolci, a young tenor with a robust organ; one might call him tenore sforzando, so ringing are his high tones, but he has a rocky road to Dublin before him, artistically speaking. Vibrant, full of color, Signor Dolci—who is not dulcet in his methods—shouts down all his colleagues. He has power, a temperament, and a plentiful lack of taste and finesse; furthermore, he misses distinction both of presence and style. But he made a vociferous hit. The sextet was so indifferently sung that it was redemanded. There were many shivering larynxes on the stage last night.

"Pagliacci" and "L'Oracolo" Sung.

Caruso in "Pagliacci," preceded by "L'Oracolo," drew a capacity house at the Metropolitan last evening. In Leoni's opera were Mmes. Easton and Brasiau, Messrs. Scotti, Didur, Althouse and others, while in Leoncavallo's work Miss Muzio sang the heroine, and Mr. Montesanto the prologue. Mr. Moranzoni conducted.

Matinees of Ibsen's "Ghosts."

Yesterday afternoon at the Longacre Theatre "Ghosts" was produced by Robert Whittier, an Ibsen actor of some experience, who played the part of Oswald. The Mrs. Alving was Maud Hildyard, an English actress, formerly associated with Beerbohm Tree, who has not been seen here hitherto. Regina was played by Helen Freeman, formerly leading lady with William Gillette. The Engstrand was Wallis Clark, who plays Gaffer Tyl in "The Betrothal," and the Pastor Manders was Augustin Duncan, the Great Ancestor of Tyltyl. The performance will be repeated on Friday afternoon, Feb. 14.

Orchestral Society in New Works.

Ralph Korn's "In Memoriam," Mortimer Wilson's suite, "In Georgia," and William Schroeder's "Carnival March of the Gnomes" were produced for the first time at a concert of the Orchestral Society of New York led by Max Jacobs last evening in Aeolian Hall. The program opened with Brahms's "Tragic" overture and the Fifth Symphony of Tschaikovsky.

The Philharmonic Gives Matinee.

The Philharmonic Society gave a special matinée yesterday in Carnegie Hall, when Mr. Stransky conducted Beethoven's "Eroica" symphony and Chabrier's rhapsody, "España." Yolanda Mero was unable to appear and in her place Ethel Legenaka was heard in Rubinstein's Concerto No. 4 for piano and orchestra. The audience was a large one.

S. L. Rothapfel to be Film Producer.

Samuel L. Rothapfel, who recently resigned as managing director of the Rivoli and Rialto Thatres, has become the President of the Rothapfel Pictures Corporation, it was announced yesterday. The plan of the corporation is to issue six "Rothapfel Programs" a year, each to be a complete entertainment, including a photoplay, comedy, scenic and news films, musical scores, instructions for lighting effects, and incidental numbers.

The corporation will produce dramatic and other pictures under the personal supervision of Mr. Rothapfel. Officers of the corporation, in addition to Mr. Rothapfel, are: Frank G. Hall, Vice President; Ashbel P. Fitch, Treasurer, and William Seabury, Secretary. The offices are at 130 West Forty-sixth Street.

Benefit Gives Actors' Fund $6,000.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 7.—A benefit performance in aid of the Actors' Fund of America, given this afternoon at the Forrest Theatre, realized about $6,000. The performance is the second of a series which will be given in the principal cities, the first having taken place in New York. Daniel Frohman, President of the fund, was present and made an address.

Studying Tax Problems.

The course on Federal tax reports given under the direction of the New York University School of Commerce by Mark Eisner, Internal Revenue Collector for the Third New York District, yesterday had an enrollment of 250, including tax agents, accountants, and special students. The attendance is 25 per cent. larger than that at the course given last year at the university. The classes are held on Wednesday evenings, and, in addition to lectures on tax reports by Mr. Eisner, a detailed study of the new Federal income tax will be made.

Asks for Papers in Crowder Case.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—Representative McKenzie, of Illinois, a Republican member of the House Military Committee, introduced a resolution today calling on Secretary Baker for all correspondence and papers relating to General Crowder's regulations for training draft registrants. It was referred to the Military Committee. The purpose is to bring out exchanges between Secretary Baker and General March and General Crowder, which gave rise to a report that General Crowder had been reprimanded.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

Bertha Kalich, who has been ill, it is announced, will reappear tonight in "The Riddle: Woman" at the Fulton Theatre. Beginning next week extra matinees will be given.

Cosmo Hamilton's play, "Scandal," will open tonight in Springfield, Mass.

Beatrice Herford will give a series of Monday matinees at the Booth Theatre, beginning on Feb. 17.

The Friars dinner to Frank Bacon, which was announced for tomorrow night, has been postponed until the following Sunday.

A performance of "Tea for Three" by the company now appearing at Maxine Elliott's will be given tomorrow night at Sing Sing Prison, under the auspices of the Mutual Welfare League.

The New Theatre Ticket Ordinance

Has made little change in the methods of conducting the business of TYSON & COMPANY. Before the ordinance went into effect, ninety-nine per cent. of the tickets sold at our offices were sold at an advance of fifty cents above the Box Office price; the other one per cent. on which we charged in excess of fifty cents above the Box Office price were orders executed for the convenience of our patrons, and on which we were forced to pay an advance in price to secure the location desired.

We were one of the first to secure a license under the new ordinance, and we employ no subterfuge methods to evade the purpose of this law. No additional charge is made for the delivery of tickets to any part of the city, or for carrying charge accounts. All theatre tickets are sold at fifty cents in advance of the Box Office price. Subscription tickets for the Metropolitan Opera are sold at Box Office prices. We maintain a department for the re-sale of subscription tickets for single performances, for which we make a charge of ten per cent. where sales are made.

We have two offices. Note the location and telephone numbers.

THE MORNING AFTER

WHAT happened this morning when you first began to remember yesterday?

Did all of yesterday's omissions, cares and problems come over you like a bank of fog?

Or is your morning shot with the sunlight of bright recollections of a play you saw last night—a smart line, the chipper melody of a new song, a pretty face, a dress you'd like to own?

An evening at the theatre is insurance on tomorrow. Let us make out your policy for you at any of our offices.

THE UNIONS' RAILWAY BILL.

There is nothing to laugh at in the proposal of "two million unionists"—really the proposal of half a dozen labor leaders—that the Government should buy the railways and intrust them to unionists to operate for joint account, on a co-operative basis, the taxpayers, of course, to make good all deficits. The idea may seem absurd to taxpayers who are finding a billion for railway wages already, and to those who think that the owners of property have rights which Government and unionists should respect. But "labor" takes itself seriously, and current events in every land washed by the Seven Seas show that it is necessary to argue with labor seriously, either with reason or with organization and resolution equal to labor's. Unionists are armies in numbers, discipline, leadership, and, it is said with regret, lack of scruple ofttentimes. American unionists are not Bolshevist in their aims, but they are so convinced of their strength, and the excellence of their motives and plans, that they stick at nothing to carry their points.

Only a year or two ago we laughed at Socialist Sunday schools. More recently we have been taken by surprise at the discovery that there were anarchists among us, and have prepared to deport them, and to prevent the arrival of more by immigration. Yet the fact is that sentiments of that sort are pretentiously international in their quality, and so far from being alien that they were practiced here before the foreign words for the hateful things were known to Americans born. Bombs were used in American industrial disputes when foreign syndicalists merely talked of the religion and philosophy of violence. Sabotage was used in France earlier than in the United States, but the thing was done here before the word was imported. In his book dated 1913 JOHN GRAHAM BROOKS said that the I. W. W. was as American as the Republican Party.

The case is not desperate because it is serious. Our American workmen are neither better nor worse than our capitalists. Both have a way of putting their point of view cogently when they are misunderstood and mistreated. And both alike must surrender positions when wrongly taken contrary to the superior general interest. It is not for the common good that either labor or capital should seek its way by domination, as both have done. But it is just as necessary that they both should understand the respective points of view as that either should. The temptation should be resisted to reject summarily, or to ridicule, the proposition of a twenty-billion-dollar corporation with capital represented solely by operating ability. The thought there is that the labor which gives its life to any productive enterprise has an investment as truly as those who put in capital. The capital may be lost, but the life and labor certainly will be expended completely. There are differences of opinion as to how far that thought carries weight, but labor's point of view is entitled to what weight labor gives it by its loyalty to the undertaking in which that property is invested alongside dollars.

Another thought implicit in this as in other labor proposals is that the community is as much a partner in industrial enterprises of the scope and size of railways as either capital or labor, or rather both together. Railways are not for the profit of their shareholders alone, any more than jobs are for wages alone. Investments of either capital or labor are for the profit of those who use the products of both under the protection of our institutions, which both voluntarily should respect, or must be taught to respect, in the manner appropriate to the necessity.

Therefore, speaking seriously and sympathetically, but with resolute dissent, the proposal that railways should be intrusted solely to wage-earners must be condemned for the reason that it is neither representative nor responsible. It would not be fit to adopt even if it would produce the benefits which the promoters promise as positively as the regulators and reformers, who have shown themselves no more trustworthy. We have been disappointed so completely in proposals which should both reduce rates and increase wages that we are shy of another of the same sort. Rates and wages are of small importance compared with the service of commerce, and already it is complaining of the intrustment of the railways to interests antagonistic to labor, or at least not representing labor. Neither does this proposal represent labor so much as it represents the organizers of labor.

The second reason why the proposal is unacceptable is that it is not responsible. It is not accompanied with any engagement on the part of labor that it would invest its life and toil in the enterprise. It would not stand by the railways through stress and storm as capital investment must, and is doing. Railway investments are different from any other. Factories may be turned to many uses, just as workers turn from one job to another. A railway is a railway or nothing. Commitments to railways are irretrievable except by success. Speculators and workers of shifty ideas may dodge in and out of railways, but multitudes have found that the dollars put into them never return. Unless labor gives its bond to invest in railways in that manner, to support them instead of to exploit them, the proposal that it should be allowed to operate them must be taken as an example of psychopathic conflagration, rather than as a business plan.

WEIMAR.

"We will call on the old German spirit of Weimar," says Chancellor EBERT, calling the National Assembly to order; "we will be an empire of justice and truth." Fine words; nor should anybody say, with Dean SWIFT: "I wonder where you stole 'um." The straggling little capital of KARL AUGUST and one knows not how many other perruqued Grand Dukes, the charming, old-fashioned city on the Ilm, at its best a sort of memorial of fantastic, easy, outworn principalities like Prince OTTO's, holds the graves not only of the Olympians and romantics, of GOETHE and SCHILLER, but of NIETZSCHE, the sophister of megalomania, of master-and-slave morality, the half-mad pretentious humorist and rhetorician, the sick man doting on brutal strength, the poet-"philosopher" who anticipated the fatal spree of German "domination."

The great sources of the German Fake's Progress are historical, and he is but an episode attractive to unseasoned minds. It is a queer coincidence, none the less, that the rebirth or reaction of the German people, if yet there be truly a German people, is to come from Weimar. GOETHE or NIETZSCHE? "We were content," wrote GOETHE, "to let people go their own way." "The most powerful nation," said SCHILLER, "is but a "fragment; and thinking minds will "not grow warm on its account, except in so far as this nation or its "fortunes have exercised influence on "the progress of the species." In calling on the "old German spirit of Weimar," Chancellor EBERT makes a perilous or a fortunate invocation, according to the will and work of the National Assembly.

Tranquil old sprawling town of memories and monuments, of pictures and libraries and pleasure gardens! As one reads of the multiplicity of colored cards required there today for lodging and feeding and what not, one remembers with regret many a Hof and Keller of that quiet inheritor of old traditions, that earlier Germany, seeing which the pilgrim forgot the deadly opposite Germany whose horrible war memorials were not spared even to Weimar. "Licht, Liebe, Leben"—how absurd and unreal HERDER's motto sounds. The Golden Eagle, the Elephant, the queer old homely inns, were they ever there, were they but somnambulists, the thousands who imagined that in Weimar they saw a corner of the antique world?

SAILORS AND FOOD SHIPS.

"Our only hope," said a German paper, the Weser-Zeitung, last week, "is that America will send us the necessary foodstuffs." Two days earlier the Norwegian Seamen's Union had by resolution declared that the Berlin Government must pay $4,000,000 to relatives of members killed by U-boats before it would assist in carrying food to Germany. Whereupon Norway's Government decided to send delegates to Paris with a list of the nation's lost ships, asking that all should be replaced by German vessels and that pensions should be provided for "a thousand families left destitute and dependent upon the State." Germany sank 831 Norwegian ships and killed 1,120 of their seamen, many of them by gunfire while they were in lifeboats. This week the Danish Sailors' Union has prepared a claim for the relief of dependents of men who were lost with more than 100 ships.

The seamen of these two countries have now joined those of Great Britain and France in their boycott of Germany on the seas. They will be represented three weeks hence at the international conference, which, it is expected, will not only demand compensation for the relatives of submarine victims but also insist that the ex-Kaiser shall be tried for piracy by an international tribunal. The British Seamen's Union lost 17,000 members. It may be necessary to man the surrendered German ships exclusively with sailors from the British and American Navies.

If the shipment of food to them is delayed, the Germans may be led to admit that sailors of neutral and hostile belligerent countries have just ground for complaint. They are now protesting against the blockade because it restrains their fishermen in the Baltic, and apparently have forgotten that their submarines wantonly sank many Dutch and Norwegian fishing schooners, murdering with shrapnel those who tried to escape in small boats. Longing now for American food, they do not seem to remember that they destroyed a dozen ships of the Relief Commission that were carrying food from this country to the hungry Belgians, and also vessels with cargoes of our grain for Switzerland, Holland, Sweden, and other neutral nations which had been increasing their own supply of food. The bereaved families and mourning associates of murdered sailors do not forget.

A SOLDIER'S PROPOSAL.

An organization of soldiers of the Western Allies, World War Veterans, is proposed by General JOHN A. JOHNSTON, commander of the 34th Division. "Such an association," he says, "could do much among the people in "all the allied countries to strengthen "a world-viewing sentiment for the "very things which the League of "Nations aims to create nationally." A brotherhood of men who served in the war, whether they went into battle or not, would be a formative influence for peace and good-will on earth. No comradeship can be more enduring than that of men who have mingled in the camp and field to maintain a righteous cause—and never was cause nobler than that which called the Allies to war and was crowned with victory.

In such an organization as General JOHNSTON urges, the men of sober judgment, the men who abhor war because they have experienced its horrors and seen the devastation of homes and industry wrought by it, would assume leadership by consent of their fellows. They would be a restraint upon prejudice and jingoism, not only in the ranks of their association but in all the walks of civil life. The World War Veterans would not be misled by sinister propaganda designed to embroil the nations in another war. That propaganda is active even now, while the terms of peace are being arranged and its purpose is to set the American soldier against his French comrade in arms, and to make bad blood between the Americans and the British.

That soldiers of the Allies would have their differences and sometimes quarrel was to be expected—there are hot-headed men in every camp—but the distortion of occasional lapses from harmony into proof of racial antipathy to the Americans can usually be traced to German or pro-German sources. It imposes upon the ignorant, it inflames prejudice, it subtly suggests that the next war will be with one or more of our allies, although honest and sensible men are striving to banish war altogether. The poison is being instilled wherever and whenever it will breed dissension.

Now, if such an organization as General JOHNSTON proposes will counteract vicious propaganda and strengthen the tie between officers and soldiers of the Allies, it is a good thing, and the idea should be sown broadcast to germinate and bear fruit. Certainly it ought to be the pride of comrades in arms to keep up their association for the promotion of interests which they should have in common, chief of which is the prevention of another war of magnitude, with its terrible sacrifice of life and its appalling waste of the products of industry. The nucleus of such an organization would attract intelligent and patriotic men, and there need be no fear that its influence would not be wholesome and beneficial.

AFTERTHOUGHTS OF A MAGYAR STATESMAN.

It is indicative of the unregenerate state of mind still prevailing in some circles in Central Europe that the Pester Lloyd thinks it can prove that Hungary hated German militarism, and that she was forced into a war of self-defense against Serbia and Russia, by publishing a certain letter written by Count STEPHEN TISZA in September, 1917. It is true that TISZA says some harsh things about the Prussian Conservatives and the Kaiser. But his objection against the Conservatives is that "by their political narrowness, "their selfishness, and their preju-"dices they form a source of eternal "complications, difficulties, and dan-"gers." The specific manifestation of this, which evoked his letter, was an article in the Kreuz-Zeitung favoring a German-Russian alliance after the war, which of course would have been greatly to the disadvantage of Hungary.

TISZA says that Germany could choose between Russia and Hungary as Allies. If she chose Russia she could make herself supreme in Western Europe, but would have to restrict her designs in the Balkans and Western Asia; no more Mitteleuropa, no more Berlin-to-Bagdad. Now it was obvious at that time to much less intelligent persons than STEPHEN TISZA that Germany was trying to do the two things at once, to accomplish in one war her domination of Western Europe and Western Asia, and that she was not succeeding very well. The war that was to be short and glorious was already long and exhausting, and there was a visible possibility of ultimate defeat. TISZA's grievance against the Germans was that they were rushing violently down a steep place into the sea and carrying the Magyars with them.

This is apparent enough from his comment on the Kaiser. He criticises him, but for what? For making enemies where BISMARCK made friends—friends who could be thrown over when their usefulness was at an end, but who could be useful for a time. In other words, he accuses the Kaiser of crude methods rather than unworthy ends.

Anyhow, despite its disadvantages, Hungary must stick to the German alliance. "But of course we must strive "to exercise influence on the foreign "policy * * * and try to see that "the game is played better than has "been the case so far." That is to say, these Prussians have gone mad, and are likely to ruin themselves and us too; we must calm them down. "We ought to be the ally of Germany, "not its vassal, something that is in-"deed a question of actual relative "force and therefore depends on the "apparent condition of our mon-"archy." And at this point TISZA's views come into contact with a cold fact which was known to him as well as to any one else—that however Hungary might be dissatisfied with her position as the slave who must follow the master to ruin, she had no choice. TISZA might talk about influencing the policy of Germany, but "it is a question of actual relative force." The war of 1866, and the Austro-Hungarian compromise of 1867, meant the end of Hapsburg power. By that war and that diplomatic arrangement BISMARCK left the Dual Monarchy in a position where Austrian and Magyar, each in his half of the realm, was supreme over the subject nationalities, where the Magyar even had a slight advantage over the Austrian, but where each depended for his position, internally and externally, on the favor of Prussia. TISZA knew as well as BISMARCK and LUDENDORFF that Hungary could have no material influence on German foreign policy, because Hungary and Austria were only conveniences for Germany, whereas Germany was essential to their existence.

There was only one way out, and that way had been closed before TISZA wrote. If, years ago, the Austrians and Magyars had voluntarily given up their supremacy and allowed the subject nationalities freedom within the Hapsburg realm, they might have created a Federal State which could have pursued a policy of its own. But that chance had been thrown away, and by just such men as TISZA. On Oct. 18 last he stood up for the last time in the Hungarian Parliament and spoke vehemently against any concession to the Rumanians; and a week later the Hungarian monarchy was exploded by revolution.

APPLEJACK AND THE CONSTITUTION.

If "Massachusetts, GOD forgive her, she's a-kneelin' with the rest," as the sons of Belial would say, to prohibition, Connecticut is refractory and malignant, and Rhode Island, too, possibly on account of Providence, which in the old legendary evil days shared with Bridgeport, Conn., the glory of being the "most immoral city in the United States." Rhode Island has turned her face against the light. Two Puritan Commonwealths have thus denied the doctrine asserted naively before the middle of the seventeenth century by the venerable painful preacher, HIGGINSON of Massachusetts Bay, that water is potable. In England it had never occurred to him that ST. FRANCIS's "Sister Water" was intended for interior purposes.

Now New Jersey, part Puritan, looks back to ROBERT TREAT and all the Puritan ancients, and says through a rather curious organ, the Hon. JAMES R. NUGENT, deposed and undeposable, that prohibition "will "have no chance in the legislative "halls this year, not as long as I "have anything to say on the sub-"ject," and Mr. NUGENT will have much to say on this subject, no doubt, whether anybody listens to him or not. As a fount and origin of what is said to be one of our lightest, most congenial, and most innocuous light wines of the country, Jersey applejack, New Jersey's course in regard to prohibition may be watched with feverish interest by persons feverishly interested.

The interest of THE TIMES, however, is in another direction. When a statesman of Mr. NUGENT's training and capacity insists that "an amend-"ment so revolutionary in character "cannot be adopted without the con-"sent of all the States," the friends of the Constitution, even those among whom it is a little thing among friends, must prick up their ears and hearts. The doctrine is strange, searching, powerful. So, the sociologists who have investigated Jersey applejack tell us, is that Jersey wine.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

His Eminence Dearly Purchased.

Fame, of a sort, and real though not exactly enjoyable, has just been achieved by one SEYMOUR L. RAU, by profession or trade what is described as a "security broker." Mr. RAU's claim to attention lies in the fact that he is the first of America's millions to have been convicted of not having made an income tax return and as yet he is the only man thus convicted. How long he will remain solitary, and whether or not he should be so now—those are questions beyond answering, though as to the second of them, at least, it is permissible to have an opinion—easier to have than safe to express, perhaps.

The consequences of Mr. RAU's negligence, however, are such as to make him a solemn warning to all and sundry who may contemplate taking the chance he did, that they had better not do it. The verdict in the Federal District Court, where he was tried before Judge KNOX, is that Mr. RAU must (a) pay twice the tax of $162.25 that he should have paid and didn't; (b) pay two fines of $150 each, and (c) be imprisoned for thirty days.

Mr. RAU contended that if he sinned, it was in the innocence of ignorance, he having listened to the advice of certain anabaptists who did vainly say that, as the business house with which he is connected had paid its tax, he would not be taxed on an income derived therefrom. For various reasons—among them, possibly, reluctance to believe that a broker, and especially a security broker, could be as unsophisticated as that—his defense was declared inadequate and doom was pronounced.

Whoever would not suffer as did Mr. RAU, or worse, should heed the lesson. The income tax should be paid, and it must be. To escape it is conceivable, but attempts to do so will be so rarely successful that the moderately wise will not make them.

Resignation Can Be Achieved.

Before yielding to that most natural and common of human inclinations—the inclination to complain that any tax is a burden both obnoxious and cruel—it will be well, in the case of the new income tax, to look for what may be its compensatory features. By careful search they are discoverable, and even though the compensation may not be complete, they will go, if taken precisely right, some way in that direction.

For instance, the mere reading of the law as it takes its dignified course from page to page of the one paper that printed it in full—of course, that was THE TIMES—is in itself a highly educational exercise. Not many of us can hope to understand it all, or to keep all its provisions and exceptions firmly fixed in mind, but we can do our best, and, so doing, will learn, in the degrees of our several capacities, how it is that a nation compelled to raise a huge sum of money sets about the accomplishment of that task.

And this law, like its predecessors, will have the admirable effect of making innumerable people get, and maintain a definite understanding of their own financial resources, the origins of them, and the expenditures they warrant or permit. That is useful knowledge, and the habit of "keeping books" that springs from it is a highly valuable one to acquire. It is by no means least valuable for people of small incomes and possessions; indeed, it is perhaps more valuable for them than for anybody else, though it is they who most often used to get along without it.

A Good Work Ended Successfully.

With full reports now made of responses to the 1918 appeal for the "Hundred Neediest Cases," it is possible to see just what was accomplished by this effort to bring Christmas help and cheer to a large group of unfortunates. As a matter of fact, so generously did the contributions come in that not 100, but 200, cases considered "neediest" by the experts of the four great charitable agencies were relieved to the full extent that was deemed essential to meeting their wants, and that, in many instances, was to the extent of setting the beneficiaries on their financial feet again and starting them anew on the honorable and happy road of independence and self-support.

Some of the cases, indeed, have not yet reached that point, and a few probably must have continuous help, but a satisfactory percentage have escaped from the emergency created by accident, bereavement, or illness, and can face the world unafraid. Most satisfactory is it to be able to say that not in a single instance has there been the sort of unintelligent alms-giving that creates or perpetuates the professional beggar. No contributor to THE TIMES Fund need have any fear of having done that.

Aviators Deliver Newspapers.

Early in the week it was announced from Rome that one of the morning papers there was utilizing the airplane as a means of making early distribution of its complete or latest edition as far away as Naples. Now, it seems, a Berlin paper has adopted the same method to reach the statesmen, politicians, and others who are assembled in Weimar.

The plan is obviously a practicable one so far as speed of carriage goes, and whether it will prove commercially profitable remains to be seen. The incidental expense is considerable, of course, but airplanes now have room and supporting power for burdens running far up into the hundreds of pounds, and it may well be that before long the aerial newsboy will become as familiar as was the military aviator, not long ago, both in this country and in Europe.

That the utility of the airplane is restricted to war there is no need either to believe or to fear. Those who are confidently prophesying that its future as an implement of peace is certain have better basis than fancy for what they say.

A Chance for Civilian Sailors.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Civilian sailors are still looking for jobs, and yet any civilian ships of the United States that are selected to bring our troops back from France or England have our civilian sailors thrown out of them and navy crews put in their places. British ships come in nearly every day manned by British civilian sailors and carrying our troops. If British civilian sailors are good enough to bring our boys home, why aren't United States civilian sailors? The British steamship Cedric, with a British civilian crew, got in yesterday with 3,059 United States officers and men. The Italian steamship Duca d'Aosta, with an Italian civilian crew, got in today with United States troops. It is the same way with French ships and French civilian crews carrying our troops. What is the matter with United States civilian crews that they are not allowed to do the work that the merchant marines of foreign countries are depended on to do? The navy is giving back a few cargo ships each month, but it takes over ships for transports nearly every day and throws out the civilian crews.

GEORGE A. McDERMOTT.

New York, Feb. 5, 1919.

THE BRITISH EMBARGO

It Is Made Necessary by Heavy Indebtedness to This Country.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The outburst in the Senate against the British embargo, which would affect certain exports from the United States, is deplorable, as is any action or expression which tends to cause misunderstandings and ill-feeling toward a friendly nation.

It has always been considered praiseworthy for an individual to abstain from buying if he did not know how he was going to pay, and can any one tell how England or any of the countries of Europe are going to pay the balances in favor of this country which are in prospect? Since the war began Great Britain has been paying for her extraordinary purchases in this country: First, by selling her holdings of American securities; second, by borrowing here in the open market; and, finally, by means of loans granted by the United States Government. The authority of the Secretary of the Treasury to make these loans is nearly exhausted. Secretary McAdoo, shortly before retiring from office, asked that this authority be extended in the amount of $1,500,000,000, but no action has been taken upon the request, and, judging from public expressions of members of the committee to which the request was referred, there is little reason to expect that these loans will be continued.

How, then, is Great Britain to pay the balances in favor of this country? This is not a question of solvency or of good credit, but of means of payment. We know that it is impracticable for her to pay in gold; she cannot afford to allow the basis of her monetary and credit system to be entirely drained away; with approximately one-third of the world's gold in our hands, our Government is maintaining strict control over exports of gold. We will not allow England to pay us in goods; the next Congress is expected to raise the customs tariff to make sure of that. Heretofore she has had important charges against us for the services of her shipping, but we are building a great fleet of ships for the avowed purpose of reducing these charges. Heretofore she has had a large income from interest and dividends on American securities, but we have bought back most of these securities and established a balance against her in this account.

How, then, is England to pay the accruing balances against her? Ask any exchange banker and he will tell you that it cannot be done unless we lend credit for that purpose, and what is the prospect for our making loans to all Europe in the sums required to offset what they would like to buy in the United States? Is it not utterly unreasonable to become indignant because the British Government, with intelligent comprehension of the situation, takes steps to control the piling up of balances against her? She knows she must have some things from the United States, and naturally she would like to conserve her means of payment to secure these, rather than exhaust them upon things she can get along without. England has suffered enormous losses, and has enormous burdens to carry. She has a most perplexing industrial situation to deal with at home. It is unfair and ungenerous to attack her for a course which is dictated by common prudence and which we, although our difficulties are much less serious, are even now pursuing for ourselves.

There is as yet no adequate conception of the fact that the huge indebtedness which we have piled up against Europe is a serious bar to our making further sales there. The annual interest payments, aggregating $500,000,000 a year, which Europe must make to us, necessarily reduce her ability to buy from us. It is a sum equal to the entire trade balance in our favor before the war. Obviously this interest cannot be paid in gold. The total production of gold in the world outside of the United States in 1918 was only about $300,000,000. How, then, I repeat, are these countries going to pay the interest and a trade balance of like amount unless we lend freely to cover the balances? And if we cannot tell them what to do, and they do not know whether we will lend or not, how can we blame them if they think it necessary to curtail their purchases?

Percentage of Casualties.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your editorial article in yesterday's TIMES discusses very fairly the comparative significance of the casualties reported for the several divisions of the American Expeditionary Force. There is one point, however, in the comparison that seems to have been overlooked both by you and by the military authorities. To institute a just comparison, the losses of a division should be reckoned as a percentage of the total number in the division from first to last, and the comparison between the divisions should be made by means of these percentages, i. e., by the relative and not by the absolute losses. Now in some divisions—notably, I believe, in the 27th—it is stated that there were no replacements until near the end of actual fighting; in others, replacements were numerously and continuously made. When a regiment like the 107th is reported as having 542 killed, dying of wounds, and missing, this means a percentage of loss of about 13, since the loss was distributed among about 3,600 men. In the case of another regiment having, say, 1,000 killed and missing, representing a total casualty list of some 5,000, the percentage of loss would be less than 12, since the 1,000 killed and missing would be distributed among 8,600 men, (5,000 replacements plus the original 3,600 in the regiment.) In other words, the absolute loss in the second case would be nearly twice as great as in the first, but the relative loss would be less.

THE IDEALIST.

There is a man who dreams himself aloof
From brute creation. In his sense of life
There seems no need for further human strife;
No need to leave the calm and peaceful roof
To fight as beasts fight, with the horn and hoof.
This man has glimpsed a vista strangely new,
Where virile intellects and healthy flesh
May grasp the flail of industry, and thresh,
From varied grains, the harvests that accrue
When one is thrifty. His is warp and woof
Of fancy's imagery. His mind has seen
The nobler attributes and greater heights
Which man attains when all his longings lean
Away from instincts of the primal night.

Yet he is lonely, and in wretchedness
His days begin, in sorrowings they end.
For few there be who dare to call him friend,
Or sympathize too much in his distress,
Fearing they, too, some weakling hope confess
For new conditions, sweet, but all unknown
To history's annals. So he lives his day
Fighting two fights—the tongues of those who say
His is the heart of cowardice alone,
Or that foul slander that his wits digress
From normal trendings. So he lives and dies
Hurt to the soul that mankind cannot see
The greater blessings of calm, peaceful skies,
And how much finer earth, sans wars, would be!

WAR PAINTINGS ON VIEW.

Work of British Artists Shown at the Anderson Galleries.

At the Anderson Galleries between two and three hundred paintings and drawings of war subjects by British artists, commissioned by the British Government, are placed on exhibition today. They came from Washington, where they have been shown at the Corcoran Gallery, and have drawn 40,000 visitors to the gallery during the three weeks of the exhibition. They are exhibited under the auspices of the British Ministry of Information and will be shown later in other cities of the United States.

The artists were chosen with something better than discretion, with initiative and discernment. They are men who look at their subject from a fresh angle, and have something to say about it that has not been said before. They are men of profound experience and with a scientific love of research united to their instinctive gifts. They were asked to paint not the horrors of war but the environment of war, the stage setting, the minor episodes, the supernumeraries, and the principals in costume, but all this with the big scene of the drama left out. This for the most part has been done, and it was wise. Art never is so helpless as in the presence of horror.

Major Sir William Orpen holds the place of honor in the exhibition, and his distinguished style fills the room dedicated to him with vitality, with fresh color, spacious design, and vital portraiture. His portraits are perhaps the most interesting feature of the gallery. He gets behind the formality of official representation to the man who wears the uniform and has performed the services celebrated. The portrait of Field Marshal Haig, for example, is not so much the Field Marshal as Haig. The portrait of Brig. Gen. H. J. Elles is the portrait of the man who at Cambrai issued the signal, "The Tank Corps expects that every tank will do its damn'dest." And the portrait of young Major J. B. McCudden, V. C., D. S. O., M. C., M. M., the most decorated member of the Royal Air Force, who accounted for fifty-four enemy planes, is beautiful on every ground. It is immediately convincing as a likeness and it shows the physical characteristics that must be those of a great airman. In addition to this, the artist has known how to suggest air and flight by the spears of blue shooting up in the background, which may be in an unfinished state, but which cannot be improved by further work.

Orpen's other subjects vary greatly in mood and in the power to interest the general public, but they all are the work of a painter enlisted in the cause of painting and not disdainful of craftsmanship. There is, however, much to choose between one example and another even from this point of view. Take his bit of comedy, the "Adam and Eve at Péronne"; the oil painting is clever, full of character, a trifle broken up in composition, and heavy in color, but reflecting truthfully the stupidity of a village Colin in uniform and a peasant girl no less dull and vacant in expression. But there is also on view the water-color sketch of the same subject, made before or after, it doesn't matter which. What does matter is the exquisite handling of the lighter medium, the fair pale color that floats vaporous across the paper just staining its surface, the noble simplicity of the drawing, the sweet dignity of the rustic type in the girl.

The exhibition is not confined to artists of even as moderate a degree of conservatism as Major Orpen. Here is Mr. Nevinson, who brings all the batteries of the Cubists to bear upon the material of war, and who succeeds in demonstrating the ability of his method to do something that would not be done in any other way. His angles and overlapping planes translate with astonishing force the harsh spirit of his subject. He gives you the volume and mass of the French troops advancing as one man. He shows you Belgian refugees shorn of the frippery of picturesqueness and sentimentality with which less competent artists have invested them, ugly and stern facts, tragic enough in their uncouth despair. His "Road from Arras to Bapaume," a study in black and white, is, however, his masterpiece. He shows the road, broad and white in the foreground, running over the hilly country, narrowing as it reaches the horizon and dipping down the folds of valley to rise again on the further hillsides. It is a road bereft of all its drapery of trees and foliage, bordered by the cruel stumps of tree trunks left by the marauders, and here and there in the dark expanse of the neighboring fields a twisted branch is thrust out like the arm of a corpse. Some carts wind along the road and a few figures are seen tramping. But the picture is the road itself left naked to its enemies.

Paul Nash also shows the brutal dismembering of the trees on the field of Passchendaele, and John Nash of the Artists' Rifles makes the weariness of the troops a reality. William P. Roberts, who belongs to the Vorticist group, does expressive work in "The Signalers," and conveys the sense of tumult and intense activity with no small degree of science. George Clausen is the only one to indulge in symbolism, and makes of his "Renaissance" a luminous pastoral of poetic beauty. Jacob Epstein provides the one piece of sculpture, "The Tin Hat." Augustus John sings a hymn to the consoling power of tobacco in his "Fraternity." Wyndham Lewis is another Vorticist and an accomplished artist into the bargain. "Eppur si muove," said Galileo, and the moderns who have been forced to renounce the new theories also must protest that the figures drawn by this able Vorticist do move.

Other artists upon whom it is impossible to comment adequately within the space of a preliminary review are W. B. Adeney, Alfred Bentley, Muirhead Bone, Frank Brangwyn, Colin W. Gill, C. J. Holmes, Eric H. Kennington, Sir John Lavery, James McBey, Bernard Meninsky, Spencer Pryse, William Rothenstein, Henry Rushbury, Randolph Schwabe, and E. A. Verpilleux.

The exhibition as a whole is a striking example of official intelligence and tact in selecting official artists capable of upholding their own standards and giving at the same time clear and vivid reports of the subjects assigned them. It should not be missed by any one.

RAIL UNIONS RESENT BAN ON POLITICS

Would Favor Five-Year Control if Order Were Revoked, Plumb Tells Senators.

WAS ISSUED BY WILSON

Counsel for Brotherhoods Explains Co-operative Scheme, with Three Alternatives.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—Glenn E. Plumb, long associated with the four great railway brotherhoods as counsel, today submitted to the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee the plan for the brotherhoods and affiliated railroad employe organizations under which the unions favor Government ownership of railroads on a co-operation basis.

Mr. Plumb told the committee that any opposition on the part of the railway employes to the Government's plea for a five-year extension of Federal control over the systems would disappear if the order by former Director General McAdoo forbidding participation by the employes in certain political activities were abrogated.

The much-discussed order of Mr. McAdoo, it was learned today, was signed by the President, and it was said that he had not been consulted concerning any possible revocation of it. As issued Oct. 18, 1918, the order reads:

> That no employe in the railway service of the United States shall,
>
> First—Hold a position as a member or officer of any political committee or organization that solicits funds for political purposes.
>
> Second—That he shall not act as Chairman of a political convention or use his position in the railway service of the United States to bring about his selection as a delegate to any political convention.
>
> Third—That he shall not solicit or receive funds for any political purpose or contribute to any political funds collected by any official or employe of any railway or any official or employe of the United States or any State.
>
> Fourth—That he shall not assume the conduct of any political campaign.
>
> Fifth—That he shall not be a candidate for nomination or election to any political office other than a municipal office; that for so doing any of the forementioned forbidden things he shall forfeit his position.

"As the order now stands," said Mr. Plumb on the stand today, "it might even be construed to forbid the organizations, with this plan adopted, from contributing money for the purpose of having me present it here."

Three Ownership Proposals.

Testimony today developed the fact that the brotherhoods and railway unions, who indorse the Plumb plan in its principles, but who refuse to commit themselves to absolute details at this time, have not yet worked out legislation, but hold, as stated by Mr. Plumb, that there must be "three separate and distinct" propositions in any legislation, as follows:

1. Providing for the acquisition of the railroads by the Government.
2. Creation of the private corporation of employes.
3. Authorizing the contracts between the Government and the private corporation.

The statement that the labor men would sanction a five-year extension if the non-political order was removed came out in answer to questions by Senators McLean and Cummins.

"That's our only objection to the extension," Mr. Plumb told Senator McLean. "The purpose of the extension is to allow time for a political solution, and under the order we are precluded from expression. We could not leave to the financial interests complete freedom while we were silent."

"Have you any intimation of its being revoked?" asked Senator McLean.

"No," replied the witness, "but Mr. Hines has so impressed me and my associates with his supreme fairness toward every question that therefore there seems hope to me."

Want Equal Voice with Capital.

"We must be as free as the railway executives or security holders to express our ideas," said Mr. Plumb to Senator Cummins. "I do not anticipate that they will cease from contributing to elect members of Congress. No more should we cease to exercise the same rights and privileges. But if we are still barred, we will not waive our objections to the extension of control."

The railroads should in no circumstances "be turned back to the old, composite scrap heap" of private ownership without some plan of action being developed, declared Mr. Plumb.

"And if no permanent plan is developed, your first duty is to legislate before the return," he added.

Mr. Plumb declared he could not see how a permanent solution could be worked out in a year; that it would require two, and that twenty-one months was much too short a period. He also suggested taking short-line railroads under Federal control during the time Congress was at work upon a permanent plan.

"It's my deliberate judgment, if the five-year period is approved by Congress, we will do nothing toward a solution until near the end of that time," said Senator Cummins. "Now is the time, the public is alive now. The other way it would have to be waked up again at the end of five years."

"There seems ground for the belief that there might be delay," said Mr. Plumb. "But capital would be impelled in seeking a quick solution by the chance of possible loss, and the public would be impelled by the thought that it is paying too much under a fixed rate."

"Well, Mr. Plumb," asked Senator Smith of South Carolina, Chairman of the committee, "do you think it would take Congress twenty-one months to determine upon the fundamental plan of what shall be done with the railroads, even if we did not work out the details?"

"You might build the framework of the vehicle in that time," was the reply.

"It doesn't seem to me it would take an extraordinary time to decide on the fundamental plan," said Senator Smith.

"Labor efficiency under the employes' plan would be quadrupled," declared Mr. Plumb.

"When capital wants peculiar efficiency in operation it doesn't select bankers—it selects labor," he said in advocacy of the proposed private corporation of employes.

FORD CONTEST DELAYED.

Pomerene Not to Press for an Immediate Inquiry.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—In view of negotiations toward a compromise plan for proceeding with the Ford-Newberry contest, Chairman Pomerene of the Senate Privileges and Elections Committee announced today that he would not press his resolution proposing an immediate investigation.

The compromise proposed is that the committee's future action at this session of Congress shall not include taking of testimony, but shall be confined solely to preserving Michigan ballots and other documentary evidence for use in an investigation planned during the next session of Congress.

Mr. Pomerene indicated that the committee probably would be called together to bring out a new resolution, limited in its scope.

CHURCHES TO HONOR LIFE OF ROOSEVELT

Men Who Knew Him in Private and Public Relations to Speak from Pulpits Tomorrow.

SERVICE TO BE NATION-WIDE

American Defense Society Prepares Special Program and Eulogistic Pronouncement.

The memory of Colonel Theodore Roosevelt will be honored tomorrow in hundreds of churches in this city and thousands of churches throughout the United States. Hundreds of men who knew him intimately in public and private life will appear in pulpits in this city and wherever services are held to deliver eulogies and tell reminiscences of their personal contact with the former President.

There has been no organization in charge of plans for the many memorial services, and each church or organization will pay honor in its own way. Most of the men and women in this city, who are known to have been intimate with Colonel Roosevelt, have been asked over and over again to speak tomorrow. Some of them will tell their recollections at several gatherings during the one day.

Many intimates of Colonel Roosevelt, who received more invitations to take part in services in his honor than they could accept, constituted themselves an agency to aid the churches in finding others of the tens of thousands who knew Colonel Roosevelt and could tell of him from personal contact.

Seven hundred chapters of the American Defense Society will hold memorial meetings, at which will be read the following paragraph from the last public message of Colonel Roosevelt, which was read at the Hippodrome on January 5:

"We have room for but one language here, and that is the English language, for we intend to see that the crucible turns out people as Americans, of American nationality, and not as dwellers in a polyglot boarding-house; and we have room for but one soul loyalty and that is loyalty to the American people."

The service of the American Defense Society in this city will be held at Trinity Church, where the Rev. Dr. William T. Manning will be the principal speaker, his topic being: "Roosevelt, as President, Citizen and Man." Dr. Manning will read a message from Major Gen. Leonard Wood. The following, adopted by the Board of Trustees of the American Defense Society, will also be read:

> The American Defense Society is glad to honor and revere the memory of its Honorary President, Theodore Roosevelt, and to record its sense of obligation to him for stimulation and aid in its work. The lesson of Americanism which he taught by his life and effort is of continuing value to this country and to all Americans. His interest in this society was marked by his ready response to every call that it made upon him. His precept and his example, above all, his unfailing courage and constancy, have been an inspiration to the society and its members. It would be difficult to express how much and in how many directions the society is indebted to him for counsel, co-operation, and encouragement.

The following address is recommended by the society for adoption by each of its branches and subcommittees tomorrow:

> We have listened with deep and appreciative sympathy to the reading of the last public appeal of Theodore Roosevelt to the citizens of the United States, urging the preservation and fostering throughout the land of the spirit of Americanism.
>
> In common with all the other branches of the American Defense Society and its dependencies, who are today in their respective localities holding with us this joint memorial meeting to evidence unitedly our respect for the achievements and memory of this great American, we would bear testimony to the vivifying influence of his loyal and patriotic life and his intense devotion to the ideals of national citizenship.
>
> We deem ourselves fortunate that he should have thought this society, of which he was the Honorary President, worthy of selection as the vehicle through which to convey to the country his message of devotion to America and his recital of the requirements which a suitable standard of citizenship demands on the part of Americans. We are met together as well to celebrate his deeds as to resolve to follow his example. His reward will reside and endure in the good opinion of his countrymen and will be worthy of his fame. Wherever noble deeds and a just ideal of service shall be spoken of there shall his name arise in remembrance.

Memorial services in honor of Colonel Roosevelt will be held in the Straus Auditorium of the Educational Alliance, at 197 East Broadway, tomorrow afternoon. Arthur Harrell and the Rev. Dr. Z. H. Masliansky will speak on the career of Colonel Roosevelt. Dr. Stephen S. Wise will pay a tribute to his memory at the Free Synogogue at Carnegie Hall tomorrow morning.

A number of distinguished men and old-time friends of Colonel Roosevelt, including Lawrence Abbott, who used to be described as Colonel Roosevelt's "Boswell," will speak at the services at the Brooklyn Academy of Music tomorrow night at 8:15. Other speakers will be ex-Senator Albert J. Beveridge, Judge Frederick E. Crane, and Justice Almet F. Jenks.

The Rev. Dr. Henry B. Washburn, Secretary of the War Commission of the Episcopal Church, will make an address on Colonel Roosevelt at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock.

The War Camp Community Service, through its national headquarters, at 1 Madison Avenue, has arranged for special services and addresses in honor of the memory of Colonel Roosevelt tomorrow at all its centres in this city and elsewhere.

H. J. Whigham, editor of the Metropolitan Magazine, with which Colonel Roosevelt was associated as a member of the editorial staff, tells a number of Roosevelt incidents in the March issue of that publication, including the following:

"To have consulted his own interests before the interests of his country was simply impossible for Roosevelt. The Lusitania was sunk on the 7th of May when the Colonel was in Albany carrying on his suit against Barnes. The next issue of The Metropolitan was just closed but we reopened one form in order to get a word on the Lusitania from Roosevelt. I got him on the long distance telephone that Saturday night, May 8. The first thing he said was 'What is Wilson doing? Has he seized the ships? Do you mean to say he hasn't seized the German ships in our harbors?' I told him the ships were not seized, and he then and there sat down in Albany to write the famous Lusitania editorial which reached us by Monday morning's mail, bearing the caption: 'Murder on the High Seas.'

"Unfortunately the magazine would not be out on the newsstands for three weeks, and we wanted the message to get to the people at once. So I telegraphed to Albany for permission to give the editorial to the press forthwith. As it happened, John Bowers, his chief counsel in the Barnes suit, knew there was one German-American on the jury, and had begged Roosevelt to say nothing to the press on the war which might hurt the feelings of the Germans until the suit was over, and it was nearly over when the Lusitania was sunk, and he had only to keep quiet a little longer. But his response to my telegram was 'By all means publish immediately.'"

The City Federation of Women's Clubs adopted a resolution yesterday presented by Miss Mabel E. Macomber, President of the City Playground League, urging that the permanent memorial for Colonel Roosevelt take the form of a model outdoor neighborhood playground.

ROOSEVELT'S LIFE PLEDGE.

Will H. Hays Quotes It at Indiana Memorial Meeting.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Feb. 7.—Will H. Hays, Chairman of the Republican National Committee, paid a tribute to Theodore Roosevelt at the memorial session of the Indiana Legislature here today. "The lesson of patriotism of Theodore Roosevelt," said Mr. Hays, "is his monument.

"He was for peace when peace was right, but if to win right for right's sake war was necessary, then he was for war or whatever else was needed; and above all, he was for America eternally, and there he was the severest partisan.

"'I have kept the promise that I made to myself when I was 21. That promise was to live my life to the hilt until I was 60, and I have kept that promise.'

"These words Theodore Roosevelt said to his sister a few days before he died," Mr. Hays said. "And this, indeed, he did."

ARMY TO HONOR ROOSEVELT

Exercises to be Held by Men Abroad as Well as in Home Camps.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—American soldiers abroad, as well as those in military camps in this country, will join in the memorial exercises for Theodore Roosevelt next Sunday, the date fixed by Congress for the ceremonies. Secretary Baker, in a letter today to Representative McCormick, said he had cabled General Pershing asking that general orders be issued for observance of the day by the army in Europe.

In response to an inquiry from the Illinois Representative, Mr. Baker wrote:

"From some source, which I cannot now recall, I noticed that General Pershing had on his own motion arranged military services for ex-President Roosevelt among the men of the American Expeditionary Forces. On receipt of your letter, however, I felt it wiser to cable him directly on the subject, and have asked him by general orders to call attention to the fact that the Senate and House of Representatives have set aside the 9th day of February for such services in Washington, that similar services are being held throughout the military camps in this country, and that such services should be organized as fully as possible for the benefit of the men in the American Expeditionary Forces."

The birthday of Theodore Roosevelt, Oct. 27, would be set aside as a national holiday by a bill introduced today by Representative Edmonds of Pennsylvania.

MEMORIAL TO ROOSEVELT.

Trinity Hall Recreation Centre is Opened at Washington.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—A recreation house for sailors, soldiers, and marines, dedicated as a memorial to Theodore Roosevelt, was opened today at Trinity Parish Hall. Invitations to the opening exercises were issued in the name of the Bishop of Washington, Chairman of the Social Service Conference, and the Navy League. Recreation rooms, a library, and a dormitory are available for the use of any sailor, soldier, or marine visiting the capital.

It is probable Trinity Parish Hall will be maintained as a permanent recreation centre.

RICHARD CROKER BETTER.

Ex-Tammany Leader, 76, Was Seriously Ill at Palm Beach.

Special to The New York Times.

PALM BEACH, Fla., Feb. 7.—Richard Croker, former Tammany chieftian, who has been seriously ill at his home, The Wigwam, is well on the road to recovery.

Mrs. Croker said that she expected her husband, who is 76 years old, to be up in a week's time. He has been suffering from congestion of the liver, and Mrs. Croker said that they had been worried over his condition until a few days ago. Dr. Noah Jackson of West Palm Beach, his physician, said that Mr. Croker had some digestive disorders that might develop trouble later, but that he was well on the road to recovery from the present attack.

Mr. Croker has not been in New York since last October, having spent most of his time since he left his estate in Ireland, just after the war started, at his country estate near Palm Beach.

MISS ASQUITH ENGAGED.

Ex-Premier's Daughter to Wed Prince Bibesco of Rumania.

LONDON, Feb. 7.—The engagement of Miss Elizabeth Asquith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Asquith, to Prince Antoine Bibesco, Councillor at the Rumanian Legation, has been announced, according to The Daily Mirror. Prince Bibesco was formerly First Secretary at the Rumanian Legation at Washington.

It was rumored in September of last year that the announcement of the engagement of Miss Asquith and Stephen McKenna, the novelist, would shortly be made. Miss Asquith is about 22 years old, and like her mother, who was Miss Margot Tennant, is a brilliant woman. She is distinguished as an amateur actress and has appeared at many performances for war charities. She is also a fine linguist and a good golfer and skater.

TO STUDY PORT AGREEMENT

Gov. Edge Selects Committee to Represent New Jersey.

TRENTON, Feb. 7.—Governor Edge today invited a committee of State officials to serve with him on the committee which is to represent New Jersey in a study of the proposed joint agreement governing the Port of New York. The committee will co-operate with a similar body appointed by the Legislature of New York.

Those invited to consider the question are William N. Runyon, Clarence E. Case, Henry R. Ackerson, Edward I. Edwards, and Arthur Whitney of the Senate; Arthur N. Pierson, Ralph N. Kellam, Hugh C. Barrett, Walter G. Winne, representing the House, and Attorney General McCran, Controller Bugbee and Treasurer Read.

New Hampshire Society Dinner.

The New Hampshire Society of New York held its annual dinner and dance at the Hotel McAlpin last night, about seventy-five persons being present. William B. Greeley, President of the society, was toastmaster, and the speakers included Henry C. Quinby and Mrs. A. L. Livermore. The society took under consideration the question of admitting women to full membership.

Ford Loses Dividend Suit.

LANSING, Mich., Feb. 7.—The State Supreme Court today sustained a decision of the Circuit Court in the case of John F. and Horace E. Dodge, minority stockholders of the Ford Motor Company, versus the Ford Company, that the company must pay a special dividend of $19,275,385 as demanded by the plaintiffs.

CHARITY BALL IS GAYLY REVIVED

MRS. BERWIND THE LEADER

Succeeds Mrs. Algernon S. Sullivan, Who Headed the Grand March for 38 Years.

The Charity Ball, which has been a social institution in New York for more than half a century, had a brilliant revival last night at the Waldorf-Astoria after its abandonment last season on account of the war. Something of the spirit of victory prevailed last night with the grand ballroom entirely massed with the Stars and Stripes and the three tiers of boxes crowded with officers of the army and navy, allied officials, and wounded soldiers and sailors.

Sweeping aside the curtains of the past, a similar occasion, after the close of the civil war, was when the ball was staged in the Academy of Music. Then all the dowagers and misses came in quaint crinoline gowns, in horse-drawn carriages, and danced the stately quadrille with the officers in blue. Last night society was whirled to the hotel in their limousines and danced the newfangled steps with officers in khaki just back from overseas, with three orchestras playing continuously.

Every room large enough for dancing on the entire second floor of the hotel was utilized, and at times more than 3,000 dancers were on the floor. Officially the ball began with the time-honored grand march, which started at 10:30 o'clock in the Astor Gallery, proceeding under huge canopies of smilax to the ballroom, up to the crimson velvet dais, over which "1862-1919" blazed out in electric numbers.

Mrs. Edward J. Berwind, President of the Ball Committee, led the procession, escorted by Dr. Edward L. Partridge. For thirty-eight years Mrs. Algernon Sydney Sullivan headed the grand march, but retired from the Presidency, becoming the Honorary President, two years ago.

More than a hundred were in the grand march, which the Charity Ball has never abandoned with the advent of informality and the fox trot. The Floor Committee was composed of seventy members, of which Major Henry Gansevoort Sanford is Chairman, and Major James C. McGuire, Major Thomas Denny, Major Edward C. Delafield, and Edward C. Paris, the Vice Chairman.

After Mrs. Berwind and Dr. Partridge came Vice Admiral Gleaves with his staff and Mrs. James W. Gerard, then Major Gen. Thomas H. Barry, with Mrs. Charles F. Roe, while Rear Admiral Usher walked with Mrs. Charles F. Hoffman, with their attending staff. Military and naval escorts came next with Mrs. Lawrence L. Gillespie, Miss Lena R. Curtis, and members of the Ball Committee, including Mrs. Daniel C. Adams, Mrs. Vernon C. Brown, Mrs. Henry G. Sanford, Mrs. John M. Bowers, Mrs. Ashton C. Clarkson, Mrs. Charles D. Miller, Mrs. Robert Oliphant, and Mrs. Robert L. Gerry.

Major Gen. C. F. Roe escorted Mrs. Gleaves, while E. de P. Livingston walked with Mrs. Barry, and Mrs. Usher was escorted by Benjamin Welles. After them walked the Directors of the New York Nursery and Child's Hospital, in aid of which the ball is given annually, and the patrons.

Twelve of the boxes last night were donated for the use of the Brooklyn Naval Hospital, the officers at the Navy Yard, Governors Island, and Marine Headquarters, the Pershing Club, Lafayette House, and the 305th Infantry Auxiliary. The donators were T. J. Oakley Rhinelander, Lispenard Stewart, John M. Bowers, Henry M. Tilford, Edward J. Berwind, and Edward S. Harkness.

Many of the boxholders entertained at dinner at their residences, bringing their guests afterward to the ball. Among those who entertained box parties were Mrs. Berwind, Mrs. E. R. Stettinius, Mrs. Charles F. Hoffman, Mrs. Robert Gerry, Mrs. Paul G. Thebaud, Mrs. Thomas F. Ryan, Mrs. Frank Sullivan Smith, Mrs. Frederick Pearson, Mrs. James B. Haggin, Mrs. F. Ashton De Peyster, Mrs. W. J. Curtis, Mrs. Le Roy Baldwin, Mrs. H. Hartley Jenkins, Mrs. Edward Peaslee, Mrs. Charles B. Alexander, Mrs. Frank S. Witherbee, and Joseph Eastman.

TROOPS WANT HOME FOOD.

Chief Demand of Men Visiting Paris, Boomer Reports.

Lucius M. Boomer, manager of the Waldorf-Astoria and McAlpin Hotels, returned yesterday from France where he spent three months as a Major in the American Red Cross, operating hotels for the officers and men of the American Army and Navy in that country. Before leaving Paris he had obtained accommodations for 2,000 men a night. Mr. Boomer said that American food cooked by Americans was the chief demand of the fighting men when on furlough in Paris, and this he was able to arrange for them.

"The Hotel du Louvre was opened in Paris on Dec. 20 for American officers, resident or on leave of absence to the city," Mr. Bloomer said. "It had been equipped with many American hotel devices and comforts, with many bathrooms and all rooms having running hot and cold water, while a large restaurant is operated by American coooks. Buses from the hotel meet the incoming trains, conveying the men and their baggage free of charge; banking facilities are provided; an information and amusement bureau, American news stand, barber's shop, medical service, and such 'home comforts' are everywhere in evidence."

Mr. Boomer said that Paris was preparing to receive a great influx of American tourists soon after the conclusion of the Peace Conference.

TO COVER MEN IN SERVICE.

Civil Service Commission's Rules Amended to Favor Veterans.

At a meeting of the Civil Service Commission yesterday the regulations of the commission were amended so as to give soldiers, sailors, and marines substantial recognition for the training, discipline, and experience they have had while serving under the Government. The additional ratings given are based on the length of time the candidate has served, and the highest number of points given cannot exceed more than two, so that a candidate will not have in his favor a handicap that cannot be overcome by civilian competitors. According to the plan of the commission women are to be recognized also for their war work.

In addition the commission also adopted a regulation which practically opens the doors for all injured soldiers and sailors to enter the examinations, and they are not to be disqualified by reason of their injuries, unless it is impossible for them to fill the place which they are seeking. The commission directed the establishment of a special preferred list upon which are placed the names of those who were unable to accept civil employment by reason of absence at war work, so that upon their return from war activities they shall be restored to the same position on the eligible list which they held prior to their entrance into service.

PARIS, Feb. 7, (Havas.)—The Luxemburg Chamber of Deputies today adopted tentatively a bill granting women the right to vote and to be elected to office.

WOULD LIMIT SIZE OF GERMANY'S ARMY

This, with Curb on Arms Manufacture, Military Men Argue, Would Be Big Help to Peace.

Copyright, 1919, by The Chicago Tribune Co.

PARIS, Feb. 6.—That no nation in the future will dare to declare war against another through fear that all members of the League of Nations will declare war against her, is the belief of supporters of President Wilson's plan. They declare that Germany would never have declared war against France if she had thought that Great Britain would enter the conflict. They believed that Wilhelmstrasse expected that England would sit by and watch while Belgium was overrun, France was crushed, Russia beaten, and the world's balance of power destroyed.

Military opinion differs, however, inclining toward the opinion that Germany would have forced the war, even if the United States sided at once with the Allies, as the Central Powers had planned a rapid campaign to win the war before any one could come to France's aid, and then divert there strength eastward to finish Russia.

The military critics insist that adequate strategic frontiers must be established against the future Teutonic aggression, and also demand strictest limitation of the size of the German Army and armament manufacture.

Military experts urge that large armed forces among the principal members of the Hague must always be in readiness to take the field and that transports must be kept available to concentrate them wherever trouble breaks out. Superficially, it appears that France needs a larger army for protection than does any other nation and England needs a larger navy, but the question comes up, if France maintains the largest army and Great Britain the largest navy for preserving world peace, as their forces would be at the disposition of the League of Nations, must they single-handedly keep up their large army and navy respectively?

The logical answer seems to be that the league should contribute pro rata toward sustaining these forces. However, it is realized that it would be a difficult matter to induce the United States, for example, to contribute largely toward supporting the French Army, or for Japan to subscribe heavily toward keeping up the British Navy.

The alternate plan is for the great powers to maintain forces in Europe and an international fleet. A composite army of Japanese, British and Americans in France or as an army of occupation in Germany would be an unattractive proposition, it is feared, both for the nations maintaining the contingents overseas and for the countries where the troops would be quartered.

Buffer States on the left bank of the Rhine to curb German aggression are not regarded favorably in many quarters and will not be indorsed by the league, as it is generally believed that the development of the methods of warfare will nullify the value of a narrow strip of territory. Cannon hurling shells seventy-five miles, speedier tanks and more effective airplanes make the question of future war more and more a question of which nation strikes the first blow.

WOMEN VOTE TO STOP EXTREMES IN DRESS

New York City Federation Says Evening Gowns Are Demoralizing Youth of Land.

TO ASK SHOPS TO BAR THEM

Mrs. Lilly Elected President at Hotel Astor Meeting—Medal for Miss Smalley.

At a meeting of the New York City Federation of Women's Clubs, held in the ballroom of the Hotel Astor yesterday afternoon, these resolutions were adopted:

> Whereas, The designers of women's evening gowns have led fashion to the extreme limit of indecency, and this is having a most demoralizing effect upon the youth of the country, therefore, be it
>
> Resolved, That we women of New York do all in our power to urge women to dress modestly, and that we, through a committee appointed by the President of the City Federation, seek to control indecency in dress by appealing to designers of women's fashions and the leading shops and by a public appeal to women.

Members of the federation in discussing the resolutions declared the gowns objected to were low-cut evening frocks and those without corsages. It was declared that if the designers and shopkeepers continued to handle dresses of this sort, members of the federation should "set their hearts like flint and refuse to wear the gowns, no matter how becoming they are.

A few other things that the Federation resolved upon were to do away with lynching, to have a model playground in New York as a memorial to the late Colonel Roosevelt, and to recommend the adoption of the rainbow flag by the League of Nations. They wish to have the subway ticket sellers protected from cold, so that their health and lives may not be endangered. In the appointment of school attendance officers, they do not wish the names of women skipped because of their sex; they also want a new high school for Washington Heights and the Bronx. Last but not least, they are going to "stand by President Wilson in his demand for a League of Nations."

It looked as if all the women in New York had come to the Federation meeting, filling not only the main floor, but also the two galleries. The only men admitted were on the platform and they were there as speakers and honored guests. Health Commissioner Copeland was one of these, though not announced on the program.

Ex-Senator George H. Whitney, who was one of the principal speakers of the afternoon, also talked to the women on "Drug and Narcotic Control." Senator Whitney told the women that drugs were more dangerous than liquor, though in the drug business he had never known it until he had made a special investigation.

Commissioner of Health Copeland, who followed, gave statistics on the subject from all walks in life.

"I should not be surprised," he said, "if even among ladies of the estimable character of those here there were not a few addicts to drugs in the room."

The audience rose to its feet when Miss Mary Garrett Hay congratulated the retiring President, Mrs. John Francis Yawger, upon her successful administration, and the federation for having her for President. Mrs. Yawger received also a laurel-wreath brooch as the federation's gift. Last year the organization started the practice of presenting a medal of honor to a woman who had been distinguished by some noble act, the recipient then being Lady Paget. This year the federation awarded its medal to Miss Evelyn Smalley, who received the Croix de Guerre with the start for distinguished service and bravery at Bouey, where she worked with the Y. M. C. A. under the direction of the French Government. The federation medal is of gold, properly inscribed, and with a diamond in the centre. It was presented by Mrs. Belle de Rivera, Honorary President of the federation, and formally accepted by Miss Persis M. Pomeroy, who will take it to Miss Smalley in France.

The election which followed was a close one, and it was not until 11 P. M. that the tellers announced the successful ticket, which was as follows: President, Mrs. Harry Lilly; First Vice President, Mrs. R. Percy Chittenden; Second Vice President, Mrs. William D. Sporborg; Third Vice President, Mrs. Louis Ralston; Recording Secretary, Mrs. Carroll L. Nichols; Corresponding Secretary, Miss Genevieve K. B. Andrews; Treasurer, Mrs. Henry G. Hughes; Historian, Mrs. Otto Hahn.

WILL RUSH SHIPBUILDING.

Submarine Boat Corporation Plans to Launch 12 Ships a Month.

The launching of the Nesco and the Jekyll today at the Port Newark Shipyard, Newark, will mark the beginning of a period of intensive construction at the yard until the present contract is completed. According to a statement of Henry R. Carse, President of the Submarine Boat Corporation, the new launching schedule will be twelve ships a month.

In view of the fact that the yard's basin is already full of ships, held up by difficulty over turbine reduction gears, Mr. Carse said these ships would be staked out in the bay around the yard, because the yard could not defer launchings any longer on account of the difficulties with machinery.

700 School Pupils Strike.

Seven hundred pupils of the Rhoades Preparatory School, 14 West 125th Street, struck last night because Leo Freedman, the Principal, raised the fee in the laboratory course from $2.50 to $5 a term. A delegation called on the Principal last night, and he told them the expenditure of $10,000 for new laboratory equipment had made it necessary to increase the rate. Pickets stood in front of the school last night asking pupils to join the strike.

Frederick L. Jenkins.

Frederick L. Jenkins, formerly for twenty-seven years Secretary to the Police Department of the old City of Brooklyn, died from heart disease on Thursday at his residence, 121 Bainbridge Street, Brooklyn, in his seventy-fifth year. Mr. Jenkins was born in this city and was serving in the transport service of the Government when the civil war began. In 1870 he was appointed clerk in the Brooklyn Police Department, where he remained until the consolidation of the boroughs. In 1900 he became head of the security department of the National Bank of Commerce in Manhattan. Mr. Jenkins was a former Secretary of the Brooklyn Masonic Veterans' Association.

Miss Anna M. Haley, the last of her family, died yesterday at her home, 81 Roseville Avenue, Newark, N. J., in her eighty-first year. She had lived alone since the death of her brother, the Rev. Dr. Charles T. Haley, sixteen years ago. Dr. Haley was for forty years pastor of Roseville Avenue Presbyterian Church. Miss Haley wrote her obituary four years ago. It contains a little more than 200 words, and in it is recounted the fact that she had been a great sufferer for many years of spinal trouble, and with her brother had traveled extensively for her health, having in 1879-1880 traveled around the world.

JEROME SOUNDS WARNING.

Tells Colgate Alumni to Beware of Bolshevist Agitators.

The New York Alumni Association of Colgate University at their annual dinner in the McAlpin last night heard an address by William Travers Jerome, former District Attorney, in which the speaker denounced the present day tendency to cultivate class feeling, asserting that the laboring man of today was living under conditions which in the time of his grandfather would have been real luxury. The utterances of men and women of Bolshevist tendencies and of many labor agitators are the merest claptrap, Mr. Jerome said, but none the less it was claptrap with a reaction, and society needed to beware of that reaction.

The Rev. Dr. Cornelius Woelfkin, talking on the "Test of a Permanent Civilization," said he feared a spirit of indulgence and luxury might undermine Western civilization, and that he feared those tendencies more among the masses of today than among the classes. Some sober minded men who are not dreamers or fault finders, he explained, were beginning to question the Christian religion, and he himself had come to believe that if there were in fact a yellow peril it lay in the possibility that an older civilization would some day engulf that of newer worlds.

George W. Cobb, President of the association, presided. President Elmer R. Bryan of Colgate lauded the university's part in the war, and John W. Peddie told of football of other days.

NEW POST FOR J. A. LONG.

Ex-Senator Appointed Deputy State Superintendent of Prisons.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 7.—Former State Senator James A. Long of Oyster Bay was named Deputy State Superintendent of Prisons today by Supt. Charles F. Rattigan. Mr. Long will succeed George W. Franklin of Troy. He will take office Feb. 16. The salary is $4,000 a year. Mr. Long was in the Senate in 1911 and 1912, and then was in the Internal Revenue Service. He was a close friend of Theodore Roosevelt.

Today it was predicted that one of the results of the proposed investigation of penal institutions would be the removal of the Wardens of the various State prisons, with the possible exception of Warden John B. Twombly of Clinton, whose place will remain untouched if efforts of former Lieutenant Governor Thomas F. Conway prove availing.

This would mean that Warden William H. Moyer of Sing Sing would go. It was said today that the Westchester Democratic organization did not want Moyer retained, and that Michael J. Walsh, now State Tax Commissioner by appointment of Governor Smith and leader of Westchester's Democracy, would have the naming of Moyer's successor.

SIR HORACE PLUNKETT ILL.

Irish Leader at Battle Creek—May Be Unable to See Wilson.

Special to The New York Times.

BATTLE CREEK, Mich., Feb. 7.—Sir Horace Plunkett, Chairman of the late Irish Convention, who has come to America on a mission to arouse interest in Home Rule for Ireland, finds his health impaired to such an extent that he cannot proceed. He arrived here yesterday and will probably rest several weeks.

Sir Horace has not been in good health in years and is now troubled with insomnia.

"I am not feeling a bit well," he said, "and I have been ordered to shun visitors and interviews and to forget every care. I am trying to obey."

It was said that he may not be able to proceed to Washington when President Wilson returns and ask to have the President's peace principles applied to Ireland, as was planned.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Selling Pressure on Stocks Relaxes as Trading Atmosphere Clears—Russian Bonds Gain.

While the stock market lost further ground yesterday, the downward movement was moderate in practically all directions among the prominent issues, and speculative sentiment had a more pronounced tinge of confidence than of depression. The readjustment of the copper metal market on a new basis was generally considered as a development worthy of favorable comment, marking progress toward the point where a transition to active business could be expected. The copper stocks displayed a firm tone after an early dip, being in demand for the covering of short sales made earlier in the week. Brokerage house discussion also indicated purchases of these issues, and of some of the industrial stocks, by forward-looking traders who seek to accumulate holdings on a scaledown after substantial reactions occur. The latter class of purchases have been reported on the increase since the trend of commodity prices began a fortnight ago to denote a distinct tendency toward lower levels.

A significant feature of the day's dealings in stocks was the broad recovery from bottom prices which occurred in the afternoon. It was during the last hour that covering operations appeared most in evidence, and an explanation was found in the fact that earlier pressure had not been able to cause a really marked decline. The railroad equipment issues stood forth as the subject of attack, a process induced apparently by reference to the quarterly statement issued the day before by the American Steel Foundries Company. This report reflected large adjustments in behalf of inventories, and it is likely that many other corporations will show in their statements for the last quarter of 1918 the effect of a similar procedure which first came to light in the Steel Corporation's report. Until a number of these records of final war business appear it would not be surprising if stocks of manufacturing concerns displayed a highly nervous front. Attention was drawn to international political matters once again by the sharp upward movement of Russian bonds. Overnight news of an intention on the part of Bolshevist leaders to assume, in return for recognition in peace discussions, the outstanding obligations of the country, payment to be made in raw materials, stimulated buying. The 5½ per cent. issue, which closed at 56 on Thursday, opened 4 points higher, and at one time stood 9 points above the preceding day's final quotation. The 6½s scored an initial rise of 7 points at 69, and later moved 3 points higher. The first-named issue left off with a net gain of 5 points and the latter of 7 points. The Russian currency also moved up rapidly. Liberty bonds were soft, the fourth 4¼s, at 94, equalling the minimum price of last year. The Government bond market promises to be a study of much interest from now on as terms are brought forward for the forthcoming Victory Loan. In framing the new issue the Treasury will, of course, have regard to its effect on the existing bonds, and terms will be weighed and measured with all the skill the experts possess. Secretary of the Treasury Glass, who is expected to go over the situation with bankers here next week, and at that time some concrete information on the issue should be available.

The mercantile agencies continue to report hesitation on the part of buyers and gradual price alterations for various lines of goods. In this connection interest was displayed in the financial district yesterday in the recommendation by Secretary of Commerce Redfield that a commission be appointed to work out a schedule for reducing prices for various commodities with the purpose of promoting buying. Commercial borrowings continue light. The call money rates yesterday were about the same as the day before, reflecting hardly at all the announcement that $600,000,000 Treasury certificates of indebtedness would be offered next week.

THE CONDITION OF TRADE.

The price readjustments which are going on in many lines are considered by the mercantile agencies to be of a healthy order, promoting the ultimate improvement of business when buyer and seller can get together on a satisfactory basis. The easier conditions of money and the decline of ocean freight rates are mentioned as factors working to the same end.

"Of disquieting features," says Dun's Review, "the existing labor troubles, notably those in Eastern textile centres, are conspicuous, and the percentage of idle machinery has steadily risen, either because of strikes or from the slow development of new orders to replace the expired or canceled Government contracts.

"Very heavy payments through the banks, as reflected in Clearing House transactions at the principal cities in the United States, continue the rule, total exchanges this week amounting to $6,255,465,712, an increase of 23.3 per cent., as compared with this week last year, and of 0.2 per cent., as contrasted with the corresponding week in 1917."

"Some important branches of the woolen industry," says Bradstreet's, "are reported firmly established on the newer basis of time run. Overtime in industry and on the railroads has definitely ended, but reports from steel mills, particularly at the West, is that the wheels are beginning to turn faster in answer to calls from new domestic business. Export trade has livened up a little in lumber, leather, and provisions, but iron and steel are declared to still lag in this respect. In distributive trade, while the general report is that affairs as a whole are still at a waiting stage, there are signs that Spring distribution, especially at the West, is a trifle more active, not so much in textiles as in shoes, millinery, hardware, agricultural implements, and building materials."

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

A Wall Street Dilemma.

Traders in stocks are busy just now trying to figure out just what will be the result of the reduction in prices generally which has hastened along for several days past. The reduction in the price of copper brought the first stimulation that an almost dead market has seen since the signing of the armistice. One of the interesting questions is whether this stimulation can be considered as indicative of a revival of business, and if so whether the same condition will prevail in other lines where prices are touching new low levels for the last several years. The question has been raised not once but many times as to whether earnings can be held up with reduced prices in the face of high production costs and high wages. At least one controversial point has been decided; prices are falling before wage reductions appear, but in the case of copper the one is following fast on the heels of the other and it may be so in other industries.

To Plant Less Cotton This Year.

In view of the steady decline which has been apparent in the cotton market for some time there is special significance in the telegram which the Memphis Cotton Exchange has sent to the Governors of all of the cotton growing States urging that a campaign be undertaken to acquaint farmers, merchants, and bankers with the advisability of reducing the cotton acreage this year. It is being argued in some of the cotton-growing districts that the price of cotton now is below the cost of production, and the Memphis Cotton Exchange apparently believes that overproduction is a possibility which threatens serious consequences.

Price of Lead Reduced.

Another reduction in metal prices was made yesterday when the American Smelting and Refining Company announced that the price of lead had been cut to 5 cents, as compared with 5¼ cents, which has been prevailing. The market for this metal continues to be dull.

The Government Metal Supplies.

There is some anxiety in metal market circles as to the large stocks which are being held by the Government. It was said some time ago that there would be no disposal of these supplies for some time and that even when sold they would be parceled out slowly so as not to directly affect the price of metal in the open market. There are reports now that the Government has already begun disposing of its supplies.

Copper at 18 Cents.

The intimation by one of the outside producers of copper on Thursday that the price of 18½ cents a pound would be shaded was fulfilled yesterday when one of the smaller producing companies admitted that it had made some sales of the metal at 18 cents. There was a belief among traders that if a reduction of 5 cents a pound had occurred in the last seven or eight days there might be a decline from the 18-cent level, although it was pointed out that at 18 cents the selling price was closely approaching cost.

The Union Railroad Plan.

Bankers and railroad men were not inclined to comment on the publication of the railroad employes' plan for the solution of the transportation problem of the United States yesterday, but it was talked over in financial circles, and there were a variety of private opinions expressed. The plan as presented called for the running of the railroads of the country on a co-operative basis by the employes, the Government to issue bonds for the securities now held by the investors, and while there were some who admitted that it was a carefully thought out idea, they maintained its application now or even within the next ten years would not be practicable.

Another Railroad Plan.

A railroad man who has been associated with some of the most successful of the railroads in this country suggested yesterday that it might not be a bad plan for the Boards of Directors of the different railroads to discuss the return of the carriers to a modified form of private ownership under responsible Government regulation, with their stockholders. He said that he believed it would do no harm for directors to talk over the general situation with their stockholders and that a great deal of good might come of it.

Release Ships Steadily.

The United States Shipping Board is steadily releasing vessels from Government service and placing them back in trade service again and this, coupled with the recent cutting of ocean freight rates, is expected in some quarters to revive exporting remarkably. There is still some confusion being reported in connection with chartering and freights and there has been considerable criticism of the cut in the rates to some French ports when there is no American tonnage available to those ports.

A Forecast of Prosperity.

The increase of $1 a share in the quarterly dividend declared yesterday by the Standard Oil Company of New York was interpreted in the financial district to mean that the Directors of the company were confident of an increase in the company's business and continued prosperity in the future. The company had paid $3 a share in each quarter since June, 1917. Attention was drawn yesterday to the fact that while the company enjoyed large earnings during the war the "gasless" edict of the Fuel Administration about a year ago and lack of bottoms for the transportation of oil to the Far East were difficulties which had to be met. With the Government releasing tankers and tonnage coming into the market again the outlook for the company's future is believed to be bright.

Financing the Railroads.

It is believed likely that a good deal of railroad financing will be attempted between now and the floating of the new Government Victory Loan, notwithstanding that the loan is generally expected to have right of way in the credit market. The reason for this, say bankers, is that the revolving fund of the Railroad Administration is exhausted and until some of the advances it has made are returned no new advances can be made. Obviously, the administration wants to recover what funds it can. Equally obviously, only those railroads which have credit and collateral—both are said to be essential—can raise in the open market what the Railroad Administration wants them to return. Now there is the suggestion that roads which have credit, even if it is not first class, may go to the War Finance Corporation for assistance, provided the open market can do something for them, too.

Home Life Assets Increase.

The Home Life Insurance Company reports in its fifty-ninth annual statement that more than $4,000,000 was paid to policy holders in 1918, of which more than $700,000 was in dividends. Despite the heavy mortality caused by the influenza and pneumonia epidemic, the company was able to increase its assets 4 per cent. during the year, the total on Dec. 31 being in excess of $36,000,000. Insurance in force was expanded 8.6 per cent. during the twelve months. At the end of the year outstanding insurance was nearly $159,000,000.

OFFER BRITISH BONDS.

J. P. Morgan & Co. Lead Syndicate Tendering $28,179,000 Issue.

A syndicate headed by J. P. Morgan & Co. is offering $28,179,000 United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland twenty-year 5½ per cent. gold bonds, due Feb. 1, 1937, which were previously reserved for the conversion of a part of the $142,906,000 two-year 5½ per cent. notes which matured Feb. 1. The offering price is 101 and interest.

It was reported yesterday that the underwriting syndicate was forming a distributing syndicate and that all sales would be made for a syndicate account. Subscription books will be opened Feb. 13 at the office of J. P. Morgan & Co. Among the other members of the syndicate are the First National Bank, the National City Company, Harris, Forbes & Co., Brown Brothers & Co., William A. Read & Co., the Guaranty Trust Company, the Bankers Trust Company, and the Continental and Commercial Trust Company of Chicago.

COTTON AGAIN DECLINES.

Active Months Sell at New Low Figures for Calendar Year.

There was no change of consequence in yesterday's cotton market, and prices again broke badly, most active months selling at new low figures for the calendar year. Local traders sold early in the day, while the South and Liverpool sold consistently throughout the session. In the afternoon the ring bought, presumably to cover some of its shorts, and this buying was about the best to materialize, which is not saying very much for the quality of the support the market is receiving these days. At the extreme low levels of the day March was down to 21.40, a full cent a pound under Thursday's closing, while May was down about 85 points and July was about the same. October was down only a little over a half cent a pound, but it should be remembered that the new crop months are working from a generally lower scale than the old crop options.

Spots were also weak here and at Liverpool and New Orleans. There was a break of 90 points in the local market, while New Orleans was down 75 points and Liverpool was off 23 English points, equal to about a half cent a pound here. This persistent fall in spot prices is not the least cause for apprehension.

The trade reports from New England and the South were again poor, and advices concerning the labor situation in both districts were far from reassuring. There were no further reports of new strike troubles, but, on the other hand, no impovement was noted. The fear of a further reduction in all commodity prices also played a part in shaping sentiment, and if there is to be any bullish incentive in the campaign to reduce acreage, a campaign which came into new notice yesterday because of the activity of several Southern Governors, it was not evident in the New York market yesterday.

After reaching the low levels early in the afternoon, the market rallied 10 to 30 points, and at the close there was a level 50 to 90 points under that of the previous day.

Yesterday's quotations follow:

MORE PHILADELPHIA BONDS.

City to Open Bids for New $8,000,000 Issue on March 3.

The City of Philadelphia will receive bids in the Mayor's Office in that city at noon March 3 for a new municipal bond issue amounting to $8,000,000. The bonds will mature in thirty years and will bear interest at the rate of 4½ per cent.

The issue will be free from all taxes in Pennsylvania and free from taxes under the Income Tax act of Congress. The bonds will be dated March 1, 1919, and interest will be payable semi-annually July 1 and Jan. 1. In November the City of Philadelphia sold $7,000,000 worth of 4½ per cents, which were all taken by one New York firm at 102.858.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts yesterday 6,598 pkgs. Market cleaned up quite closely of fancy fresh butter the day before. Yesterday, however, feeling weaker, and top quotations more extreme on high grades. More pressure to sell medium grades, and most of the day before advance is lost on these. Cheaper sorts of butter less active. Creamery, higher than extras, pound, 50@50½c; extras, 92 score, 49@49½c; firsts, 88 to 91 score, 45½@48c; seconds, 83 to 87 score, 41@41½c; lower grades, 38@40c; unsalted, higher than extras, 51½@52c; extras, 50½@51c; firsts, 46@49c; seconds, 42@48½c; State dairy tubs, finest, 47½@48½c; good to prime, 43@47c; common to fair, 36@41c; renovated, extras, 43c; firsts, 40@41½c; lower grades, 33@39c; imitation creamery, firsts, 38@39c; ladies, current make, firsts, 37c; seconds, 35@36c; lower grades, 32@33c; packing stock, current make, No. 1, 34½@35c; No 2, 33@34c; lower grades, 29@32c.

EGGS.—Receipts yesterday, 12,733 cases. The active trading of the day before seemed to give trade a pretty good supply of eggs, and the buying is less active. On the Mercantile Exchange, after one opening sale of Northern Ohio firsts at 47c, prices declined to 45½@46c, at which there are more than ample offerings at the close to supply all present demands, the market closing weak. Advices indicate large supplies in transit, and stock is freely offered at country points considerably below a parity with prices ruling here. White eggs also easier.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

The income account of the Washington Water Power Company for the year ended with last December shows a gross revenue of $2,927,379, operating expenses and taxes amounting to $1,472,477, and net income from operation amounting to $1,454,902. After deductions of interest and other charges, net earnings carried to surplus were $610,209, while the balance surplus as of Dec. 31, after payment of dividends, was $931,319.

BROOKLYN EDISON REPORT.

Shows Surplus of $1,593,559 After Interest Charges and Taxes.

The Brooklyn Edison Company in its report for the year ended Dec. 30, 1918, shows a surplus of $1,593,559 after interest charges and taxes, which is equal to $9.24 a share earned on the outstanding capital stock, compared with $8.56 a share earned on the same stock in the preceding year. The company was known until recently as the Kings County Electric Light and Power Company. The earnings of the Edison Electric Illuminating Company of Brooklyn are included in the income account.

The report shows that the gross revenue was $8,768,037, compared with $8,304,412 in 1917. The net after expenses and taxes was $2,605,592, a decrease of approximately $187,000 from the year before. The total income was $2,691,856, compared with $2,869,072 in 1917. The fact that surplus for the year just passed, which was available for dividends, was larger than in 1917 was due to the setting aside of only $199,620 as contingency reserve, whereas in 1917 the amount was $596,704. After dividend allowances and appropriations and employes' dividends the surplus for the year was $97,809, whereas in 1917 it was $44,135. The total profit and loss balance is now $3,365,225.

IRVING BANK'S REPORT.

Total Deposits of the Institution Now $127,000,000.

The annual report of the Irving National Bank to stockholders, which has just been made public, shows total resources of $148,452,549. Deposits have grown to $127,000,000 from about $55,000,000 in August, 1914. Lewis E. Pierson, Chairman of the board, in summarizing the report, said in part:

"The increase in the volume of business in the Foreign Department and the extension of the foreign relations of this department have been highly satisfactory.

"The profit-sharing plan put in operation two years ago was continued throughout the year. At present a committee of Directors is studying its operations, with the intention of making such changes as will develop even closer co-ordination and efficiency throughout the organization.

"After full provision for bad debts and depreciation of securities to present market values, the profits of the bank for the year 1918 amounted to $2,527,518.96."

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

Prices were steady at the close of a moderately active market yesterday on the Consolidated Stock Exchange. Values responded to a sustained demand during the afternoon session and final quotations showed fractional net gains in a majority of the active issues, while those which had losses closes at quotations substantially better than previous low levels. The recovery from the selling pressure of the opening hour, when the entire list sold off, came after midday and was gradual in movement, interrupted by occasional reactions.

PROPOSALS.

CITY HALL,
New Orleans, Feb. 3rd, 1919.

The City of New Orleans, acting under authority of Act 179 of the General Assembly of the State of Louisiana for the year 1908, ratified by Constitutional Amendment, and now a part of the Constitution of the State of Louisiana, will receive sealed proposals at the office of the Commissioner of Public Finances of the City of New Orleans up to twelve (12) o'clock noon on the 6th day of March, 1919, for the purchase of $600,000.00 in face value of Public Belt Railroad Bonds of the City of New Orleans, authorized by the Act aforementioned, and the constitutional amendment ratifying same, and of the numbers, denominations and maturities of the authorized issue of $2,000,000.00, and in the form of and in accordance with the bond schedule of the maturities of the entire authorized issue, as prescribed by an ordinance of the City of New Orleans, being No. 8628, N. C. S., approved May 14, 1912, and Ordinance No. 5316, Commission Council Series, approved January 28th, 1919, of said city, authorizing the present offering.

Said proposals shall be received under and subject to the following conditions, to-wit:

Proposals must be in writing, sealed, and marked on the outside of the envelope "Proposals for the purchase of $600,000.00 of Public Belt Railroad Bonds of the City of New Orleans," and shall be accompanied by a certified check on some chartered bank in the City of New Orleans, for an amount equal to one per cent. of the aggregate amount of the bid, which said check of the successful bidder or bidders shall be cashed and the proceeds retained by the City of New Orleans as a guarantee that the successful bidder or bidders will comply with its or their bids, and the said proceeds shall be applied to the payment of the bonds last delivered to the successful bidder or bidders, respectively. In case of the neglect or refusal to comply with any bid, the proceeds of said check shall be forfeited to the Public Belt Railroad Commission of the City of New Orleans.

No sale shall be made unless the aggregate of the bids received equals the full amount of the present offering of $600,000.00 in face value, and the adjudication shall be made to the highest bidder, provided, however, that no adjudication shall take place for less than par and accrued interest. All matured interest coupons shall be cut from said bonds and cancelled, and the successful bidder shall pay the interest which may have accrued on said bonds up to the date of delivery. The bonds shall be paid for in cash as fast as said bonds can be signed and delivered. All bonds will be delivered within thirty days from the opening of said bids. The right is reserved to reject any and all bids.

Further particulars and information will be furnished on application to the Public Belt Railroad Commission or the undersigned. The final opinion of Wood & Oakley, lawyers, Chicago, Ill., as to the legality of this issue will be furnished to the successful bidder if so desired.

A. G. RICKS,
Commissioner of Public Finances of the City of New Orleans.

PROPOSALS FOR SALVAGE.—OFFICE OF Quartermaster, Camp Crane, Allentown, Penn.—Sealed proposals will be received here until 11 A. M., February 10th, 1919, and then opened for removal of all buildings, heating apparatus, etc., erected by the U. S. Government at Camp Crane, Allentown, Penn. Further information on application.

PROPOSALS FOR DREDGING.—U. S. Engineer Office, Philadelphia, Pa.—Sealed proposals will be received here until 12 noon, March 11, 1919, and then opened, for dredging in Delaware River, in Philadelphia Harbor and on New Castle, Reedy Island, Baker and Liston Lighthouse Ranges. Further information on application.

Illinois Central Railroad Company

Fifteen-Year Five and One-Half Per Cent. Secured Gold Bonds

Due January 1, 1934
Interest payable January 1 and July 1

Charles A. Peabody, Esq., President of the Illinois Central Railroad Company, in a letter dated February 5, 1919, writes in part as follows:

"The Bonds will be the direct obligation of the Illinois Central Railroad Company, and will be secured by the deposit with the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company, as Trustee, of the following securities, having a present market value of about $20,000,000:

$17,350,000 face value Illinois Central Railroad Company and Chicago, St. Louis and New Orleans Railroad Co. Joint First Refunding Mortgage Five Per Cent. Bonds, Series A, due December 1, 1963, and

$4,550,000 face value Illinois Central Railroad Company Western Lines First Mortgage Four Per Cent. Gold Bonds, due August 1, 1951.

Pending the pledge of the above bonds, or any of them, cash is to be deposited in accordance with provisions to be contained in the Indenture.

The Trust Indenture is to contain provisions satisfactory to you that any of the pledged bonds may be released upon the deposit of Fifteen-Year Bonds or cash to be applied toward the purchase or redemption of Fifteen-Year Bonds.

The present issue of Bonds is being sold to discharge obligations incurred on account of expenditures for additions and betterments to its railroad, terminals, equipment and other facilities.

The Illinois Central Railroad Company has paid dividends on its capital stock uninterruptedly since 1863. It has now outstanding $109,296,000 capital stock, having a present market value of approximately $108,000,000, and on which dividends are being paid at the rate of 7% per annum.

An agreement between the Director General of Railroads and this Company defining the terms and conditions upon which Federal control shall be exercised and fixing the compensation to be paid by the Director General is being negotiated, and will, it is anticipated, be executed shortly.

Under this agreement, the compensation payable to the Illinois Central Railroad Company proper is expected to be not less than $16,282,000 per annum, and in addition thereto the Company will be in receipt of other income estimated at about $6,602,000 per annum, making available for fixed charges, taxes, dividends, etc., the sum of about $22,884,000. All fixed charges of the Company (including interest on the present issue of bonds), taxes, rentals, sinking fund payments, etc., are estimated at $12,220,000, leaving a balance of $10,664,000 in excess of all fixed charges.

The present issue of bonds will mature on January 1, 1934, and will bear interest from January 1, 1919, at the rate of 5½ per cent. per annum, payable January 1 and July 1. They will be issued as coupon bonds in denomination of $1,000 and will be redeemable in whole or in part at the option of the Illinois Central Railroad Company at 101 per cent. and accrued interest on any interest date on or after January 1, 1924, upon sixty days' previous notice. Coupon bonds will have the privilege of registration as to principal and will be exchangeable for bonds registered as to both principal and interest, which latter will be re-exchangeable for coupon bonds under the conditions provided in the Indenture. Both principal and interest of the bonds will be payable in gold coin of the United States of America, of or equal to the present standard of weight and fineness, and without deduction for any tax or taxes (other than Federal income taxes in excess of two per cent. per annum) which the Railroad Company or the Trustee may be required to pay or to retain therefrom under any present or future law of the United States of America, or of any State, County, Municipality or other taxing authority therein.

The issuance of these bonds has been approved by the Director General, United States Railroad Administration, and application for approval thereof is about to be made to the State Public Utilities Commission of Illinois. Application will be made in due course to list the Bonds on the New York Stock Exchange.

Pending the engraving of the definitive bonds temporary certificates will be issued."

The undersigned will receive subscriptions for the above bonds at 97½ per cent. and accrued interest to date of delivery, temporary certificates deliverable if, when and as issued. At this price the bonds will yield 5¾ per cent. if held to maturity and 6¼ per cent. if redeemed at the earliest redemption date.

A first payment of $50 per $1,000 bond subscribed for should accompany all subscriptions. The balance of the amount due on bonds allotted upon subscriptions will be payable at the offices of either of the undersigned on five days' previous notice from them.

The right is reserved to close the subscription at any time without notice, to reject any application and to allot a smaller amount than applied for.

TO ALL HOLDERS OF 5-6% Collateral Trust Gold Bonds OF THE AMERICAN CITIES COMPANY

The undersigned Trustee has in its possession a majority of the stock, both preferred and common, of the following companies:

New Orleans Railway & Light Company,
The Memphis Street Railway Company,
Knoxville Railway & Light Company,
Birmingham Railway, Light & Power Company,
Houston Lighting & Power Company,
Little Rock Railway and Electric Company.

This stock is pledged and is being held to secure the payment of the 5-6% Collateral Trust Gold Bonds of the American Cities Company.

Several of the above-named companies have sent out notices of annual meetings of stockholders to be held in the near future. Until an event of default happened under the Indenture securing said bonds the American Cities Company had the right to demand the voting of this stock at such meetings, but said right has been forfeited by the happening of an event of default as defined in Section 3 of Article Six of said Indenture. Therefore, notice is given to the bondholders that any suggestions from them relative to the voting of said stock will be considered by the Trustee, and such action will be taken by the Trustee upon demand of the requisite number of bondholders, as is authorized under the Indenture, upon such bondholders complying with the terms and conditions thereof. Prompt action on the part of the bondholders is necessary, as time presses.

SQUIRREL SKINS IN DEMAND.

Lively Bidding at Fur Auction—Day's Sales $750,000.

There was lively bidding for squirrel skins yesterday at the sale of the New York Fur Auction Sales Corporation, in the Masonic Temple, Sixth Avenue and Twenty-third Street. Australian opossum was also in great demand. There was a sharp decline in a number of offerings. The sales yesterday amounted to $750,000, making the total for the week $4,750,000. The sale will end this afternoon.

The attendance was large and the bidding brisk. Advances or declines recorded yesterday in comparison with prices obtained in October were officially reported as follows:

Chinese civet cat, no change; Australian rabbit, 30 per cent. down; squirrel, 20 per cent. up; wildcat, northern, 20 per cent. down; wildcat, southwestern, 30 per cent. down; ringtail cat, no change; lynx, 15 per cent. down; American opossum, 7½ per cent. down; Australian and Tasmanian opossum, 10 per cent. up; ringtail opossum, 10 per cent. up; wolf, northern, 30 per cent. higher, and southwestern, 40 per cent. down.

The range of prices for the day was: Chinese civet cat, $1.66 to $1.84; Chinese weasel, 37 to 42 cents; Chinese raccoon, 75 cents to $2.60; rabbit, 25 cents to $2.05 a pound; squirrel, 32 to 82 cents; wildcat, $1 to $12.10; ringtail cat, $1.30; lynx, $10.50 to $38.50; American opossum, 60 cents to $2.04; Australian and Tasmanian opossum, 65 cents to $2.70.

The Speer Fur Corporation purchased a timber wolf skin for $50, which is said to be the highest price ever paid for this fur.

SHOE EMBARGO AGREEMENT.

British and American Interests Adopt Tentative Plan in London.

LONDON, Feb. 7.—It developed today that the conference of representatives of British and American boot and shoe interests, called to discuss the proposed reimposition by Great Britain of the embargo on American boots and shoes, reached an agreement that Great Britain should admit American shoes in the same proportion that it proposes to admit American leather for manufacture here. The quantities to be admitted in each case would be in proportion to the quantities admitted in 1913 and 1916, taken together.

This agreement, which was reached by representatives of the British Association of Manufacturers of Boots and Shoes, the British Association of Distributers of Boots and Shoes, and the London trade groups of importers of American boots and shoes, will be submitted to the respective organisations for ratification. If it is ratified, which the representatves believe it will be, it will be submitted to the British Government, and that Government has intimated that it will give the agreement full consideration.

WOOL SALE IMPROVES.

Opening of Auction Affected by Lawrence Strike.

BOSTON, Feb. 7.—The Commercial Bulletin tomorrow will say:

"The opening sale of the Government wool auctions this week was affected by the strike of the operatives in Lawrence and prices ruled barely above the Government withdrawal limits, with withdrawals totaling about 30 per cent. The tone of the second day's sale was better. Foreign markets are practically unchanged."

Weekly Review of Dry Goods Trade.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Feb. 7.—Marshall Field & Co. in their weekly review of the dry goods trade say:

"Current wholesale distribution of dry goods is running somewhat less than for the corresponding week of 1918. Road sales for immediate delivery were about the same, compared with the corresponding period a year ago. Our salesmen are not offering Fall lines as yet. Many more merchants are in the market at this time than in recent years, replenishing stocks depleted by excellent retail business. Collections continue excellent."

Annual Toy Fair Here.

At the annual Toy Fair now being held at the Hotel Imperial, eighty-four leading toy manufacturers of the United States are represented. The exhibit will continue for the next six weeks. During the period of exhibition some of the manufacturers sell their entire output for the year. Mechanical toys are meeting with much success. One of the firms making these has received an order that amounts to over $184,000.

⁂

More Calls for Dress Trimmings.

The demand for high grade dress trimmings is steadily increasing. During the week some very substantial duplicate orders have been received from the out-of-town trade for immediate delivery. In the city the department stores and costumers are buying very freely, especially in the lines of colored wool and silk embroideries. Floral applique effects and spangles are being used more largely. In the lines of fringes, the four and six inch materials are meeting with much success.

⁂

Silk Underwear Selling.

The conditions that now exist in the silk industry have to some extent stimulated the sale of silk underwear. Several of the out-of-town buyers who are in town came here with the expectation of buying very conservatively. Upon learning of the conditions in the trade many of them bought more liberally than they intended. Some of the firms selling both silk and muslin underwear find that many of the buyers are more favorably disposed to the silk garments.

⁂

Still Canceling Orders.

Some of the manufacturers of children's and infants' dresses have reduced the prices on the medium-priced gingham and colored garments 25 per cent. There is an unusual number of buyers in the city interested in these goods and many of them are placing orders for immediate delivery. Owing to the labor troubles the stocks in the hands of the manufacturers are very low, and the question of delivery is a very serious one. Even though it is almost impossible to obtain this merchandise, some of the smaller retailers are still canceling orders.

⁂

Two French Model Hats.

In a rather large hat of the flapper type alternate rows of hair braid and ribbon are sewed over a straw foundation to make the brim. The crown is made of lace, on which are laid rather large French flowers. To give the hat a finish a long velvet streamer is made to hang smartly over the left shoulder of the wearer. Another large pink taffeta model has a soft cushion brim, with two taffeta quills drawn through a soft knot of the same material. The crown is draped to one side.

⁂

Gray Goods Market Listless.

There was little change yesterday in the listless character of the local gray goods market. What business there is passing is of a filling-in nature, and at what are very low prices when compared with those set by the Government as maximum ones a few months ago. In printcloths there were rales yesterday of 39-inch 68-72s for this month's delivery at 10¾ cents, and of 38½-inch 64-60s for this and next month's delivery at 9 cents. These were from first hands. Sales were also reported of 36-inch four-yard sheetings at 8½ cents and of 6.15-yard goods at 8 cents, as well as of 37-inch 3.50-yard drills at 14 cents, all for February delivery.

⁂

Now Using Wax Figures.

Those amusing and piquant wooden forms used during war times for displaying different lines of women's wear in the shops have dropped entirely out of existence. They were quaint figures with bizarre expressions, with hair often of a lively shade, and with names—Nina, Bianca, Liane, Lucille. They were a war economy, and are now entirely replaced by waxfigures which are more elaborate and more costly than ever, ranging from $150 to $200. The foundations of these figures are usually made from casts, the smiles and expressions put on by hand in the wax, and the complexions are also hand work. Each hair in the coiffure, the eyebrows, and the eyelashes is set in separately. American wax figures now rival the best French ones, which have been superior. Men's figures were used for patriotic purposes during the war, and are now being used, as they never have been before, for regular commercial display. They are less costly than the women's, the best of the men selling for $100, and they may be had as low as $25 or $50.

Rag Carpets Being Bought.

With the greatly increased price of pile fabrics since the war the old time rag carpet has come into its own. There began to be a more or less general use of the rag carpet some ten or fifteen years ago with a constantly increasing popularity, but within the last two years it has come up with leaps and bounds. It has been the only carpet many people have felt able to buy and it was the cheapest and most practical thing on the market. It increased some 75 per cent. in price and has only now dropped a third of that. It is made by small country manufacturers, both old and new rags being used. A few large manufacturers make it as a side line. Previous to war times it was most used in Colonial and old-time houses for decorative and period effect. The braided rug, which is associated with the rag carpet, has not shared its increase in popularity. It is always hand-made and consequently more expensive. Before wartimes great braided rugs to cover the entire centre of a floor ran up as high as $100 apece at retail. Both braided mats and rag carpet are now regular staples in the retail carpet trade.

Coal Trade Situation.

The possibility of anthracite mines being obliged to go on part time in midwinter owing to depressed market conditions, Saward's Weekly will say today, became an actuality last week, when many of the independent operators took such action. In some cases the shutdowns began Feb. 1, coincident with the dropping of price control by the Fuel Administration. The whole question of anthracite prices is very much up in the air just now. Briefly, the situation is that mining costs justify an increase, but market conditions do not. Many retail dealers and consumers not only refuse to give serious heed to the possibility of higher prices, but are convinced that the next change will be downward. They are bent on reducing their stocks rather than increasing them, the result being that business is on a strictly hand-to-mouth basis. In bituminous there has been no very marked slump in tonnage movement in recent weeks. The coal people are cautious about making quotations for the coming year, feeling that the wisest course is to play a waiting game and see what develops in the next few weeks.

REAL ESTATE FIELD

The revival of speculative buying in the old retail shopping district was given new impetus yesterday in the sale of two modern loft buildings valued at about $1,300,000 by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company to Bing & Bing, operators and builders.

The transaction involved the twelve-story store and loft structure at 15 and 17 West Twenty-first Street and a lot, 58 feet wide, running through to 16 and 18 West Twenty-second Street. It was built a few years ago by Henry Corn.

The other property is also a twelve-story structure at 37 to 45 West Twentieth Street on a plot 106 by 92 feet, adjoining the Church of the Holy Communion at the corner of Sixth Avenue. Brady, Adler & Koch erected the building in 1910. The J. Romaine Brown Company negotiated the entire transaction.

Henry Clay Frick Negotiating for the Bryce Estate, Held at $550,000.

Negotiations have practically been closed for the sale of the estate of the late Lloyd S. Bryce at Roslyn, L. I., to Henry Clay Frick, whose mansion occupies the site of the old Lenox Library on Fifth Avenue, between Seventieth and Seventy-first Streets. The Bryce estate, which was formerly the home of William Cullen Bryant, is valued at about $550,000. It consists of about 200 acres of land improved with a large brick mansion and numerous outbuildings. The house is from plans by Ogden Codman, who has designed many notable country homes. Mr. Frick now has an estate in Massachusetts. William J. Roome & Co. are the brokers in the transaction.

Jesup House Bought by Improvement Corporation.

The Barnun Realty Company, represented by Rose & Paskus, attorneys, sold the former residence of Mrs. Morris K. Jesup, on plot 49.5 by 100, at 195 and 197 Madison Avenue, southeast corner of Thirty-fifth Street, to the Commercial Improvement Corporation of Madison Avenue, Inc.

The property, which is opposite B. Altman & Co., will eventually be improved by the purchasers, though no definite plans for the work have yet been made.

The Tacoma Sold to Operator.

The Tacoma, a six-story elevator apartment house, consisting of seven stores and thirty-two apartments, located on plot 100 by 100 at 1,364-1,370 St. Nicholas Avenue, was sold by the Alenel Construction Company (Heitner Wolf and Benjamin Mordecai) to the Nason Realty Co. (Max N. Natanson.) The property, situated near 179th Street, rents for $30,000 and was held at $250,000. Byrne & Bowman were the brokers in the transaction, which was for cash.

Charles & Kohler, Inc., resold for Ennis & Sinnot to an investor the five-story new-law apartment at 595 West 178th Street, on lot 25 by 100, adjoining the northeast corner of St. Nicholas Avenue. It was held at $32,000.

Education Notes.

Three teachers were tried yesterday by the Board of Education for absence from duty without notification to their Principals. They were Willi[illegible] H. Grant, teacher of biology in the High School of Commerce; Mrs. Lillian U. Vieht of P. S. 83, Manhattan, and Mrs. Rose V. Nacman of P. S. 52, Brooklyn. None of them was present at the trials, although each had been notified. Grant went West in December, 1917. He sent word that he had rheumatism and would return when he was better. He has not reported for duty since that time. Mrs. Vieht was absent from duty last term eighty-six days. Mrs. Nacman reported at her school on Sept. 6, 1918, and said that she intended to manage her brother's business. Unless she was granted a leave of absence, she said, she would resign. The board went into secret session as a committee on the three cases, and will recommend at the board's meeting on Feb. 13 that all three be dismissed.

The special committee on teachers' salaries of the Board of Education will hold its first meeting on next Tuesday evening in the Board of Education Hall. The Chamber of Commerce, the Merchants' Association, Boards of Trade, real estate organizations, organized labor and the various teachers' associations have been invited to send representatives to the meeting prepared to discuss the revision of the schedules of teachers' pay.

The committee appointed by the Board of Regents to investigate the financing of school systems in the State will hold a meeting on Monday.

An extension course on school management will be given by District Supt. William O'Flaherty under the auspices of the Evening Session of Hunter College, located at Lexington Avenue and Sixty-eighth Street. The class will meet Thursdays from 4:20 to 6 P. M. The first session will be held Feb. 20 in Room 307. The course is arranged for teachers who are preparing for the June and September examinations for higher license or for assistant to Principal. Credit of 30 points will be given by the Board of Education toward these examinations. A registration fee of $1 will be charged. Students may register Feb. 10, 11, 13, and 14 from 7:30 to 10 P. M., and Feb. 15 from 3 to 5 P. M.

The Board of Education announces the opening of the Spring term of the evening class in lip-reading at P. S. 93, corner Amsterdam Avenue and Ninety-third Street, on Feb. 10, at 7:30 P. M. All hard of hearing adults wishing to avail themselves of this opportunity of learning to read the lips, free of charge, will register at the school on Feb. 10.

On Feb. [illegible] the New York City Association of Teachers of English will hold a meeting at the Washington Irving High School. Mr. Alfred Noyes will read from his own poems at 11 o'clock in the morning. At the business meeting at 10:30 the report of the Committee on Contemporary Literature will be distributed as a bulletin of the association. The Committee on Oral English will present the final section of its report.

Three courses in Gregg Shorthand are to be given free to New York City teachers at the City College. The first is Elementary Gregg Shorthand is a thirty hour course beginning Feb. 7 and given on Fridays from 4 to 6 P. M. The second is Advanced Gregg Shorthand which is given on Saturdays, beginning Feb. 8 from 10 A. M. to 12 M. The third is a course in Methods in Gregg Shorthand which meets on Saturdays, beginning Feb. [illegible], conducted in the Commerce Building at Twenty-third Street and Lexington Avenue. No tuition fee is charged, teachers who enroll for these courses usually make a contribution of $1 for each course. This money helps to meet the administrative cost of Extension Courses. Teachers may register either in the Extension Office of the College, Room 16, Main Building or at the door of the Lecture Hall at the first session.

The Brooklyn Heads of Department Association will meet at Grant Hall, 489 Washington Avenue, near Fulton Street, on Feb. 11. There will be a discussion of teachers' salaries.

E. H. Ku[illegible]n, Superintendent of Schools in Ohio, will be the speaker at the Forum at P. S. 101, [illegible]1th Street, west of Lexington Avenue, tomorrow, at 8:15 P. M. There will be discussion and a musical programme.

There is a shortage of teachers in Brooklyn which is crippling the public schools. There are said to be 1,000 vacancies. Many of the classes are on half time.

THE WEATHER

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7. — High pressure predominates tonight, but without marked features, and there is no disturbance of consequence within the field of observation, although one over Eastern Colorado exhibits some indications of further development to the eastward.

Rains and snows continued quite generally in northern districts west of the Rocky Mountains, and there were also light snows in the Northwestern States, Illinois, Indiana, and Ohio, and light rains in Tennessee and the East Gulf States. Elsewhere fair weather prevailed.

Temperature changes were not of importance. Fair weather will prevail Saturday east of the Mississippi River, except in the Carolinas and Southern Virginia, where there will be scattered rains.

The weather Sunday will be fair in the Atlantic States, the lake region, and the upper Ohio Valley, while in the lower Ohio and lower Mississippi Valleys snow or rain is probable.

Temperature changes will not be decided.

Winds for Saturday and Sunday along the North Atlantic and Middle Atlantic Coasts will be gentle to moderate, shifting, with fair weather; South Atlantic Coast, gentle to moderate east, fair, except unsettled Saturday off the Carolina coast.

FORECAST, TODAY AND SUNDAY.

Eastern New York and New England—Fair Saturday and Sunday; little change in temperature.

New Jersey and Eastern Pennsylvania—Fair Saturday and probably Sunday; little change in temperature.

Western New York—Partly cloudy Saturday and Sunday.

The temperature record for the twenty-four hours ended at 11 P. M., taken from the thermometer at the local office of the United States Weather Bureau, is as follows:

3 A. M.	37	27	4 P. M.	49	41
6 A. M.	37	24	6 P. M.	46	38
9 A. M.	37	29	9 P. M.	38	35
12 M.	43	35	11 P. M.	34	33

This thermometer is 414 feet above the street level. The average temperature yesterday was 32; for the corresponding date last year it was 42; average on the corresponding date for the last thirty-three years, 30.

The temperature at 8 A. M. yesterday was 26; at 8 P. M. it was 36. Maximum temperature, 41 degrees at 4 P. M.; minimum, 24 degrees at 6:10 A. M. Humidity, 51 per cent. at 8 A. M., 39 per cent. at 8 P. M.

The barometer at 8 A. M. yesterday registered 30.12 inches; at 8 P. M. it stood at 30.12 inches.

MAY LEND ON WAR BONDS.

State Bank Superintendent's Ruling Will Aid New Liberty Loan.

George I. Skinner, State Superintendent of Banks, has ruled that savings institutions in New York State may lend money to depositors on notes secured by Liberty bonds. His statement, which was made public yesterday, is expected to have a decided influence on the success of the forthcoming Liberty Loan.

M. W. Harrison, Secretary of the Savings Bank Section of the American Bankers' Association, recently asked Mr. Skinner's opinion on the matter, and the Superintendent of Banks sent the following reply: "Paragraph A, Subdivision 8, Section 239, of the banking law authorizes savings banks to make demand loans on promissory notes specified secured by Liberty bonds up to 90 per cent. of the cash market value thereof." This means that the savings banks of the State may lend money for Liberty bond subscriptions.

TO CALL VICTORICA IN THE O'LEARY CASE

Chief German-Sinn Fein Propagandist Said Often to Have Met Defendant.

MRS. GONZALEZ TESTIFIES

Wife of Former Costa Rican Consul General Tells of Anti-Draft Speech by O'Leary.

H. Snowden Marshall, special counsel for the Government in the case of Jeremiah A. O'Leary, charged with violating the Espionage act, announced yesterday that on Monday morning he would put Marie K. de Victorica, who according to Secret Service agents was one of Germany's master spies in this country, on the stand. The Government hopes to establish that O'Leary was working in the interest of Germany, using the Irish situation to hide his real purpose.

Victorica was arrested in April last year after Federal agents had investigated her activities for several weeks. The Government was aided by a man serving a sentence in the Atlanta prison for plotting in the interest of Germany, who declared that her mission here was to direct the Sinn Fein propaganda for Germany in America. In connection with this work, according to the Government officials, she came into frequent contact with O'Leary. Testimony given by Victorica was largely instrumental in obtaining the indictments against John T. Ryan, Herman Wessels, Albert Paul Fricke, and others, who it is alleged were plotting against the United States. They are now awaiting trial.

Mrs. Manuel Gonzales, wife of the former Consul General of Costa Rica in New York, testified at yesterday's session of the trial that on July 16, 1917, several months after the Selective Service act had become a law, she had heard O'Leary urge an audience to fight conscription. The occasion, which she was able to recall through letters, was a meeting held at 715 Lexington Avenue and attended, she testified, by nearly a hundred persons. Asked by Assistant District Attorney James W. Osborne, Jr., how she learned the purpose of the meeting, Mrs. Gonzalez said that John O'Leary, a brother of the defendant, had told her it was to fight conscription.

"The Germans and Irish are very close and should help one another," she quoted Jeremiah O'Leary as saying in a speech at the meeting. "He said that President Wilson was practically King, and that we didn't have anything to say about the Government any more," she testified. "He declared that the Conscription act was unconstitutional, and that we were subservient to the English King. He said we never could win the war and we ought to fight against this act which was an outrage."

"Was the meeting an open one?" she was asked.

"No, it was not. When I got there I found the door guarded by three men. John D. Moore was one of the guards, and he never left his place except to make his speech. Paper had been pasted over the windows so that no one could look in."

Under cross-examination O'Leary sought to show by the witness that the meeting had been called for the purpose of making a card index for a charitable undertaking. The witness reiterated that it was to discuss ways of fighting conscription. O'Leary asked her if she did not recall, during his address, several women rising from their chairs and urging him to run for Mayor of New York and promising to "force" their menfolk to support him. She was unable to remember the incident.

Mrs. Gonzalez testified that she had seen many of the women who were at the meeting at the Irish Bazaar, held some time before in Madison Square Garden. She identified a woman in the back of the courtroom as one who attended the meeting. O'Leary then asked the witness if she meant to tell the court that a meeting of men and women, all over the draft age, was to fight the Selective Service act. The prosecution objected to further interrogation along this line.

"Of course you object!" shouted O'Leary, waving his hands. "I want to show that this is an attack on the Irish race—a diabolical conspiracy against the Irish race."

Arthur O'Leary of counsel for his brother brought an admission from Mrs. Gonzalez that her husband was a fugitive and that she had gone to the Department of Justice for facts which would be useful in litigation against him.

"Did you suggest to Captain Offley or other representatives of the Department of Justice that, if they would get these facts, you would swear against the defendant?"

"I'm not on the witness stand to be insulted by you or any one else," she snapped back.

Mrs. Gonzalez, under examination by Arthur O'Leary, also admitted that she had tried to obtain the release of a German who had been interned. The court would not allow her to divulge his name on objection from Mr. Marshall. The trial will be resumed on Monday.

TO ENFORCE PROHIBITION.

Glass Suggests Seizure of Premises to Curb Unlawful Selling.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—Provisions that buildings used for selling liquor in violation of the wartime prohibition act may be treated as public nuisances, and that courts may forbid use of the property for any purpose for a year, are included in legislation recommended today by Secretary Glass to the House Judiciary Committee.

The committee, considering a bill supported by the Anti-Saloon League for enforcing the prohibition act, had asked Secretary Glass for recommendations from the Internal Revenue Bureau.

Edwin Dinwiddie and Wayne B. Wheeler, representing the league at the hearing today when the department's suggestions were read, said their proposals in comparison were mild.

Enforcement of the act as proposed by Mr. Glass would rest with the Internal Revenue Bureau, assisted by Federal courts and United States Attorneys and Marshals. Any citizen, by written information supported by oath, might ask the Federal courts to direct the Marshals to search any property in order to seize liquor or its manufacturing apparatus; possession of liquor would be held as prima facie evidence of intention to sell, and liquor would be destroyed after seizure.

Property owners permitting violation of the law would be held guilty of aiding the nuisance for failure to eject tenants. The property, if placed under the one-year ban, might be released within that period if the owner gave bond and proved his good faith in wishing to abate the nuisance. Employes of persons violating the law might be tried as principals.

Besides authorizing destruction of seized goods, the bill would also authorize seizure, sale, or destruction of vehicles used for transporting liquor.

Japan Society's Election.

The Japan Society met yesterday in its rooms, at 165 Broadway, and elected Gerhard M. Dahl, Vice President of the Chase National Bank, as President; Major August Belmont, Vice President, and Eugene C. Worden, Secretary. Lindsay Russel, who had served as President for ten years, declined to accept renomination. He was chosen as Chairman of the Executive Committee. Other members of the Executive Committee elected yesterday were Union N. Bethell, Melville E. Stone, Thomas W. Lamont, Guy E. Tripp, George J. Baldwin, James R. Morse, and I. Hamaoka. In the year the membership grew from 1,253 to 1,414.

SOUTH APPEALS TO WILSON.

Senators and Representatives Urge Raising of Our Cotton Embargo.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—At a meeting of Representatives and Senators from the cotton-growing States held last night it was decided, on motion of Senator Smith of Georgia, that a cable dispatch be sent to President Wilson urging him to use his efforts to allow the cotton merchants of all allied countries to buy freely in the cotton markets of the United States. The cable dispatch also suggested that as soon as practicable cotton should be permitted to go to Austria and Germany.

In a resolution offered by Representative Heflin of Alabama it was asserted that the cotton farmer must receive 35 cents a pound for his 1918 crop. This resolution commends the farmers and merchants for refusing to sell cotton until they can "obtain a profitable price such as is now warranted by the law of supply and demand."

On motion of Representative Caraway of Arkansas it was decided to support a resolution in Congress to investigate the Cotton Exchanges of New York and New Orleans.

It was further decided to confer with President Wilson upon his return about the cotton situation.

Mr. Heflin asserted that it cost 25 cents a pound to produce the 1918 crop; that in 1914 cotton sold for $30 a bale, while in 1918 it cost $30 to pick, gin, and put bagging and ties on a bale of cotton.

He said that when the war was raging, and the sea was full of submarines, and every bale of cotton exported was in danger of being destroyed, cotton sold for 35 cents a pound, and now that cotton could move unmolested to all the allied and neutral countries the Exchanges had beaten down the price to 22 and 23 cents a pound, and this in the face of the fact that the world was demanding 6,000,000 more bales of cotton than America could supply.

ANTI-ZIONISTS PROTEST.

Kahn Cables Wilson That State Department Has Petition.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—Representative Julius Kahn of California cabled to President Wilson today informing him that a protest against the creation of an independent Jewish State, signed by 150 representative Jewish citizens, was being forwarded to him through the State Department.

Mr. Kahn, who on last Wednesday gave THE NEW YORK TIMES an interview setting forth his own views in opposition to a Zionist State, expressed the opinion that President Wilson had favored the proposal.

Feb. 5, 1919.
President Woodrow Wilson, Paris, France.

One hundred fifty representative Jewish citizens uniting in statement to be forwarded through State Department protesting against Zionist Jewish State. Document set forth reasons in detail, signatures attached represent prominent Jews in all walks of life residing all parts our country. Your consideration this statement earnestly solicited before any action is taken.

CITY GIVES MILLION TO ARMENIAN RELIEF

LAUDS PRESIDENT WILSON

Peace Conference Arranging New Government in Near East, He Says, Under Proper Guarantees.

Speaking yesterday at a luncheon of workers in the $30,000,000 campaign of the Committee for Relief in the Near East, held at the Bankers' Club, Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, pastor of the Free Synagogue, declared that Armenia is virtually free, and that a new Government for that country is being planned at the Peace Conference.

In the course of the luncheon, Dr. R. Constantian, an Armenian resident of this city, presented an ancient sanctuary lamp from a Russian Jewish synagogue to Dr. Wise as an appreciation of his efforts in behalf of Armenia.

"It is only a few days since my return from Paris," said Dr. Wise, "and I saw something of what was going on there. Your hearts should rejoice, as my heart rejoices, in the circumstance that the leader of the American people stands out above all other men as the leader of the world in the direction of peace through justice. He has come to command the reverence and the affection and the faith of millions of men who do not speak the English tongue, but who understand him, who love him and honor him because they feel that he is, as we believe him to be, America incarnate.

"And now I have come to share good tidings with you, as I believe I have the right to share with you. We believe that the day of liberation for Armenia must come soon, that Armenia is at least to be free to weave its own destiny. It may be that Armenia will accept or agree to accept some trusteeship or guarantee, which will not limit, but safeguard, her from harm. I know that Armenia is grateful for all that America has done for her during these terrible years. Perhaps we, or the world, will forget what she has gone through, but Armenia will never forget.

"Let me say that, for this help, we have to thank the Armenian and Syrian Committee for Relief in the Near East, whose leader I wish I could overcome my reluctance to name at this time, but whom we all cherish and love. We must remember two things—we must keep Armenia from Turkish iniquity, and then we must feed her."

A total of $143,081.65 was reported from the Executive Committee and from teamworkers in the campaign yesterday, bringing the grand total for the city well over the million mark. The teams plan to work until Monday night, when it is expected that at least $2,000,000 will have been contributed to the campaign.

Frank R. Jackson, leader of the Greek team, reported yesterday that the Greeks in this city were enthusiastic in trying to aid Syria and Armenia toward freedom. The Greek team reported $5,000 from the National Greek Herald, $1,000 from the Pan Hellenic Society, and $675 from the Greek Community of Brooklyn. The total of the team's report was $9,772.

TO KEEP EDISON'S BIRTHDAY

Pioneer Associates Will Entertain Inventor and His Wife.

Special to The New York Times.

ORANGE, N. J., Feb. 7.—In honor of the seventy-second birthday of Thomas A. Edison, which falls on Tuesday, the Edison Pioneers, organized in New York a year ago by half a hundred friends who were associated with the inventor prior to 1886, will entertain Mr. and Mrs. Edison at luncheon at the Robert Treat, Newark, at noon on Monday. A number of letters containing reminiscences of old times will be presented to Mr. Edison by his friends. Following the dinner, Mr. Edison will leave for his plantation at Fort Myers, Fla., for a rest.

The pioneers, who include men from all parts of the world, will hold their first annual meeting on Monday morning in Newark. The present officers are: President, Francis R. Upton of Orange; Vice Presidents, S. Z. Mitchell and T. Commerford Martin of New York; Treasurer, Frank A. Scheffler of New York; Secretary, Robert T. Lozier of New York; Historian, William H. Meadowcroft of Orange.

PACKERS' PLAN FOR INQUIRY.

Veeder Admits Considering Questions to be Put by Friends in House.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—Henry Veeder, counsel for Swift & Co., testified before the Senate Committee on Agriculture today, on cross-examination by Francis J. Heney, that friends of the packers throughout the country were solicited to bring influence to bear on members of Congress to defeat the Borland resolution providing for an investigation of the meat-packing industry. Representatives were also sent to Washington to observe developments in the Senate Judiciary sub-committee which was considering the proposal in 1916, he said.

Mr. Heney said that E. Dana Durand, who later became accountant for the Food Administration, suggested that a prearranged series of questions be furnished friendly members of Congress to ask witnesses who were to be examined in the course of the investigation.

The packers desired, Mr. Veeder said, to have the Bureau of Markets of the Department of Agriculture issue reports on the meat industry from information supplied by the packing companies. Mr. Durand approved this plan, he said, and offered to urge it to "friends in the Federal Trade Commission and the Bureau of Markets." A model letter embracing this scheme, to be sent to the Secretary of Agriculture by each of the big packers, was suggested by Mr. Durand, according to letters read by Mr. Heney.

Frequent verbal encounters between Mr. Heney and Mr. Veeder marked the testimony dealing with efforts of the Federal Trade Commission's investigators to search the attorney's private vault for papers, and Mr. Heney charged that a guard he had placed in Mr. Veeder's offices was bribed with gifts of whisky and cigars. Mr. Veeder vigorously denied this.

J. Spencer Smith, head of a New York importing and commission firm, was heard today by the House Interstate Commerce Committee, which is also considering legislation to regulate the meat industry. Mr. Smith said that if transportation was available to every one on equal terms the five leading meat packers would be stripped of whatever power they might possess, and that they "could not then possibly be a menace to the industry or to the country at large." The transportation problem, he said, was at the bottom of many ills.

NAMES NEW CHAMBERLAIN.

Park Commissioner Berolzheimer Promoted—Gallatin to Head Parks.

Mayor Hylan announced last night that he had appointed Philip Berolzheimer, Commissioner of Parks for Manhattan and the Bronx and President of the Park Board, to be City Chamberlain to succeed Alfred J. Johnson, who resigned recently. Mr. Berolzheimer was appointed Park Commissioner last November to succeed William F. Grell, who was appointed when the Mayor took office, and later came under the Mayor's displeasure.

As City Chamberlain Mr. Berolzheimer will receive $12,000 a year. In the Mitchel administration Henry Bruere, who was Chamberlain, urged that the office be abolished as being unnecessary.

To succeed Mr. Berolzheimer as Park Commissioner the Mayor appointed Francis Dawson Gallatin, who was a temporary City Magistrate, appointed by the Mayor to act in the place of Magistrate Frederick D. House. Mr. Gallatin is a lawyer and the son of the late James Gallatin, who was President of the Society for Improving the Condition of the Poor and the Tenement House Commission. Mr. Gallatin has interested himself in the work of the Prison Association and the reform of criminal procedure. He was born in New York City in 1870, and received his education at Columbia.

The new Commissioner is a great-grandson of Albert Gallatin, who was Secretary of the Treasury in the Administrations of Madison and Jefferson. Before taking up the practice of law Mr. Gallatin entered the Diplomatic Service, and for two years was stationed at Constantinople as an attaché of the American Legation under John J. Leishman. In 1917 he was the Democratic candidate for Judge of the Municipal Court in the Ninth New York District. While interested in prison reform work Mr. Gallatin defended many criminals free of charge in General and Special Sessions. As Chairman of the Committee on Criminal Courts and Procedure of the New York County Lawyers' Association Mr. Gallatin urged on the Commission on Feeble-Minded the need for reform in legal procedure dealing with feeble-minded lawbreakers.

The Mayor also announced the appointment of James J. Nugent of 465 East Fifty-seventh Street as Deputy Commissioner of Street Cleaning for Manhattan to succeed H. Warren Hubbard, who resigned recently.

British Imports Increase.

LONDON, Feb. 7.—The Board of Trade figures for the month of January show that imports increased by £35,522,000, of which £23,000,000 represented food, and £10,000,000 raw materials, including £1,500,000 in cotton. Exports increased £5,677,000, mostly of manufactures, of which £1,225,000 represented cotton textiles.

SEATTLE CALMED BY QUICK ACTION OF AUTHORITIES

Presence of Troops with Machine Guns Prevents Disorder in Big Strike.

SOME CAR LINES RUNNING

Citizens Announce to the Nation That They Will Not Treat with Revolutionists.

MAYOR'S STAND IS FIRM

Ole Hanson, Far Famed as a Fighter, Says Backbone of the Strike Is Broken.

SEATTLE, Feb. 8.—This city, which is the hot-bed of I. W. W. insurrection on the Pacific Coast, went to bed tonight feeling a bit calmer and more satisfied that possibly by Monday the strike of 75,000 men would have been ended through the quick action of city, State, and Federal authorities.

Tonight the street cars are running on schedule on the municipally owned line, and some lines have been opened by the traction companies on orders from Mayor Ole Hanson.

In Tacoma, also on Puget Sound, several thousand men went back to work today and were glad to have their old jobs back. But some labor leaders are out of jobs which paid them as high as $200 a month, and they will have a lot of explaining to do to get their old places back again, if they ever do.

The schools will reopen as usual on Monday, the janitors declaring they will be glad to work, and it appears that the Mayor was right when he said today, "The backbone of the strike has been broken."

This, of course, is denied by the strikers' committees, but with machine guns staring them in the face it is doubtful if the strikers will attempt to carry out anything in the nature of disorder.

Soldiers Ready for Action.

Soldiers with rifles and bayonets fixed are still guarding points of possible danger. There were no demonstrations against them reported, and their presence was taken by strikers as a matter of fact. On the downtown streets the sale of newspapers declared "unfair" by the Newsboys' Union was resumed under guard of police and soldiers. A large crowd looked on, but no trouble ensued.

Seattle walked to work this morning or begged a ride from its friends, but this afternoon some were able to ride home or part way home. Every cart that entered the downtown district carried several passengers, and motorists for the most part were ready to give the chance pedestrian a lift. The city is widely scattered, with many remote residence districts, and is set upon terraced hills that are extremely steep climbing, and there is vastly more exercise in the situation than citizens deem necessary.

While the authorities called for Americanism and urged citizens to protect their city by carrying on their affairs as usual, hundreds of revolutionary handbills were circulated among the strikers. Their source is not traceable, but the caption of the revolutionary appeal is "Russia Did It."

Will Not Treat with Reds.

The Citizens' Committee announced in a statement that "the business interests and general community looked on the 'general strike' as rebellion against the Government," and not a strike. The statement concluded:

"The citizens and business interests have not entertained, and will not entertain, any proposals relating to the 'general strike.' We request that the people of America be informed of this fact and be notified that Seattle is not treating with the revolutionists and is not in the hands of revolutionists."

In the business centre several more restaurants opened their doors to patrons today, and all city electrical workers returned to work, the International Union having refused to sanction the strike. Union bakers continued at work today and grocers attempted to make regular deliveries.

Ship calkers at Gray's Harbor shipyards voted to return to work, but at Vancouver, B. C., the longshoremen voted not to handle any freight diverted to Vancouver from Seattle on account of the strike.

Officials of the Puget Sound Traction, Light and Power Company said they believed it was a matter of hours when the backbone of the Seattle strike would be broken. Their street car employes, they said, were then congregating at the various car barns, preparing to return to work.

The Seattle Star issued another edition this noon, the plant being under guard of police. The Bulletin, a one-page publication used for posting about the city, also appeared, police being sent out with the men distributing the copies.

Counsel Against Disorder.

During the day the Strike Committee issued a bulletin, reviewing the strike situation from the viewpoint of labor, and carrying an editorial which predicted that disorder, if any should occur, would be chargeable to others than the strikers.

"You are doing fine, boys; sit tight, keep order, don't lose your temper," it advised, "and victory will be ours."

Despite Seattle's multiplied trials, there are elements of humor in the situa-

Anarchists Tried Revolution in Seattle, but Never Got to First Base, Says Mayor Hanson

By OLE HANSON,
Mayor of Seattle.
By Telegraph to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

SEATTLE, Wash., Feb. 8.—Two years ago our city had 15,000 industrial workers; today we have 65,000. The American Federation of Labor two years ago controlled our labor organizations. The influx of workmen from all over the country and from Russia brought in a very large radical and I. W. W. element. Under stress of the war the American Federation of Labor unions allowed these anarchists to join their unions.

The I. W. W. element, noisy and active, talked the loudest and promised the most, and secured partial control of the Central Labor Council and active control of a great many unions in Seattle. The shipyard workmen were dissatisfied with the Macey award; the radicals and I. W. W. demanded a general strike. The Soviet Government of Russia, duplicated here, was their plan. The conservative leaders acted the part of cowards in most instances, and the sympathetic strike was called.

The Central Labor Council, which is composed of the heads of the different unions, is controlled by the radicals, and the working people of Seattle were made to believe that a general strike would increase the pay of the shipyard workers. Many members of the labor organizations believed they could take over the industries, Government, &c.

The sympathetic revolution was called in the exact manner as was the revolution in Petrograd. Labor tried to run everything. Janitors and engineers in schools were called out, everything was stopped, except a few things, which were exempted.

We refused to ask for exemptions from any one. The seat of Government is at the City Hall. We organized 1,000 extra police, armed with rifles and shot guns, and told them to shoot on sight any one causing disorder. We got ready for business. We had already had trouble in two instances heretofore and had completely whipped the Bolsheviki. They knew we meant business, and they started no trouble.

I issued a proclamation that all life and property would be protected; that all business should go on as usual, and this morning all our municipal street cars, light, power plants, water, &c., were running full blast.

This was an attempted revolution which they expected to spread all over the United States. It never got to first base, and it never will if the men in control of affairs will tell all traitors and anarchists that death will be their portion if they start anything. Law and order are supreme in our city.

The labor unions must now cleanse themselves of their anarchistic element or the labor unions must fall. They are on trial before the people of this country. I take the position that our duty as citizens stands ahead of the demand of any organization on the face of the earth. The union men, the business men, the churchmen, must first of all be citizens. Any man who owes a higher allegiance to any organization than he does to the Government should be sent to a Federal prison or deported.

Let the National Government stop pandering to and conciliating the men who talk against it. Let us clean up the United States of America. Let all men stand up and be counted. If the majority of the people of this country are disloyal and owe superior allegiance to some other country or some other cause, now is the time to find it out. We refuse to treat with these revolutionists. Unconditional surrender are our only terms.

Among the proofs that this is a revolution and not a strike are the following extracts from an editorial in The Labor Union Record of Feb. 4:

> We are undertaking the most tremendous move ever made by labor in this country, a move which will lead no one knows where. We do not need hysteria, we need the iron march of labor. The Strike Committee is arranging for guards, and it is expected that the stopping of the cars will keep people at home.
>
> The closing down of Seattle's industries as a mere shutdown will not affect these Eastern gentlemen much. They could let the whole Northwest go to pieces as far as money alone is concerned. But the closing down of the capitalistically controlled industries of Seattle, while the workers organize to feed the people, to care for the babies and the sick, to preserve order—this will move them, for this looks too much like the taking over of power by the workers.
>
> Labor will not only shut down the industries, but labor will reopen, under the management of the appropriate trades, such activities as are needed to preserve public health and public peace.
>
> If the strike continues labor may feel led to avoid public suffering by reopening more and more activities under its own management, and that is why we say that we are starting on a road that leads no one knows where.

MAIL CENSORSHIP REPEAL BEATEN

Senate, 39 to 25, Rejects Amendment by Borah to Curtail Burleson's Powers.

TERMED PRESS CENSORSHIP

Results in That, Says Idaho Member—Other Senators Fear Sweep of Bolshevism.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—The Senate today voted down an amendment representing an effort by Senator Borah to repeal sections of the Espionage law giving authority to the Postmaster General to exercise censorship over mail matter. Senator Borah said that, while press censorship had been voted out of the espionage law when it was in the Senate, Mr. Burleson had so used the authority given to him under that measure as to establish, in reality, the very censorship against which Congress had set itself. He wanted the press "unmuzzled."

Mr. Borah sought the repeal of the sections bearing upon the exclusion of mail matter through an amendment to the Post Office Appropriation bill. After a long debate, Senator Bankhead of Alabama, in charge of the measure, raised the point of order that the Idaho Senator's amendment was general legislation and as such could not be accepted as part of the bill. Vice President Marshall sustained Mr. Bankhead. Mr. Borah moved for a suspension of the rules so as to incorporate the amendment in the measure. This motion the Senate voted down 39 to 25.

Senator Borah's attack upon the sections of the espionage law touching upon mail matter was confined to what he characterized as an unquestioned censorship of the press. The sections as they stand in the law, he said, ostensibly give the Postmaster General the right to exclude seditious matter from the mails, but that authority, he insisted, has been stretched by the Postmaster General. Now, he said, a rigorous press censorship has been established through persistent use of the mail embargo.

PARIS, Feb. 7.—George D. Herron and William Allen White, the two representatives of the American Government to the conference with the Bolshviki, have never met, but will have ample time to get acquainted and to exchange views on the journey from Paris to Prinkipo. Professor Herron, a member of the Socialist group which approved of the American Government going into the war, has been for a long time in Switzerland, paying special attention to Socialists and other radicals in all European countries with reference to their attitude toward war and peace.

The Russian situation has been the subject of his special inquiry, and much of the information concerning that country which has come to the American Government has come through him.

Mr. White is no Socialist. He was chosen apparently as a hard-headed American with a great capacity for getting on well with all comers. I asked him today why he was going to Prinkipo.

"The only reason I know so far," he replied, "is that I have been asked. I have never been in Russia, and can speak no language other than United States and Red Cross restaurant French. I am neither a Socialist nor a Bolshevik. The last political conviction I had was that of a Bull Mooser. In 1916 I voted for Hughes because there was no Bull Moose in sight.

HOUSE PASSES NEW REVENUE BILL, VOTING 310 TO 11

Seven Democrats and Four Republicans Decline to Accept the Measure.

KITCHIN IS FOR CHANGES

Repeats That Joint Resolution Will Be Offered to Cut Out Luxury Tax.

MORE MONEY FOR SOLDIERS

Award of $60 to Discharged Men Called "Measly Sum"—Need of More Revenue Seen.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—The War Revenue bill, under the terms of which it is proposed to raise $6,077,200,000 in taxes in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1919, was adopted by the House at 6:35 o'clock this evening by the overwhelming vote of 310 to 11, with twelve Representatives voting "Present."

The measure will go to the Senate on Monday and the almost unanimous action by the House is taken as a prediction that the Senate will give its approval by Monday night. Senator Simmons, Chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, has promised to urge speedy action.

Seven Democrats and only four Republicans voted against the measure in the House today. They are:

Democrats—Blackman, Alabama; Humphrey, Stevens, Venable, and Sissons, Mississippi, and Dies and Rayburn, Texas.

Republicans—Dyer, Missouri; Langley and Powers, Kentucky, and Sells, Tennessee.

The opposition of southern Congressmen was said to be centered on what they held to be the unfairness of the section placing a prohibitive tax on child labor. A motion offered by Representative Venable to recommit the bill to conference, which was passed upon before the final vote, was defeated 171 to 15, and after that the last attempt to sidetrack the measure was abandoned.

While the bill will not become law until the signature of President Wilson is attached, the Treasury Department has already made plans to place its machinery for the collection of the taxes in motion the moment that the Senators vote in the affirmative. The bill will be placed before the President immediately upon his return from France, and there seems to be no ground for believing that he will do otherwise than sign it.

From the minute that Chairman Kitchin of the Ways and Means Committee began to make his statement of how the bill had been framed, to the members of the House, at noon today, it was a foregone conclusion that the bill would be approved. Mr. Kitchin had the situation well in hand, and while he criticised certain sections of the bill with sufficient ardor to satisfy those who, like himself, felt that a larger taxation should have been provided for and that the so-called big interests might escape too lightly because of provisions inserted by the Senate, he had enough good words in behalf of the measure to make it certain that no spirit of opposition could be organized which would actually endanger favorable action.

Fight on Luxury Tax.

The important announcement was made to the House by Mr. Kitchin that steps had been taken to eliminate Section 904 of the excise tax title from the bill after it became law, by the pressing of a joint resolution for its repeal. This section provides for a 10 per cent. tax on sales of what have been termed semi-luxuries, hats, shirts, &c., costing more than a certain stated amount. Mr. Kitchin said the resolution would be presented before the date on which this tax would become effective, and expressed the hope that his co-workers in the House would give their support.

This section, Mr. Kitchin explained, had first been inserted by the House before the armistice was signed, to promote economy in buying rather than to impose a tax penalty. The House rate was then 20 per cent. The Senate voted to lower the tax to 10 per cent., and

ECONOMIC BOARD PICKED

Council Will Handle Matters of Food, Finance, Blockade, Shipping, and Raw Materials

PARIS, Feb. 8.—The Supreme War Council continued today its discussion of the terms for a renewal of the armistice with Germany. At the close of the session it was announced that on President Wilson's motion it had been voted to establish a "supreme economic council" to deal with the matters of finance, food, blockade control, and shipping of raw materials during the period of the armistice.

This new economic council is to take the place of all similar bodies now existing, and is to consist of not more than five representatives of each interested Government.

The resolution also provided for adding to the present armistice commission two civilian members from each Government, who should consult with the allied high command, but might report direct to the new economic council.

The general action of the War Council follows out the indications seen at yesterday's session that the civilian elements had decided that the time had come to assert themselves. This was thought significant of the gradual change from war conditions to those of normal peace times.

This official communication concerning the meeting was issued this afternoon:

The Supreme War Council met this afternoon from 3 to 5 o'clock at the Quai D'Orsay. The discussion of the terms of the renewal of the armistice was continued.

The following resolution, proposed by President Wilson, was approved:

"First—Under present conditions many questions not primarily of military character, which are arising daily and which are bound to become of increasing importance as time passes, should be dealt with on behalf of the United States and the Allies by civilian representatives of these governments experienced in such questions—finance, food, blockade control, shipping, and raw materials.

"Second—To accomplish this, there shall be constituted at Paris a Supreme Economic Council to deal with such matters for the period of the armistice. The Council shall absorb or replace all such other existing interallied bodies and their powers, as it may determine from time to time. The Economic Council shall consist of not more than five representatives of each interested Government.

"Third—There shall be added to the present international permanent armistice commission two civilian representatives of each Government, who shall consult with the allied high command, but who may report direct to the Supreme Economic Council."

The next meeting will take place on Monday at 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

Transatlantic Flight Planned by the Navy; Commander Towers Is Now Arranging for It

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—The navy is planning a transatlantic flight by which it hopes to establish the possibility of aerial transportation between America and Europe. It had not been the intention of Secretary Daniels to disclose at this time the fact that the navy was making plans for such a flight, and no announcement would have been made had not the fact slipped out that Commander John K. Towers had been relieved from duty with the Naval Bureau of Operations and detailed to formulate plans for the scheme.

While the Navy Department is not willing at this time to go into details, it is learned that plans have progressed to the point where selection of the pilots who are to attempt the first voyage is being made.

Secretary Daniels smiled broadly when asked tonight for details. "I cannot go into them now," he said. "Later there will be an official announcement, but at this time I think it wiser to let matters rest where they stand without going into details. We are anxious that the navy gets the credit for the first flight. We had, therefore, hoped that nothing would get out about it, but through a little slip the fact that orders to Commander Towers had been issued got out, and we can do nothing more than confirm the fact that we are planning such a flight without going into details."

"Do you expect to beat the British in making the first flight across the Atlantic?" Mr. Daniels was asked.

"We hope to be able to beat the world," replied the Secretary.

Mr. Daniels would not discuss routes but there is reason for believing that the Azores route will be considered, and that in order to avoid the fogs of the Newfoundland coast, the starting point will be in the vicinity of New York. The distance from Long Island to San Miguel, in the Azores, is roughly 2,250 nautical miles.

More Delay Foreseen in Reaching Peace; Final Action Not Likely Till Midsummer

By ERNEST MARSHALL.
Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Feb. 7.—When, it is asked, will peace be reached? The somewhat optimistic predictions made a couple of weeks ago, that the signature of the Treaty of Versailles would take place in April, have had to be modified, and I am able to say on authority of the highest kind that the work of the conference cannot be concluded before midsummer. When once the ground is cleared and the Germans can be called into the conference events will move rapidly. The German case will, of course, receive a full hearing, but it is not expected that this will take more than a fortnight at the most.

Some disappointment is felt that the original time table should have been subjected to delay, and this dissatisfaction finds a good deal of expression in the French press, and in some sections of the English press of the hurry order. In some instances the procedure adopted is held to blame; in others it is stated that the difficulties of the settlement are seen to be greater the nearer they are approached. Possibly the truth lies in the suggestion made by a man in closest touch with the operations of the conference as a whole.

"The human machine," he said, "is one of limited capacity, and one's accomplishment is but rarely the measure of one's desire."

The same authority laid stress on the necessity of remembering that impatient criticisms could not be to the general interest of the world. The restiveness of the Continental press has been particularly marked, and in some quarters it is attributed chiefly to the somewhat cynical view taken of the League of Nations as a God-given instrument to prevent war in the whole of futurity. Some of the most fervent advocates of the league as a practical measure—and here I am referring particularly to those outside the American delegation—are convinced that, even if all expectations are not realized, enough has already been accomplished to have made the undertaking of the task set himself by President Wilson quite worth while.

When the constitution of the league is announced, as it is expected it may be in the plenary session of the Peace Conference next Wednesday, it will be found, according to the news I am quoting, that, even if war has not been made impossible, it will have been made so difficult that the world will be practically safe from another Armageddon for at least half a century.

"Nobody," said one exponent of this theory, "can prevent, let us say, two of the Balkan peoples from trying to cut one another's throats, if they are determined to try it regardless of the consequences, and nobody can guarantee the world against the growth of human or national ambitions in a future which is bound to be more or less a repetition of the history of the past world. But at least this much has been achieved or is in process of achievement—that new standards are being emblazoned for all the world to see."

GERMANS ELECT DAVID TO PRESIDE

VIEWS OF EBERT ECHOED

New President Demands Self-Determination for Alsace-Lorraine and Welcomes Austria.

WEIMAR, Feb. 7, (Associated Press.)—Dr. Eduard David, for many years one of the leaders of the German Social Democratic Party, today was elected President of the German National Assembly. Dr. David, who is one of the Under Secretaries of State for Foreign Affairs, received 374 out of a total of 399 votes, the Independent Socialists withholding their votes.

The Clerical member, Fehrenbach, a former President of the Reichstag; the Democrat, Haussmann, and the Conservative, Dietrich, were elected Vice Presidents. Fehrenbach and Haussmann received 374 votes each and Dietrich 356.

The voting was by ballot, and there was considerable confusion when the delegates crowded into the narrow aisles of the theatre to place their votes in the ballot boxes.

One woman delegate, who hesitated in answering to her name in the roll call yesterday, was equally bashful and self-conscious during the voting today. After some hesitation, she walked to the raised dais, ignored the outstretched hand of the teller, and deposited the ballot herself. The woman then turned and gazed about triumphantly before descending the stairs.

Echoes Views of Ebert.

Dr. David's speech in addressing the Assembly was little more than a repetition of the words of Chancellor Ebert on Thursday, especially when he referred to Alsace-Lorraine and the union of Austria with Germany, both of these references being loudly cheered. He said that the old German structure had been destroyed, and appealed to the Assembly to build up a new and better house in the place of the old one.

Dr. David brought a wave of approval when he said that political self-discipline was a pre-condition to political self-determination, and another when he declared that the Assembly should be the headquarters of the free world. Germany was a country ripe for democracy, he continued, but he warned the Assembly that the PARIS, Feb. 7.—The appearance of the Hedjaz delegation before the Supreme Council has caused developments which seem likely to bring the whole question of self-determination of the Arab nations, 13,000,000 strong, into the forefront of many problems before the conference.

It is stated with every appearance of authority that the main crux of the problem does not lie in the rivalry between France and Great Britain. This view, it is said, has been widely presented in dispatches to America, and would seem to have had at least some justification in the outcry raised in the Paris press yesterday and today. This is, however, described as really the least difficult aspect of a very complex question.

As has been suggested, the acceptance by the United States of trusteeship for the Arabian races from the Red Sea to India's borders, who want an independent national existence, but who recognize that they require to be nursed in the amenities of modern civilization, would remove some difficulties from the problem. An American trusteeship would not be inacceptable to the opinion for which Prince Faisal is spokesman, for his father, the Sultan of Hedjaz, and he have had reports submitted to them that reflect credit on the American administration of Cuba and the Philippines.

Although they understand that the American authorities are not agreed on this point they are prepared to accept the decision of the Peace Conference if the United States will undertake to teach them how to run electric power works, build, and operate railroads, and otherwise modernize their countries.

In default of America the Arabian nationalists, for that is their political position, make a strong point for a single mandatory power and express no particular preference for Great Britain or France, as trustee of the League of Nations.

COMMISSION RUSHES DRAFT

Expects to Report Completed Project to Conference Early This Week.

By CHARLES A. SELDEN.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Feb. 8.—The plans for the League of Nations are now taking shape and so far as tentatively approved by the commission, of which President Wilson is Chairman, they go much further in the use of force than was originally contemplated in the American scheme, according to an explanation given this morning by Ferdinand Larnaude, who is an associate of Leon Bourgeois as one of the French members of the League Commission.

He apparently had authority from his associates today when he sent for the correspondents and outlined the progress that had been made. According to his summary, the present plans call:

First—For a league which shall have an Executive Committee, with full powers, always in session, the ten or twelve members being appointed by the larger powers directly but acting for the entire league.

Second—There is to be a judicial tribunal before which nations may be ordered to appear by the executive body to settle their differences.

Third—There is to be an international parliament, sitting once a year with delegates from all the member nations, to consider world legislation.

Fourth—There is to be an international military force, consisting of an army as well as a navy. Each nation is to maintain its part of this army within its own borders, subject to call by the executive body of the league to serve wherever needed.

This military force is to be used only to compel the nations to avail themselves of the preliminary machinery of the League to settle their differences without war. If this machinery fails war will be permitted without further interference by the League provided the belligerents observe such rules and regulations of warfare as may be formulated by the League.

It is further planned also that an economic boycott and similar forms of pressure will be usable to bring to terms any nation which wants to fight.

The creation of an effective land and sea military force as an adjunct to the league is, I think, insisted upon by France, for she would consider a league without such a force as no protection for her in the future against Germany.

Incidentally M. Larnaude remarked that the chief danger of war coming in the future would be found in Germany, the Balkans, and the new States now forming in Eastern Europe.

Lessons Fruitful in Results.

PARIS, Feb. 8.—The League of Nations Commission is near the end of its task, and it is expected that it will make a report of the draft of the Constitution early next week.

After having at a long session last night completed two-thirds of the draft, the commission met again this morning at the Hotel de Crillon.

According to the official communiqué, issued afterward, "only a few articles" remain to be presented formally, while the same accord prevails as formerly among the members.

A few matters have been referred to the Drafting Committee for clarification, and the committee will meet tomorrow to expedite these. Some other points, it is added, may be reopened for discussion before the commission reports to the conference.

At 10:30 o'clock this morning at Hotel de Crillon the Commission on the League of Nations held a meeting which was marked by the same accord of view that has characterized its previous sessions.

At the end of this meeting the commission finds itself nearing the end of its task. Only a few articles of the draft remain to be presented formally to the members of the commission. A few matters, referred to the Drafting Committee for clarification, still require reference back to the commission, and certain points, provisionally accepted, may be reopened for discussion before the commission makes its report to the conference.

M. Ricci Busatti was named to represent the Italian delegation on the secretariat. The committee will meet again at 10:30 Monday morning.

On Sunday afternoon the Drafting Committee above referred to, consisting of Paul Hymans (Belgium), Léon Bourgeois (France), Lord Robert Cecil (Great Britain), and M. Venizelos (Greece), will meet at the Hotel Majestic in order to prepare a report for the next meeting of the committee.

This communiqué was issued regarding last night's meeting:

The Commission on the Society of Nations met on the evening of Feb. 7 and continued its discussion of articles of the draft.

Substantial agreement was reached by the commission on the chief points discussed. The commission decided, however, that certain clauses of the draft should be referred to a subcommittee of four for clarification.

In order that the greatest possible progress might be made with the draft it was decided to resume the discussion on the morning of Feb. 8, at 10:30 o'clock.

Feverish haste is marking the proceedings of the peace delegates in the few days remaining before the return of President Wilson to the United States. The most difficult problems relate to the new boundaries which are to be created and which have aroused the aspirations of many nations, especially the little ones, for the territory of their neighbors.

The President was forced to postpone his trip to Belgium, although the Belgians greatly desired that he personally inspect their ruined country and industries and be convinced of the justice of their claim for reparation. The French also would have been glad if the President could have continued his visits to devastated France. French feeling in this matter has been voiced by Captain André Tardieu in his declaration that the German blockade should be continued indefinitely.

More important demands, however, have required the President's continued presence in Paris. It is regarded as necessary that the Associated Powers shall present a solid front when the delegates of the Central Powers are admitted into the conference. If they do not present a solid front, it is felt in some quarters, the enemy, defeated on the field, might succeed by cunning and intrigue in causing dissension among the Associated Powers and getting better terms for themselves by offering tempting alliances. The main efforts of the conference leaders, therefore, are being directed toward the consolidation of their own forces and gaining adhesion to the fundamental principles which are to govern the future relations of States.

A great deal has been done to settle the various territorial disputes by mediation and in endeavoring to have such disputes submitted to the Society of Nations when it is organized. A notable success in this direction has been in the conflict between Italy and Jugoslavia over territory in the Eastern Adriatic.

TO INCREASE FLEET TILL LEAGUE ACTS

America's Policy Will Be Not to Take Reduction of Armaments for Granted.

By RICHARD V. OULAHAN.

By Wireless and Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Feb. 7.—Great progress has been made by the committee which is drafting the Constitution of the League of Nations under President Wilson's Chairmanship. Twelve of the twenty-two articles have been approved, and it is now expected that the commission will finish its work, with all differences harmonized, on Saturday evening.

A compromise has been effected on the two most important articles. These relate to the abolition of conscription and the reduction of armaments. Under the provisions as agreed upon, both subjects will be covered by regulations made by the League of Nations. As embodied in the Constitution, the principle of a reduction of armaments and the abolition of conscription will be approved by a league empowered to study the questions with a view to solving the problem raised by the French and Italian objection that it is impossible to them.

I learn tonight that the United States takes the position that it must adhere to a big navy program until it is determined whether the nations of the world will reduce armaments and abolish conscription. If the Dominions and all nations comply the United States will also conform. If the League fails to do these things or some nations decline to reduce armaments and abolish conscription, the United States will have a large naval force capable of carrying out the purposes of the League.

From the same authoritative source I learn that the United States intends to take nothing for granted, and will wait for the League to make regulations for armaments and conscription, and all nations to comply with them, before modifying its naval policy. This is intended to serve notice that the United States will play the game of peace or war as circumstances dictate.

Still Urging Us to Take a Mandate.

In the realization that President Wilson has definitely fixed the time of his departure for America, the plenipotentiaries of the other Governments are bringing forward in a more definite way their suggestions that the United States assume a share of direct responsibility in connection with Governmental supervision over the enemy territory which will be placed within the jurisdiction of the League of Nations. American officials here give the impression that nothing formal along this line has been suggested to them, but nevertheless it is known that the matter has become somewhat of a vital issue.

The British are particularly anxious to have the United States Government become the mandatory of the League for Constantinople, Syria, and Armenia. This responsibility, so far as Constantinople is concerned, will embrace the administration of the Dardanelles and the Bosporus. President Wilson is credited with willingness to accept the League's mandate for his Government if this course meets with the approval of the American Congress and people.

So far as Paris knows, nothing has yet developed in the United States to show the popular attitude toward the subject of accepting such a mandate, except that there are some indications of hostility to the Government embarking on a venture that may involve it in the politics of Europe and Asia. Whether it be true or not that if Congress and the people do not disapprove the President will not seek to escape the new and important duties urged upon the United States, there is no doubt that generally those connected with the American Peace Mission share the supposed sentiment of opposition. On the whole, it may be said, there is a very distinct and emphatic feeling among the American representatives that the American Government should remain aloof from active participation in the political affairs of this part of the world.

Mandatory for This Hemisphere?

Out of the informal discussion of American responsibility for the government of enemy territory has grown a suggestion, too vague to give ground for any statement that it will or will not have tangible results. This is that the United States be relieved of serving as a mandatory of the League of Nations over former enemy territory in Europe, Asia, Africa, and the South Seas, but be regarded as permanent and sole mandatory for the Western Hemisphere should a contingency arise in which the League of Nations regarded it as necessary to have its authority exercised over any Government or territorial area in North, Central, or South America.

The suggestion seems to appeal to Americans here. To carry it out would be a recognition—perhaps indirect—of the Monroe Doctrine, which would be extremely pleasing to the Washington Government, for there has always been an indisposition on the part of foreign powers to acknowledge this fundamental principle of American policy as a definite, fixed thing.

Some decision as to the share of American responsibility under the mandatory principle adopted by the Peace Conference may have to be reached before the President's departure for America. For this reason the situation is extremely interesting, and has been made particularly so by a renewal of pressure on the President and other members of the American delegation to accept the proposal that the United States become the mandatory for Constantinople, if not for the other Turkish territories.

British Pressure on Wilson.

The London Times, whose owner, Lord Northcliffe, is anxious to bring about the closest relations between Great Britain and the United States, reflects the British official attitude in pointing out that President Wilson, as the foremost advocate of the League of Nations, should permit his country to assume its full share of responsibility in the new order of world affairs which the Peace Conference will bring about. It is very largely this desire for closer association with the United States that lies at the bottom of the British attitude. Since the Peace Conference was begun the cordial relationship between Great Britain and America created by our entrance into the war has been increased to a marked degree, and it is obvious that the representatives of Great Britain here would be more than gratified if the United States assumed a direct share in handling the new problems which have come to Europe through the defeat of the Central Powers and the breakup of Russia.

The growth of cordial relationship between Great Britain and America since the President came here is one of the outstanding features of the Peace Conference. It has been in no way disturbed by such incidents as the lively oratorical contests between President Wilson and Premier Hughes of Australia over the President's objections to the division of the German South Sea colonies between Australia and Japan. Nor has anything occurred to indicate that the British are taking otherwise than philosophically the knowledge that the American representatives will insist that the provision for the reduction of naval armaments shall not prevent the United States from building a fleet as large as any other nation.

Interested in Our Naval Program.

Summaries of the Paris dispatch in THE NEW YORK TIMES last Sunday giving the American formula explanatory of the term "freedom of the seas" have been cabled back and published in London and Paris newspapers and have caused much comment, particularly in British circles. All those interested, according to what is being said, have now a clearer idea of what America desires to accomplish if the proposed codification of international law relating to the seas comes out of the Peace Conference.

Interest in the publication in THE TIMES runs apace with interest in the statements from Washington that Secretary Daniels's naval building program was approved by the House Naval Committee after Chairman Padgett had received a cable message from President Wilson stating that the approval was necessary to the success of the American peace program at Paris. Efforts to obtain the text, or even a synopsis, of the President's message here have been unavailing. In fact, men close to the President, while admitting that they have "heard something about it," assert that they have no positive knowledge that such a message was sent. And not a word on the subject has come from the Murat mansion, where the President resides.

PARIS COMMISSION LAYING LABOR BASIS

Details of International Regulation Wait on Signing of Peace Treaty.

PLANS A LABOR PARLIAMENT

All Member Nations Must First Join the League—Women Eligible for Admission.

By WALTER DURANTY.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Feb. 8.—There seems to be some misconception as to the work of the Labor Commission of the Peace Conference. It is the general opinion that it is disscussing the main subjects of labor interest, such as the prohibition of child labor, the institution of the eight-hour day, insurance in all its branches, and so on, with a view to establishing some sort of international unity of labor legislation.

This is not the case. For many reasons it will be impossible for the commission or the conference to investigate labor problems so deeply. Its function, more limited, but no less important, is to lay down and modify the rules by which future international labor organization shall be governed. In other words, the commission is engaged in the formation of a labor section of the League of Nations—a body which shall be a Parliament of Labor, just as the League itself shall be the Parliament of the world.

It cannot be too strongly emphasized—to avoid later deception and disappointment—that the function of the Peace Conference, both as regards the League of Nations and the Labor Parliament, is almost wholly preparatory. The commissions are not trying to settle the various problems, but setting up the machinery by which they may be settled later. In the case of labor, it is obviously impossible to discuss detailed plans affecting the international status of labor at a time when all the workers east of the Rhine are not only unrepresented, but are still regarded as enemies.

The Labor Commission has decided to follow the lead of the League of Nations Commission in taking the project of one delegation as the basis for its discussion rather than to weigh project against project, which would inevitably lead to confusion. It is easier to deal with a homogeneous project point by point, revising and amending it. It was unanimously agreed at the outset that the British plan, which seemed the most studied and developed and had received the approval of the British Government, should serve as the basis for the work.

To date two points have been ratified by the commission. The first and most important is that nations adhering to the Labor Parliament must be members of the League of Nations, and vice versa. The second point settled yesterday—that women be admitted to the future Parliament—illustrates the way in which the commission works, for it was not included in the British proposal; it was advanced by the Japanese on the ground that women in Japan formed a greater part of the industrial population—nearly 50 per cent.—than in any other country. It was passed unanimously after very brief discussion.

Some notion of what the practical results of the commission's work will be may be gathered from a proposal contained in the French project which was approved by the Labor Commission of the Chamber of Deputies last November. The French have to a great extent taken the initiative in favor of an international labor parliament and during recent years have achieved the inclusion of this point in resolutions voted by different labor conferences, so that it is probable that something on lines they suggest will be adopted.

The project provides that the Labor Parliament shall be a permanent body, whose Constitution is laid down by the peace treaty, holding sessions, of which the first is to be held six months after peace is signed. Then, and not till then, will be undertaken by this Parliament the discussion of labor problems in detail.

DAVIS TO MAKE INQUIRY ON BRITISH EMBARGO

Asked to Find Out if There Is Discrimination Against American Products.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—Acting Secretary of State Polk has sent instructions to John W. Davis, the American Ambassador at London, to make inquiries of the British Government relative to the details of the embargo ordered against the importation of certain products into Great Britain.

The object of the communication is to ascertain whether the embargo will be enforced so as to involve any discrimination against American products. It is not the understanding here that there is any discrimination against American products, but that the embargo applies to products from whatever part of the world they come, even when shipped from British colonies, and that any American goods affected would not be treated on any different basis than like products from British colonies or elsewhere.

The State Department has received from certain American exporters protests against the British embargo plan, but these are few in number. The communication to Ambassador Davis was not in the form of a protest and thus was carefully explained by Government officials. The messages merely seek information as to the facts. The Senate Foreign Relations Committee has been taken into the confidence of the State Department as to the steps it has taken.

DECLARES JAPAN TRIES TO GAG THE CHINESE

Shanghai Paper Asserts Demand Made in Peking Has Vitalized the Eastern Issue.

SHANGHAI, Feb. 8, (Associated Press.)—The China Press today prints an editorial attacking the policy of Japan toward China's delegation at the Peace Conference, as revealed by demands made by Yukichi Obata, Japanese Minister at Peking.

"Minister Obata's startling demand that China gag its delegates at the Peace Conference has done great service," the newspaper says. "It has posed effectively and opportunely to the whole world the issue of the Far East. The issue is whether or not this hemisphere is Japan's domain or if China is still an independent nation.

"Since August, 1914 the issue has been gathering. From Japan's ultimatum to Germany to what Minister Obata calls his friendly visit to the Wai Chiae Pu, (Chinese Foreign Office,) its development has been thoroughly and ruthlessly the logical sequence of events—the taking of Tsingtao, the widening of that wedge until it included a large part of Shantung, the sinister twenty-one demands, the Japanese contribution to the undoing of Yuan Shi-kai, the steady encroachments in Manchuria, the secret Russo-Japanese treaty, the blocking of China's entry into the war except under Tokio's aegis, the underwriting of the corrupt Northern militaristic party, the series of nefarious loans that turned over the resources of an Eldorado for a song, the setting up of a civil administration in Shantung, the arms alliance of 1918, all the other secret agreements, the Lansing-Ishii 'paramount interest' agreement, until now we have the naked question, Is China a Japanese colony?

"Can there be any other meaning of Minister Obata's demand? If China is denied the right to present its case before the Peace Conference, if its delegates can speak only by and with the consent of Japan's delegates, then it has no identity as a nation. Then it is a Japanese dependency.

"It is for the Allies to answer, and the answer will be implicit in the spirit that shall dominate the Peace Conference and in the form of the peace treaty. If President Wilson's ideals are really to prevail, if old-world politics are to go, if the league be a vital force, then now, once and for all, we must set our face against this sort of imperialist Far East.

"It is for the Allies to accept Japan's challenge. The whole noisome Chino-Japanese relations of the last four years must be aired. The Chinese delegates must be fully heard. The twenty-one demands must be re-examined, the secret treaties scrutinized, the illegitimate ones canceled. That to which Japan is justified by the test of the new international ethics, for which millions of us died, let it have—nothing more.

"China's interest is not the primary concern. It is the future peace of the world. Balking Pan Germany will avail us nothing if Pan Japan raises its head in Asia. Japanese dominance of China would create a new Balkans, a Balkans in which half a continent would be the theatre of intrigue, diplomatic jugglery and commercial rivalries. The key to the world peace is the integrity of China, its complete independence of Japan as of every other power.

"Such an independence is impossible unless the powers assembled at Paris freely examine every question affecting China. Such an examination is impossible unless Minister Obata's demand receives a flat and unqualified negative, not from China but from the world."

SEEK NO CHINESE TERRITORY.

Japanese Delegate Vows His Country Asks Only Fair Treatment.

PARIS, Feb. 7, (Associated Press.)—Baron Makino, senior Japanese delegate to the Peace Conference, made public today his promised statement as to Japan's position at the conference. After outlining the main facts in the history of the twenty years since the Chino-Japanese war, describing Germany's efforts to establish herself in the Far East, and giving in some detail the claims of Japan to Pacific island groups located north of the equator, the statement says:

"Germany sought to stir up ill-will in the Far East after the penetration of Manchuria by the Japanese railway under the right granted by the Portsmouth treaty. She also made most of the more or less serious mistakes made by both Japan and China in the course of their diplomatic and commercial relations."

After outlining the successive surrenders by Japan in the interests of peace after the Chinese war, and the waiving of all money indemnity following the war with Russia, the statement comes to the taking of Tsing-tao from Germany after Germany had refused to accept the ultimatum of August, 1914, under which Japan demanded that Germany vacate Tsing-tao.

"Japan is now pledged to return to China this harbor and port built with German money, together with the territory of Kiao-Chau, which China will receive eighty years sooner than she could posssibly have secured it," the statement continues. "Otherwise the treaty of 1915, under which this restoration is to be made, contains no secret clauses, and an agreement entered into in September, 1918, regarding future Chino-Japanese co-operation in Shantung contains no stipulation which is more or less than a just and mutually helpful settlement of outstanding questions.

"These documents, with all their clauses, have been laid before the powers, including America. Japan does not seek more than a fair division in this work of development. We realize that a great change has taken place in the dealings between the nations to be represented in the League of Nations. If that lague is to be of any value, its rules must prohibit selfish aggression, exploitation and discrimination. We seek no territory in China and ask only for friendly co-operation and the maintenance of peaceful relations."

BAN ON ALL SUBMARINES.

British Admiralty Said to Favor That Policy Strongly.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 8.—With reference to the question of scrapping submarines, which has been before the Paris Conference, The Chronicle learns on high authority that the British Admiralty is strongly in favor of the total prohibition of submarine building and of the use of submarines in warfare.

This naturally would be subject to a general international agreement and to the right guarantees and safeguards. The attitude of the British Navy has all the more point, says The Chronicle, in view of the fact that this country is far ahead of all other nations in regard to the actual possession of submarines and of their potential production.

OPPOSES MANDATORY OVER PACIFIC ISLES

Premier Hughes Declares Indirect Rule Offers No Inducement for Development.

POINTS OUT DEFECTS

Declares Government, Like Business, Is Best Managed Under Absolute Control.

Vestment in any nation of mandatory control of the Pacific Islands by the League of Nations would offer that nation no inducement to spend money for the development of the possessions, and would thus defeat the entire purpose of the mandatory, according to the opinion expressed by Premier Hughes of Australia in a cable message received in this city yesterday by Commissioner Henry Y. Braddon. Commissioner Braddon, who represents the Commonwealth of Australia in America, read the message before a meeting of the League of Free Peoples which he addressed yesterday on Australia's relations to the former German colonies.

"Control of the islands—absolute control—is necessary," says the message, "because mandatory control would not induce the expenditure of money on uncertain possession.

"International control is and must be indirect, and has all the defects of indirect control. Government is like all other forms of carrying on human affairs. It is a business, and the same principles apply to it as to other kinds of businesses. That business is best managed where control is in the hands of a competent man on the spot, and who knows intimately all the circumstances, and has a personal interest in its development and progress.

"Government, like that of business, rests on finance, and must fall if insufficient funds are at its disposal or if the money is spent unwisely. Who will spend money on any estate or business which he has not in actual possession, or where the tenure is uncertain, or where it is subject to interference from men remote from, and entirely ignorant of, local conditions. Mandatory system is control by those who at best do not know. Those who do not know would in all probability control others who might be interested in thwarting or ousting mandatory in order to serve their own interests."

Mr. Hughes then reiterates the prime argument in Australia's case for absolute possession of the German islands:

"The proximity of New Guinea and the Bismarck Archipelago makes complete control of immigration and trade necessary by Australia. All that is necessary for the protection of the natives can be effected by guarantees, which Australia is prepared to give.

"The form and powers of the League of Nations are still quite uncertain, and no details of the mandatory system have yet been worked out.

"There is nothing in the Fourteen Points which presents absolute ownership of the islands.

"The mandatory is at best an expedient, applied only to cases where the interests of the inhabitants are menaced by direct control. The Australian control of New Guinea during the war, after it was wrested from Germany, has been beneficent and mild.

"The interests of Australia are also to be safeguarded, as well as those of the natives of the islands. The mandatory system would not safeguard Australia's interests unless the mandate merely gives us formally the same power over the islands as we now have over our own affairs in Australia."

CALLS US INCONSISTENT IN MANDATE POLICY

Why Not a Monroe Doctrine for Australia as Well as for America, Asks London Spectator.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 8.—The Spectator, discussing in this week's issue the provisional decision of the Peace Conference about the former German colonies, says that it is almost impossible logically to reconcile the mandatory system with the continuance of the Monroe Doctrine, and it asks:

"What about the position of the United States in, say Hayti, and San Domingo? The United States at last stepped in, very much to the advantage of the natives. But the United States was self-appointed. Under the Monroe Doctrine, she says to the old world 'hands off; no interference here.'

"We indicate this illogicality in no carping spirit, in our opinion the intervention of the United States came not a moment too soon. It was both disinterested and humane, but is the United States going to ask retrospectively for a mandate to be in San Domingo and Hayti! If she does not, she may aid the suspicion that there is to be one law for herself and another for the rest of the world.

"Of course it may be said that there must be a dividing line as regards time somewhere, that the line is most naturally drawn at the war and that prewar arrangements must be allowed to stand without being affected by the new order. It may even be argued that if such a line were not drawn the league would have to take ultimate authority over any countries, such as India, which for many generations have been satisfactorily settled.

"When all this has been said, however, there does seem to be a certain discrepancy between Mr. Wilson's present proposals and the quite recent actions of the United States. The United States assumed a protectorate over Hayti by treaty in 1915. She landed troops and appointed a Governor in Santo Domingo in 1916.

"For our part we can say without hesitating that the last thing we want to see is any weakening of the Monroe Doctrine. It is a principle of enormous importance and great convenience. It rules a whole hemisphere out of the possibility of serious imbroglios and it is to the interest of all civilized nations to support it.

"One of the principal virtues of the Monroe Doctrine is that it allows the United States to exercise her rule, supervision, or patronage, as the case may be, in the western world without disturbance.

"It is very difficult not to sympathize with the Australian desire for a similar atmosphere of tranquility. If a Monroe Doctrine for America, why not a Monroe Doctrine for Australia and New Zealand? We can imagine an Australian asking the question, which is certainly a poser.

"Australia wants freedom from what she thinks would be tiresome and distracting intervention in her management of New Guinea, just as Japan may be supposed to want the same thing in the Marshall and Caroline Islands.

"The spectacle of New Zealand administering one of the Islands of Samoa under a mandate, while the United States (on the assumption that the present arrangement will continue) administers two of the Samoan Islands without any mandate, will be a particularly curious paradox."

NEAR DALMATIA SETTLEMENT.

Italian-Slav Snarl Is Being Unraveled.

LONDON, Feb. 8.—Progress toward a world settlement has been greatly accelerated in the last ten days, according to the Paris correspondent of the Morning Post. He says that the relations between Italy and Greece are now much more cordial as the result of diplomatic intervention. The conciliatory attitude of Premier Venizelos is said to have exerted influence far beyond the relations between Italy and Greece.

"The latest indication of this movement toward a mutual understanding," the correspondent adds, "is that the very vexed question of the Dalmatian coast which has caused acute feeling between the Jugoslavs and the Italians is approaching settlement. I feel justified in saying that the Dalmatian question can no longer be regarded as likely to give rise to any differences of opinion."

Emphasis Laid on Rights of Labor and Small Nations—Vindictive Reprisals Banned.

PARIS, Feb. 8.—The American delegates on the Commission on International Labor Legislation of the Peace Conference have submitted the following to the commission:

"We declare that the following fundamental principles should underlie and be incorporated in the peace treaty:

"A league of the free peoples of the world in a common covenant for genuine and practical co-operation to secure justice, and therefore peace, in the relations between nations.

"The entrance of any free nation into the league of free peoples of the world shall be inherent.

"No reprisals based upon purely vindictive purposes, or deliberate desire to injure, but to right manifest wrong.

"Recognition of the rights of small nations and of the principle, 'No people must be forced under a sovereignty under which it does not wish to live.'

"No territorial changes or adjustments of power except in the furtherance of the welfare of the peoples affected and in the furtherance of world peace.

"That in law and in practice the principle shall be recognised that the labor of a human being is not a commodity or an article of commerce.

"Involuntary servitude shall not exist except in punishment for crime of which the party shall have been duly convicted.

"Trial by jury should be established.

"The right of free association, free assemblage, free speech and the press shall not be denied or abridged.

"That the seamen of the merchant marine shall be guaranteed the right of leaving their vessels when the same are in a safe harbor.

"No article or commodity shall be shipped or delivered in international commerce in the production of which children under the age of sixteen years have been employed or permitted to work.

"No article or commodity shall be shipped or delivered in international commerce in the production of which convict labor has been employed or permitted.

"It shall be declared that the work day in industry and commerce shall not exceed eight hours per day, except in case of extraordinary emergency, such as danger to life or property.

"The sale or use for commercial purposes of articles made or manufactured in private homes shall be prohibited.

"It shall be declared that an adequate wage shall be paid for labor performed—a wage based upon and commensurate with the standards of pay conforming to the civilization of the time.

"That equal wages shall be paid to women as is paid to men for equal work performed.

day many subjects were demanding attention.

Reports were made by the military high commands on the subjects of demobilization and the relative forces of the powers to be maintained in the occupied regions. The Versailles Military Council also submitted a report as to the military forces available for the disturbed regions of Turkey.

The naval branch of the council presented recommendations formulated as the result of consultations among the British, French, Italian, and American naval commanders, bearing mainly on the turning over of the German submarines, blockade restrictions, and the surrender of the German commercial fleet. This fleet, it is stated, is ready to be turned over, but the Allies have thus far not agreed upon the allotment of the steamers among the various allied nations nor upon the compensation for the use of the vessels.

When an agreement is reached and the United States receives its share of the ships, they will be manned by the American Navy and fly the Stars and Stripes, the initials of the Relief Council being added to the flag.

The Commission on Blockade also presented a report favoring the lightening of the blockade restrictions in the Mediterranean and the Adriatic.

A tendency was manifested in some military quarters to impose further drastic terms upon Germany when the armistice was extended, but no decision was reached. It was determined to meet again today, when decision would be made without the presence of the military representatives.

After the session this statement on the proceedings was issued:

The President of the United States of America, the Prime Minister and Foreign Minister of the Allied and associated powers, the Japanese representatives and the military representatives of the Supreme War Council, assisted by naval authorities and technical advisers, met at the Quai d'Orsay between 2:30 and 5:30 P. M. They discussed the terms of the extension of the armistice with Germany.

The President of the United States of America and the representatives of the Allied and associated powers will meet tomorrow at 3 P. M. to continue this discussion.

British Would Modify Blockade.

PARIS, Feb. 7.—Full agreement has been reached between the United States and Great Britain over the question of modifying the blockade so as to permit goods to be imported into Holland to be sent into Germany. The restrictions will be modified so that Holland may import what she likes and send it into Germany if the American and British proposal is adopted.

The French are still opposed to this, in fear that Germany may get copper and other war material by this means, and the Interallied Blockade Commission, of which Vance McCormick is Chairman, will take the matter before the Supreme Council of the Peace Conference.

LONDON STRIKERS FAIL TO RETURN

Announcement of "Tube" Settlement Has No Effect on the Big Transit Tieup.

HOPE IN PREMIER'S RETURN

Belief Is Expressed That He Will Appoint a New Minister of Labor.

Lloyd George Back in London on Mission of Conciliation

LONDON, Feb. 8.—Premier Lloyd George reached London from Paris tonight. To reporters who asked how matters were going in Paris, the Premier replied tersely, "Well!"

Mr. Lloyd George is now expected to take up his famous rôle as conciliator in dealing with the labor troubles. Several newspapers appeal to him to produce in Parliament a comprehensive scheme for uniform hours of work and a basis of wages in the primary industries, and not undertake piecemeal settlements which might create trouble.

LONDON, Feb. 8.—In spite of the official announcement that the subway strike was settled, no trains ran today. The only explanation vouchsafed to the public, plodding home in bitter Winter weather, is that the motormen think they may as well make a week's holiday of it, but perhaps they will be on the job tomorrow.

It is just another example of the wave of indiscipline now sweeping over the country. No wonder the newspapers are welcoming Lloyd George's return as likely to mean the adoption of some definite policy toward all this unrest. He is expected to speak in the House of Commons Tuesday afternoon, and it is believed that he will deal mainly with the industrial situation.

The usually well-informed political correspondent of The Sunday Times suggests that he will make a change in the Ministry of Labor. Sir Robert Horne having shown that as a lawyer he is not the man to deal with the complicated problems before him. It is also likely, according to the same authority, that the Government will set up a system of local industrial councils, composed of representatives of both employers and workmen, to handle all disputes that may arise. Some such plan was proposed a few weeks ago by J. R. Clynes, ex-Food Controller, who went so far as to suggest an "industrial Parliament."

The idea has received a great deal of support, for realization is growing that the present troubles are small compared with those likely to loom up soon. Miners and railroad men throughout the kingdom are putting forward for immediate action programs that will go to the very root of their industries, and there is no means of postponing their discussion.

In fact, as The London Times points out this morning, the belief is gaining ground that England is already passing through a series of revolutions. This has been almost accepted in theory, but it has now to be put in practice. It means a tremendous clash of interest, and the change can be accomplished safely only with clear vision and calm thinking.

LONDON, Feb. 8.—Scenes similar to those of the past few days were witnessed in London and the suburbs today, although hundreds of motor trucks hired by the War Department greatly relieved the situation. The trucks came into the heart of the city jamed with passengers. The weather was so much improved that many walked in preference to riding in the crowded trucks. In many cases the usual Saturday half-holiday was converted into a full day of rest from business.

The striking workmen of Glasgow, Govan, and Clydebank at a meeting Friday resolved to continue the struggle for a forty-hour week and called on the Executive Councils of the unions to cooperate with the strikers or resign. The Govan workers favored the immediate payment of strike money.

The strikers' joint committee has issued a statement saying that only a few "fainthearts" have returned to work and asserting that the committee is more confident than ever of victory. The statement asserts that the carpenters of Glasgow have decided to strike.

The Government is quietly arresting and deporting "undesirable" aliens who are believed to be Bolshevist propagandists in Great Britain, according to The Daily Sketch, which says that several have recently been sent out of the country, including M. Soermus, a Russian violinist, who has been touring South Wales and who is alleged to have been interspersing his recitals with Bolshevist propaganda work. M. Soermus is a son of a wealthy Russian landowner, was educated at the University of Petrograd, and participated in the Russian revolution.

BELFAST, Feb. 8.—It is unofficially stated that employers of union labor have asked striking workmen to resume work on a basis of forty-seven hours per week, with a promise of a forty-four-hour week when the treaty of peace is signed. Police authorities deny that warrants have been issued for the leaders in the strike movement here on charges of conspiracy to prejudice and injure public safety.

SOLDIERS CREATE DISORDER IN LONDON

Nine Leaders in Demonstration Arrested and About 250 Sent to France.

LONDON, Feb. 8.—A War Office statement explaining the recent disorders among soldiers says:

"There was an accumulation of 11,000 men in London owing to a one-day delay in the Channel crossing through bad weather. Nine thousand men were dispatched early today. Of these about 250 made a demonstration, and nine of the ringleaders were arrested for insubordination, while the others were sent to France.

"General Sir William R. Robertson (commander of the forces in Great Britain) has been instructed to arrange so that all men detained through weather or strikes hereafter shall be provided with food and quarters and furnished with 5 shillings a day additional compensation."

The statement calls attention to the rule providing that men guilty of disorders through impatience shall be placed at the bottom of the lists for demobilization.

TEXTILE STRIKE NEAR END.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—John Golden, President of the United Textile Workers, notified the Department of Labor today that the strike of textile workers in Lawrence, Mass., was adjusted and that a full agreement was expected to be reached by Monday. Three Commissioners of the department have been in conference with both sides in Lawrence for several days.

Rapid clearing of the textile situation throughout New England is expected by the department. Commissioners Skeffington, Sullivan, and Williams at Lawrence have been optimistic in their reports to Hugh L. Kerwin, chief of the department's Division of Conciliation. Mr. Skeffington and Mr. Williams will go to Maine Monday to adjust controversies at Biddeford, Saco, and Brunswick.

LAWRENCE, Mass., Feb. 8.—An offer of 51 hours' pay for 48 hours' work was made to the Strike Committee of textile workers at a meeting tonight by Charles G. Wood of the State Board of Conciliation and Arbitration following a day of conference. The offer was unofficially understood to come from the manufacturers as a compromise to the workers' demands for 54 hours' pay. Action was deferred until Monday because of the small attendance of delegates, many of whom were in adjoining cities and town protesting against the sending of police supports to this city.

SEATTLE CALMED BY QUICK ACTION

tion. For example, the strikers' kitchens, where stew is served to the lines of hungry unionists and to transient workingmen, are the subjects of many a jest.

"Those kitchens are model pacifiers," say citizens. "When the hungry striker goes up against their slumgullion a few times he will begin to think of the thick steaks of prewar days. Keep 'em up by all means."

Taxicabs bearing union pennants were allowed to follow hearses in funeral processions, and city garbage wagons also bore union exemption signs the first two days of the strike, but all such signs were ordered removed by Mayor Hanson today.

Police and Fire Department men drove an oil company's gasoline truck to supply fire and police stations with gasoline.

Bolshevist Leader Missing.

Various unions, including that of the street-car men, were in session this afternoon to take individual action with reference to ending their participation in the strike. Many of the men threatened to have done with unionism if exponents of the I. W. W. and Bolshevism were to hold control.

Leon Rikowsky, alias Leon Green, extremist leader of the Electricians' Union, and a fomenter of the strike, is said to have disappeared from the city. There is a rumor that he has been placed under arrest by the military authorities and is now held at Camp Lewis. Federal authorities are convinced that this Russian immigrant is a visiting propagandist. Time and again he has skirted close to violation of the Espionage act. He has harangued and incited, and his voice was one of the first lifted for the general strike. He has been in America only nine months, and recently was refused a passport when he sought permission to return to Russia. It is said that other extremists and agitators have fled the city.

Rikowsky's comrade and lieutenant in the radical control of the Electricians' Union was Hulet M. Wells, now under Federal sentence of two and one-half years and at liberty pending his appeal. Wells was convicted last Spring in the Federal Court of conspiring to obstruct the laws of the United States.

On Mayor Hanson's desk at the City Hall stand great bouquets of flowers, gifts of Seattle citizens who are courageously behind his brand of Americanism. On his blotter sprawl hundreds of letters and telegrams, not alone from the Pacific Northwest, but from New York and other Eastern cities. They are of one tenor. All declare that they rejoice in the fact that an American Mayor had met a formidable issue squarely and "punched it in the jaw."

"Every real American is proud of you for your courageous stand in the face of Bolshevism," telegraphed Frank S. Waterman of New York. "You have become a national figure overnight and the metropolitan press is carrying laudatory comment on the fighting Mayor of Seattle. You will be doing the nation an invaluable service if you stamp out vigorously this first big attempt to force anarchy upon us."

Three figures have loomed throughout the strike. Toward two of them the people of Seattle turn for deliverance. They are Mayor Hanson and Chief of Police Joel Warren. The other is Rikowsky, the Russian agitator.

The master barbers quit the strike today. Their association met and adopted a resolution declaring that the barbers' union must apologize for joining the walkout. They announced that they would resume business Monday on the open shop plan. The association voted that the barbers' union must withdraw from the Central Labor Council and expel radical members from its own organization.

OLE HANSON, FIGHTER; HIS RECORD PROVES IT

Seattle's Mayor a Champion of Order and Always Willing to Battle for It.

Special to The New York Times.

SEATTLE, Wash., Feb. 8.—Not the least interesting feature of the strike in Seattle is the leadership of Mayor Ole Hanson and his espousal of the constitutional doctrine that every citizen has the right to run his lawful business. His resourcefulness and his firmness were just as surprising to the business interests as they were to the promoters of the sympathetic strike. Neither side could foretell with precision what he would do, but those who knew him best were certain that whatever course he had determined upon he would pursue it until he had attained his object.

Now, with a police force that has been quadrupled, and with a battalion of soldiers from Camp Lewis to assist in the work, he is devoting his energies to reestablishing normal business conditions.

The key to Ole Hanson's character is that he does one thing at a time. Naturally impulsive and possessing an abundance of energy, he is a hard man to beat, as his political opponents have learned from time to time. Started upon a course of action, he neither thinks nor talks of anything else until he has attained his end, and it is well known here, particularly to his opponents, that he can think of more things to do in a short time than a corps of strategists. His ability to guess what the other fellow is going to do amounts to genius, and methods do not disturb him greatly. His rule of fighting is to hit his opponent with everything except perhaps the water bucket.

The thing that disturbed the business men and the citizens who regarded themselves as onlookers in the struggle between the unions and the employers was Ole Hanson's espousal long ago of so-called progressive measures. He had been an earnest advocate of the minimum wage law for women and the eight-hour workday for both sexes. He has espoused the Industrial Insurance act, and about every modern improvement in legislation which the State of Washington has on its statute books. It was not unnatural to expect that with this record of achievement and of missionary work he would be found on the side of the labor unions.

Had the question been the attainment of a fair wage for shipyard workers or for anybody else it is reasonably certain that he would have been fighting for it, but when a sympathetic strike was called and radical leaders informed him that the city could not operate its lighting system or its street cars, and that all industry in Seattle must cease, he defied them.

There has been no interruption of the city's lighting system, and the municipal street car line has run on a reduced schedule.

Sixteen years ago Ole Hanson drove a covered wagon across the country and landed in Seattle. On his way here he stopped for a week in Butte to take a hand in the fight then in progress between Augustus Heinze and the Amalgamated Copper Company. It appeared to him as a free-for-all fight, so he dipped into it from sheer love of excitement. Then he opened a real estate office, and, possessing unusual qualities of salesmanship, he was successful.

He became indignant at the crooked crowd in the betting ring at the Seattle race track, known as The Meadows, and in 1909 got himself elected to the Legislature so that he could pass an anti-race track law. That task over, he stepped back into the real estate business and made some money.

In the year of the split in the Republican Party Ole Hanson was with the Roosevelt faction. In 1914 he was the Progressive candidate for United States Senator, and came near being elected. Without any party organizations he conducted an amazing campaign, speaking from automobiles in every town in Washington.

In 1916 he toured the county for Woodrow Wilson, and incidentally won the friendship of the President.

When he announced his purpose of becoming Mayor of Seattle the Republicans declared they would not "stand for it." However, Ole Hanson worked so fast and outguessed his rivals so often that the final lineup came between him and a man so radical that the conservative vote went to Hanson.

Last Summer Ole Hanson said that the city should develop a new electric power project on the Skagit River to keep pace with the needs of the rapidly growing community.

The project ultimately will necessitate an expenditure of $30,000,000, and it was necessary to sell immediately $1,000,000 in bonds.

A snag was struck in the Capital Issues Committee, which decided against Mayor Hanson. Then he went down to Washington to explain matters to President Wilson.

It was a cold day and in the heat of his argument with the President he took off his coat.

"You don't mind if I take off my coat and vest, do you, Wilson?" was the way he put the question. The President laughed and seemed to enjoy the situation.

Mr. Hanson is about 48 years old, but his prematurely gray hair gives him the appearance of greater age. He is little above medium height, but thin and restless. He has an engaging smile and unusual ability as a public speaker. He was born in the United States, but his parents came from Norway.

Nobody ever doubted Hanson's courage and he is not at all averse to a little rough and tumble fighting or any other kind, for that matter.

CONGRATULATES HANSON.

Defense Society Thanks Him for His Stand in Strike.

The American Defense Society yesterday gave out the following telegram which it had sent to Mayor Ole Hanson of Seattle:

"We have read with interest and complete approval your message on behalf of the law and order party of the United States of America to the party of disorder, whose activities have been so deplorably aided during the last few years in higher quarters, and we have read with equal satisfaction your message to the law-abiding citizens of Seattle. We note that the party of disorder announces its action as the beginning of the social revolution in this country. We are glad that the issue is definitely raised. We have awaited it impatiently.

"Until the party of disorder is overwhelmingly driven from every post of vantage it will mistakenly believe that it represents something more than a most inconsiderable element in this free country.

BAKER OFFERS ALL HELP.

War Secretary Reassures Governor of Washington.

OLYMPIA, Wash., Feb. 8.—Governor Ernest Lister has the promise of the Secretary of War that all necessary cooperation will be given to him "in coping with possible strike troubles at Seattle and Tacoma, and the situation is unchanged in that regard," a statement issued from the Governor's office today said.

DENOUNCES SEATTLE STRIKE.

Head of Electrical Union Orders Men Back to Work.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Feb. 8.—J. P. Noonan, acting President of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, with offices in this city, in a telegram today directed all electrical workers of his organization on sympathetic strike at Seattle, Wash., to return to work. The telegram said:

"The responsibility of the electrical workers is too great to permit darkness in Seattle which enhances the possibility of lawlessness. All members should go back to their jobs."

THOUSANDS RETURN TO WORK.

Shipping Board's Agent Takes a Hand at San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 8.—The United States Shipping Board announced here today that L. C. Marshall, a member of the Federal Shipbuilding Labor Adjustment Board, was in the city to review the strike situation in the San Francisco Bay District.

Four thousand of the 7,500 striking mechanics in the shipyards and contract shops here returned to work today after their demands had been granted.

Journeymen boilermakers in Oakland failed to vote in favor of a strike for a wage of $1 an hour, union officials said. The boilermakers yesterday took a holiday to ballot, but the vote lacked the necessary two-thirds majority specified by the rules.

BUTTE MINES CLOSED; SOLDIERS ON GUARD

Finn Women Join with I. W. W. in Disorder in Copper Region —More Troops on Way.

BUTTE, Mon., Feb. 8.—A strike called by the I. W. W. resulted in the closing today of the mines in the Butte field. Pickets, including a few women and several men in soldiers' uniforms, turned back from the mines those who sought to enter. There were several shots fired on Anaconda Hill and several arrests were made. No one was injured.

It was announced that 250 additional United States soldiers would arrive tomorrow to aid ninety men of the 44th Infantry, who began patroling streets after the miners had been turned back from the mines. It was announced by I. W. W. leaders that 6,000 men were idle because of the strike. No effort will be made to work the mines to morrow. They have not been running on Sunday recently.

Among the pickets at the mines before ber of Finn women, one of whom, it was said, was armed.

The order to strike was given by the I. W. W. after a meeting last night which considered the reduction of one dollar a day in the miners' wages.

SPOKANE, Wash., Feb. 8.—Major A. M. Jones, commanding officer at Fort George Wright, near here, announced this afternoon that he had received orders to hold troops in readiness to move to Butte, Mont., to reinforce the detachment of the 44th Infantry now there. He declined to say how many troops were being prepared to move.

GRANT 48-HOUR WEEK.

Blackstone Valley Mills Order New Labor Schedule.

PAWTUCKET, R. I., Feb. 8.—Practically all the textile mills in the Blackstone Valley have now granted the forty-eight-hour week. The latest to make announcement of the change include the Lonsdale Company, Hope Webbing Company, Waypoyset Company, Slater Yarn Company, and the Rhode Island Silk Company. These concerns employ about 4,500 persons.

The Taft-Pierce Manufacturing Company of Woonsocket announced that until further notice the plant would be operated on a forty-five-hour schedule. The step was taken, it was said, to prevent laying off of help because of shortage of work due to cancellation of Government orders.

TROY, N. Y., Feb. 8.—The Knit Goods Manufacturers' Association has presented to Cohoes Textile Council a counter proposal of a forty-eight-hour work week with forty-eight hours' pay, provided the Carders' Union will rescind its recent action in refusing to work the noon hour in the card room.

TO END SILK STRIKE.

Mill Owners and Employes Ask War Board to Fix Hours.

PATERSON, N. J., Feb. 8.—New Jersey silk mill owners and representatives of nearly 30,000 striking employes agreed late tonight to request the National War Labor Board to fix temporary working hours which will be accepted by both sides pending a final decision by the board of the hour question.

It was said that work probably would be resumed Monday.

POLICE DRIVE AGITATORS OUT.

I. W. W. and W. I. I. U. Representatives Not Allowed to Stay in Paterson, N. J.

Special to The New York Times.

PATERSON, N. J., Feb. 8.—When a joint delegation of I. W. W. and Workers' International Industrial Union representatives from New York took the platform at an I. W. W. strike meeting here this afternoon, Chief of Police John Tracy, announced that out of town agitators were not needed here. Several policemen escorted the delegation from the stage and then to the Union Station, where Chief Tracy saw them safely bound for New York.

The I. W. W. assert that they have the sympathy of 6,000 of the striking silk workers, the majority of whom are unorganized. On the other hand, the conservative United Textile Workers Union claims to control the majority, although it is known here that workers are desirous of winning the 44-hour week rather than the 47-hour compromise proposed by the United Textile Workers.

GARMENT WORKERS ARE BACK.

Schlesinger Says 400 Firms Have Settled with the Union.

Benjamin Schlesinger, President of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, in newspaper advertisements yesterday announced that twenty-three members of the Dress and Waist Manufacturers' Association, against which the union is waging a general strike, had resigned from membership in the association. These shops, he said, had signed individual agreements with the union, granting the forty-four-hour week, an increase in wages, and other conditions. In all, said Mr. Schlesinger, more than 400 firms had settled with the union and about 12,000 of the 35,000 garment workers had returned to work.

Harry A. Gordon, counsel for the Dress and Waist Manufacturers' Association, declared last night that the firms mentioned in the union's list of those who settled had been released from the association because they were cloth dress manufacturers, and therefore only nominally members of the association.

"The statement of the union," he said, "is misleading, because since the strike commenced three weeks ago we have received more than twenty new members, former independent manufacturers, and within the next forty-eight hours we expect to be able to announce that many more independent manufacturers have been added to the association roster. The association has not lost one substantial manufacturer, and has nothing to fear from the union's misleading lists."

eyes of millions of people in the world were directed toward it. Germany, he said, could earn the confidence of this world only by rapid creative work, and must understand how to bridge the gulf to co-operative understanding.

His greeting to Alsace-Lorraine and the declaration that Germany would not stop insisting that it have the right of self-determination evoked a great ovation, as did his reference to the Austrians, whom he said he hoped to be able to welcome as colleagues.

The crowds in the Court Theatre were quite as large as yesterday and watched the proceedings eagerly. As familiar names were called, the spectators turned to see such nation-wide figures as Premier Ebert, Mathias Erzberger, Dr. Bernhard Dernburg, Minister Auer of Bavaria, Dr. Richthofen, Herr Hildebrand, Philipp Scheidemann, Herr Legien, and Dr. Spahn. The crowd laughed when it was found that there were three Schulzes in the Assembly. They come, respectively, from East Prussia, West Prussia, and Posen.

A notable figure in the theatre, who draws almost as much attention as those on the stage, is Theodor Wolff, editor of the Berlin Tageblatt, who occupies a place in the first balcony. He is the cynosure of all eyes as he stands with his hands in his vest armholes eagerly watching each development.

There is quite a number of old men with long white beards, and they add a sort of picturesque touch to the sober colors of the whole.

Problem of the Ministry.

The composition of the Cabinet appears to be the principal problem commanding the attention of the new German lawmakers meeting here. The original proposition was to form a Ministry of fifteen members, seven of whom should be Majority Socialists, four Centrists, and four Democrats. The Majority Socialists, however, are now understood to be contending that they should have a majority which the Independent Socialists could not disturb by any political manoeuvre. Participation of the Centrists in the formation of the Cabinet was assured by the action taken at their meeting yesterday in which they decided to work with the new Government.

The Constitution was again discussed at a meeting attended by representatives of the various German States today at which Dr. Ludo Hartmann, Austrian Minister to Germany, took part. The new Ministers probably will bear the title of "Imperial Minister," instead of "State Secretary." Several of them will be without portfolio, even though additional portfolios be created. The Finance Ministry will be divided into two departments, one for special, technical details and to deal with loans, and the other to be the Department of the Imperial Treasury, for the administration of socialized public works. It is possible that a Labor Ministry will be created. A Demobilization Ministry and an Economic Ministry are believed to be certain of formation, in addition to the reformation of the Imperial Treasury Department.

Although the subject of the constitution was on today's program it was believed that it would be impossible to reach it before tomorrow.

The first debate in the Assembly is expected to come Monday, when Philip Scheidemann probably will give an accounting of the stewardship of the present Government. The leaders of the Assembly are said to be unanimous for cutting down as far as possible the length of the debates, so that the Assembly can accomplish the maximum in the minimum time. To this end full sessions will be called only when the committees have completed examination of the bills. The bulk of the work and discussion will be done in committee.

Many delegates are hopeful that the Assembly will adopt a provisional constitution which can serve until a permanent constitution is adopted. This would enable the early election of a President to represent Germany in the name of the Government.

Delegates from Alsace.

Feb. 6.—Twelve former residents of Alsace, including Major Gen. Scheüch, former Prussian War Minister, have arrived in Weimar. They were chosen as delegates to the National Assembly by numerous Alsatian refugees, and they came to offset, as far as possible, the French prohibition against elections in Alsace, having conducted a makeshift election by mail. Whether these delegates shall have a vote in or be received by the National Assembly had not been decided upon today, but they will in any event have an opportunity to report on conditions in Alsace.

One of the delegates is Mayor Spindler of Münster, who was seized by France in 1914 as a hostage and carried into France. Another is a clergyman recently expelled from Alsace. The delegates will ask the National Assembly to demand the application to Alsace of President Wilson's principle of self-determination.

"We have a right to demand this," General Scheüch said to the correspondent, "and also to demand that the plebiscite be honestly conducted."

Lining Up the Parties.

Feb. 5.—The day before the convening of the German National Assembly was devoted to party caucuses and discussion of various projects to be brought before the Assembly.

The Christian Party at its caucus decided to resume the old name of Centrist. Herr Pfeiffer, one of the leaders of the party and a former member of the Reichstag, gave this explanation for the change: "We do not feel that we really ought to call ourselves 'the Christian Party.'"

The Centrist Party is one of the strongest bourgeoise parties in the Assembly. It has eighty-eight delegates, and it is expected that the four Guelphs will join with the Centre on all important questions.

It is becoming apparent that one of the main contests in the Assembly will be between the advocates of a republic with all state divisions eliminated and the advocates of a federal republic in which separate States shall continue to exist with well defined States' rights. The situation is further complicated by divisions within the ranks of the advocates of a federal republic.

The former Conservatives and National Liberals, all of whom favor a Federal Republic, are opposed to any division of Prussia, whereas a considerable part of the Centrist party intends to fight for the creation of a "West German State" formed from the Catholic territories of Western Prussia.

It appears unlikely, however, that there is any considerable sentiment left within the Centrist Party for the creation by it of an autonomous independent republic. Sentiment in favor of this originally was created by the anti-church decrees of the former Prussian Minister, Adolf Hoffman.

The most uncertain factor is the German Democratic Party. The left wing of the Democrats is almost red, but on the other side are many delegates recruited from the Richthofen wing of the National Liberals. Shortly before the elections to the National Assembly some leaders of this party made an attempt to disavow the acts of Hugo Preuss, the Prussian Minister of the Interior, who drew up the draft of a constitution which will be submitted to the Assembly.

This draft would permit the division of Prussia into smaller States, and some of the Democratic leaders, alarmed by the opposition displayed by the Prussian bourgeoise to a division, hastened to declare that they disapproved of the idea that Guelphs, if elected, "would probably refuse to accept the mandate."

Not only has Minister Preuss accepted the mandate, but an effort has been made to show that the real leaders of the party were not responsible for the announcement made before the election. There is much sentiment in the ranks of the Democrats for the abolition of State lines, but there are also, as shown by the Preuss incident, many who advocate their retention.

The Majority Socialists favor a republic with no State divisions, but it remains to be seen whether Bavaria, in particular, will consent to give up any or all of the special rights which it enjoyed in the old empire.

Herr Pfeiffer, in discussing the future of the Socialists from the standpoint of a Centrist leader, said:

"The appointments for provisional President and Chancellor will be only for a few months to span the interval until a general election, and it is conceivable that the bourgeoise delegates may consider it wise to give the Socialists enough rope to hang themselves by demonstrating still further their incapacity to govern."

A Weimar dispatch dated Friday and received Friday night erroneously reported that Carl Kautsky, an Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, had been elected President of the German National Assembly. Kautsky is an Independent Socialist and was last reported attending the Socialist Conference at Berne.

CRITIC OF MILITARY REGIME.

Dr. David Prominent in Striving for Peace During the War.

Dr. Eduard David, a Hessian Social Democrat, 56 years of age, member of both the Landtag of Hesse and the Reichstag, had been chiefly known as an advocate of industrial arts in gymnasium curriculum, associate editor of the Mitteldeutsche Sonntagzeitung, and the Mainzer Volkszeitung and a rational critic of the Imperial Government, when Prince Max made him an Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs on Oct. 5 last. He came into the Government with the first Social Democratic members—Scheidemann and Gröber—and retained his portfolio with the Independent Democrats, whom Herr Ebert brought in on Nov. 9. His chief was Dr. Solf, who had been Secretary for the Colonies under the Kaiserlich régime.

During the war he was a prominent member of that faction within the Majority Group which was known as "orthodox and patriotic." His speeches in the Reichstag usually were made in preparation for some act of his party which was intended to frame the way for peace. As early as July, 1915, he declared that Germany should offer generous terms and waive the right of conquest. This was followed by an attempt of the Majority propagandists to have belligerent parliaments send delegates to a peace congress.

In the Spring of 1917 he was one of the delegates to the Stockholm Socialist Congress. There, while declaring that no German Government would dream of returning Alsace-Lorraine to France, he expressed himself as quit ecertain that his country did not desire to impose Kultur on the unwilling. Two months laters (July 19) came the famous Reichstag resolutions for no indemnities and no annexations, which inspired the Pope's note of Aug. 1, and under the cloak of which Ludendorff prepared for Caporetto and the Picardy offensive.

All through the war he appears to have played the double rôle of preparing the German public for his own party's most unusual movements and as a rational critic of the schemes of the military authorities as soon as these schemes seemed to have miscarried. Thus as early as October, 1917, he declared that the unrestricted U-boat campaign had failed—had not only failed, but had augmented the number of Germany's enemies. When in January, 1918, Chancellor von Hertling was demanding the return of the colonies as an essential to peace, Dr. David declared that Germany should first offer to return Belgium. In March, when the Brest-Litovsk treaty was discussed in the Reichstag, he declared that the agreement was a "peace by force" and demanded that the diplomatic acts of the Government should fit its purposes.

HAMBURG WORKMEN JOIN SPARTACIDES

Seize City Hall and Arms and Demand Withdrawal of Government Troops From Bremen.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Feb. 8, (via Copenhagen.)—While order at Bremen is rapidly being restored by Gerstenberg's division, parts of which probably will enter Bremerhaven tomorrow, the situation at Hamburg is growing more critical every hour. Leaders of the majority Socialists lost all control over their own partisans, who joined the Spartacides in opposition to the Government and armed themselves to compel Gerstenberg's division to retire.

During the last few days public safety has become almost fictitious, people being waylaid and houses robbed. Extortions are numerous. As in Bremen during the Spartacide reign they are being practiced in the following manner:

From three to six armed men will enter some rich man's house, present a paper identifying them as belonging to the Executive Committee of some Soldiers' or Workers' Council, and then ask to be shown around the house. They size up the value of the furniture, silver, pictures, &c., decree the payment of 10,000, perhaps 20,000 marks, after which the householder must leave the place. Remonstrances prove of no avail. If asked where the money is to go the extortioners will tell the unfortunate victim that it will be used in defense of revolutionary accomplishments, if they deign to explain at all.

In this manner many rich households were victimized. If they refused to pay, the extortioners refused to leave the house and would permit nobody else to leave, making themselves comfortable and eating and drinking whatever the kitchen and the cellar offered. The so-called safety guards have no authority to suppress these extortion committees and are often believed to share the booty.

Armed workmen took possession of the Hamburg City Hall yesterday and seized a large number of rifles and quantities of ammunition. They then proceeded to the Hamburg Parliament, demanding that all the arms be deposited there. None was found, and the mob dispersed. There were large meetings last night, demanding that Gerstenberg's division be withdrawn from Bremen and Bremerhaven; otherwise the Hamburg laborers would march to the aid of the Bremen Spartacides.

In Berlin yesterday Government artillery marched through certain streets, posting guns at conspicuous corners. It was said the Government had been warned of a new Spartacide coup, but nothing occurred.

Unfortunately, some very unreliable elements have found their way into the newly enlisted regiments. It is commonly known that many Government champions are in sympathy with the Spartacus element. At Spandau it has been repeatedly observed that guards at the arsenals will close both eyes or walk away, thus giving the Spartacides a chance to carry away as many rifles and as much munitions as they like.

SPARTACANS BOLDER; FATAL RIOTS IN KIEL

Five Killed in Clash with Shipyard Strikers—Reds Active in Many Localities.

BERLIN, Feb. 6, (Associated Press.)—The internal situation in Germany is seriously menaced by numerous Spartacan groups who are showing themselves in the north and east coast cities and at various places in Central and Southern Germany. The newspaper publication of war bulletins on happenings on the new German-Polish and German-Bolshevist fronts adds to the nation's woes.

While the Spartacan insurgents apparently have been routed in Bremen, they are fomenting fresh riots at Hamburg, Kiel, and Lubeck and are becoming extremely bold in Dusseldorf, Gotha, Jena, Erfurt, and Eisenach. In Berlin, Government troops are carrying on a renewed search of houses for concealed weapons and ammunition because of the open threats of the Communists that a new insurrection is being organized.

Wherever the Spartacans are active money flows in profusion, and the insurgents experience little difficulty in obtaining recruits, while their surreptitiously acquired supplies of arms and munitions enable them to equip volunteers, if only for the purpose of terrorizing the social and official bourgeoisie.

The sole redeeming feature of the situation in the last forty-eight hours has been the determination of the bourgeois officials and civilians to counteract the terror by striking en masse. Following the example set by all the bourgeois circles in Düsseldorf, the railway, postal, and telegraph employes of Hamburg, Lubeck, and Mühlheim have thrown down the gauntlet to the local revolutionary boards.

Rioting in Kiel on Wednesday resulted in a number of dead and wounded. Two thousand shipyard workers went out on strike in sympathy with the Bremen Communists. After a meeting conducted by Spartacans, Red Guards and Independent Socialists the strikers proceeded to the office of the Governor to demand that the workingmen be armed. In a clash with the public safety guards four civilians and one sailor were killed and eight civilians and four marines were wounded.

The local Soldiers' Council in Lubeck has moved its baggage into the camp of the Spartacans. Its attempt to mobilize the local garrison for support of the Bremen insurgents failed in the face of the loyal stand of the Government troops.

The attempt of the Spartacans to intimidate the railway, postal, and telephone officials at Mühlheim resulted in the latter striking after notifying the revolutionary Workingmen's and Soldiers' Council that work would only be resumed when the telephone station was evacuated by the Spartacan troops and a new council elected.

The radical Soldiers' and Workingmen's Council of Gotha has demanded the withdrawal of Government troops from Weimar under the threat of a general strike in the Thuringian States. The Independent Socialists are also identifying themselves with the hostile movements going on at Erfurt, Eisennach, Gotha, and Jena, which are being conducted for the purpose of menacing the National Assembly. The pick of Berlin's plain clothes men and secret political police have been assigned to special duty in connection with the sessions of the Assembly.

SENATORS CENSURE ABUSE OF ALLIES

Leaders of Both Parties Denounce Organized German and Sinn Fein Propaganda.

AIMED CHIEFLY AT BRITISH

But Efforts Are Also Seen to Embroil Us with France, Japan, and Italy.

BRITISH EMBARGO FIGURES

It Is Not Directed Against America Particularly, but Applies to All, Says Penrose.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—A cleverly organized propaganda, the purpose of which is to estrange the American people and their Government from the peoples and Governments of the nations with which the United States is associated in the war, is in operation in the United States, according to United States Senators who discussed the subject today. Great Britain is the nation which is being principally attacked, and every pro-German agency, backed by such anti-British elements as the Sinn Fein, is actively participating in the agitation, the purpose of which is to create distrust in this country, and, if possible, to bring about a rupture of the relations between Washington and London. There is also a somewhat less active propaganda directed against the French.

Statements that these propagandists were at work were made today by Senator King of Utah, Senator Wadsworth of New York, Senator Overman of North Carolina, Senator Poindexter of Washington, Senator McCumber of North Dakota, Senators Knox and Penrose of Pennsylvania, and other Senators of equal prominence.

Senator King bluntly asserted that the agitation was of German and Sinn Fein origin and should be exposed both in the interests of America and England. Senator Poindexter and Senator Wadsworth placed the propaganda at the doors of the enemy, as did other Senators representing both of the great parties and all sections of the country.

Subtle and Powerful Influences.

"It is becoming more apparent each day," said Senator King, "that influences are at work in the United States to disturb the friendly relations existing between this Government and Great Britain. There is an extensive propaganda carried on in a subtle but nevertheless powerful manner to prejudice the American people against the English Government and the English people. Great Britain is held up as our hereditary foe, as the chief obstacle to our commercial prosperity and national growth, a foe to liberty and progress. Unquestionably German agents are conspicuous and prominent in this detestable intrigue. Certain irreconcilables of the Sinn Fein class are strong coadjutors in this propaganda.

"It is also becoming apparent that, as an independent plan, as a part of this conspiracy, the American people is to be poisoned against France, Italy, and Japan, if not other nations associated with them in the struggle against the Central Powers. The slightest pretext is seized upon as a basis for contending that one or more of the nations referred to is planning hostile policies against this republic; but, of course, Great Britain is the chief object of attack.

"It is apparent to every unprejudiced, thinking American that the English-speaking race has the major rôle to play in this world for generations to come. England, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, and other English-speaking nations have aims, objects, and purposes in common. A common language binds them together. Their love of liberty and orderly government brings them within the same circle of desire and achievement. They stand for the same civilization, the same moral concepts, ethical ideals, and political principles as we do. This is no time to separate the United States from the allied nations or to breed distrust or animosities between this nation and those with whom she has stood in the great struggle against autocracy and for liberty in the world.

"While we are seeking a union of nations that will minimize possibility of war, we should appreciate the fact that Great Britain, perhaps more than any other nation, can advance to a successful culmination the ideal which has seized in such a powerful manner the imaginations and hearts of all peoples everywhere. No one familiar with England and her people and Great Britain's dominions can truthfully contend that they desire other than the friendship of this nation, the good-will of the American people, and the strengthening of the international bonds and relations between them.

"In this hour we should not only feel, but hasten to express, not only our admiration for, but our gratitude to the nations with which we were associated in the war, and for their steadfast devotion to the cause of liberty and the heroic struggle which they waged to free the world from a military autocracy, destruction of liberty and to preserve themselves as well as this nation from a menace to civilization itself. In this hour, the American people should stand with our brave and gallant associates and prove by word and deed that the sufferings through which they and we have passed are not in vain, and that the blood of the heroic dead has cemented forever the peoples and the nations which have passed through the shadows into the light of what we hope will be a brighter day."

Wadsworth Minimizes Embargo.

"It would be a great pity," Senator Wadsworth said, "were the American people to permit themselves to get into an attitude of suspicion of the motives of our great allies in the war. I am under the impression that influences are hard at work today seeking to turn our people away from the friends by whose side they fought in the greatest war in history.

"They (the Germans) are taking advantage of every little occurrence which they think affords them an opportunity to make trouble between America and her war allies. Before we get carried away by this kind of propaganda, before we permit ourselves to judge harshly of England or of France, we would do well to remember the terrific strain which these countries endured for nearly three years before we went into the war. They have suffered a great deal more than we have, and their task of reconstruction is infinitely more difficult than ours.

"In that reconstruction it may be necessary for England, and our other allies as well, to place upon foreign trade some temporary restrictions to tide them over these trublous times. We may be inconvenienced for a short time, and it will be a comparatively short inconvenience, I am sure. We would better be a little patient and a little more generous. Our allies fought for their very life, and with our help, at the last, they won the fight. Let us permit them to get on their feet again and give them credit for doing what they think is necessary to that end. Were we in the same position, I have no doubt whatever but that we would do the same."

Praise for British Sacrifices.

Senator Overman of North Carolina said that in his opinion there could be nothing more reprehensible than a propaganda that sought to stir up discord between the people of the United States and those of Great Britain and France.

"It is inconceivable to me," said Senator Overman, "that any true American could for one moment support any propaganda that has for its purpose, openly expressed or masked, the breaking down of the happy relations that should and do exist between the people of America and those of the nations with which we are associated in the European war. What we need in America at this time is a spirit of tolerance and fairness, and a determination on the part of the good citizenship that no outsider or other trouble maker shall be permitted to step in and for purposes that are as anti-American as they are anti-Ally, stir up discord in the great war family of which we were a part.

"As regards Great Britain, against which nation much of the propaganda that we are hearing about is directed, I want to say that we should ever keep in mind what England did in this war. She gave a million of her best that German autocracy and ruthlessness might not triumph; for four years her Grand Fleet stood sentinel in the North Sea and made impossible the active participation of what was the German High Seas Fleet in the war. She has spent billions of treasure and has got to rebuild and start all over again. If we keep these facts in mind and approach any questions that may arise between us in a spirit of brotherhood and fairness, there can be no question of the future so far as Britain and her colonies and America are concerned."

"There are certain pro-German elements in this country," Senator Poindexter said, "that were more or less curbed during the actual progress of the war, that are attempting, now that the armistice has been signed, to renew their activities and are taking advantage of every incident, however innocent it may be in itself, which can be utilized to cause dissension between the United States and England. The resolution of inquiry in regard to the embargo imposed by Great Britain was introduced by its author, (Senator Weeks,) in perfect good faith, no doubt at the instance of legitimate business interests who were affected by it. Yet it was taken advantage of by every pro-German and anti-Britisher as a weapon to be used against one of our greatest allies.

"Our independence, perhaps, it is not too much to say, depended upon the British Navy, the British Army and Great Britain's loyalty to her obligations. One of the great compensations offsetting the terrible losses of the war should be a permanent affection, amity and co-operation between the United States and Great Britain and immortal France and all the other nations allied with us in that great struggle.

"We have no information that Great Britain exceeded in any way the proprieties in the care of her own interests in the embargo referred to, and until further information on that subject is received we should not question her motives."

Knox Says Allies Fought Our War.

Senator Knox, who is a former Secretary of State, said:

"I deprecate any movement or action from whatever source which would tend to separate the splendid alliance of the nations against German autocracy. While I have not seen any evidence on the surface of the operation of a German propaganda aimed to destroy the good feeling between our allies and the United States, yet this may be present. There are developments which are breaking down the cordiality between us and our allies in the war.

"There can be no good reason to oppose Great Britain putting on an embargo for domestic purposes provided it is not aimed against a particular country."

"We are endeavoring," said Senator McCumber, "to secure a League of Nations to maintain the peace of the world and to prevent another such holocaust of blood and devastation as we have just witnessed. This country, therefore, should frown down any attempt by any propaganda to create a feeling of distrust or animosity among those nations whose life blood has co-mingled to free the world from the greatest evil that has ever threatened it.

"We speak of this war as our war. We pride ourselves on the part we have taken to defend civilization, to establish as an international doctrine and policy the principle that might does not make right. If that be true, if this war has been our war, if our cause was a just cause, then we are bound to admit that France and Great Britain fought our war for us; that their sons did the dying; that their people did the suffering; that their ships and their sailors fed the billows of the ocean for four long years before we even got into our war. With a population of 100,000,000, our losses in our expeditionary forces up to Nov. 11, 1918, were about 56,000. With a population of about one-third of ours, France lost in killed alone considerably more than 1,000,000 men, and Great Britain, with about the same population as France, nearly 1,000,000 men. Their losses were many hundreds of times greater than ours.

"For three years before our entry into the conflict we fattened on the misfortunes of those two great allies. They were compelled to purchase from us at whatever figures we saw fit to charge, and we were not modest in our demands. Those nations came out of this war faint and bleeding. We are yet strong and vigorous. Their national resources are very limited ours almost unlimited. If any people, therefore, were ever obligated to other people for a mighty service rendered, that obligation today rests upon the people of the United States, and the duty of reciprocal good-will upon our American conscience.

"Is not the very least we can do for them, in return for their sufferings, their privations, and their brave endurance, to extend to them the hand of good-will—yes, and of any just assistance in lifting the mighty load of indebtedness which will bear heavily upon their shoulders and those of their children's children for many generations?"

Senator Penrose said:

"I don't believe that the American people have just ground to criticise the British Government in its recent action in establishing an embargo on a long list of articles of importations. This action appertains to purely domestic matters in England, and is clearly in the scope of Governmental action. It is only fair, moreover, to remember the conditions which confront the United Kingdom in the matter of unemployment, and there should be sympathy for the English people and generous willingness to let them take every necessary step to ameliorate their condition. We have ourselves on more than one occasion taken action in the way of restricting or limiting importations not entirely different from the recent action of the British Government.

"The English embargo is not aimed at the United States particularly, but applies against all countries and is thoroughly for domestic protection. I do not see how the Republican party can protest against such action on the part of the British Government when its cardinal doctrines commit the party to similar or equivalent legislation."

A Senator who feels strongly on the question of propaganda, whether directed against England or any of the other Allies, is Senator Chamberlain of Oregon, the Chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs. Another is Senator Nelson of Minnesota. The list of those who hold the same views might be added to indefinitely.

Eight Killed in Explosion.

PLATTEVILLE, Wis., Feb. 8.—Eight persons were killed today by an explosion and fire which wrecked the three-story Realty Building. A score of others were injured by flying débris. Among the dead are three firemen, crushed by falling walls. The property loss is $200,000. It was not determined whether the explosion was of gas or gasoline.

PROBLEMS RAISED BY PLEA OF ARABS

By ERNEST MARSHALL.

Indian frontier are regarded by the Arab nationalists as facts which the League of Nations will be bound to take into consideration.

An announcement was issued today through the French semi-official Havas agency denying the accuracy of the statements in the Paris press, which were controverted in these dispatches yesterday, relative to the King of Hedjaz being in British pay and acting as a sort of stalking horse for Great Britain. This announcement is a sufficient indication that the French Government, while fully reserving its right to put forward its special point of view, is not in sympathy with the newspaper articles that would tend to put any strain on the good relations between France and Great Britain—"a country whose sons," as the Intransigeant says tonight, "shed their blood on the fields of Picardy and Flanders."

Whatever be the power appointed as trustee for greater Arabia which Emir Faisal wants to see recognized by the Peace Conference and the League of Nations, it will not be asked to play any part in the political development of the country. When the Emir spoke before the council yesterday, he began by saying that his forefathers were Kings in the East before the nations, before whom he was appearing, were invented. His appeal was for justice for one of the world's most ancient civilizations.

He plainly intimated that what Greater Arabia wanted was not politicians but instructors in the sciences and arts of the Occident. The King of the Hedjaz, who was the descendant of Sheiks who had ruled a territory 400 miles by 1,000, wanted not one acre of new territory. The Greater Arabia would be an aggregation of individual States with separate political existence. The question of Palestine being turned over to the Zionists might be settled under such arrangements as the Amir proposed, although one fact on which stress was laid was that the Moslems in Palestine were in the proportion of eight to one of other religions. What the Arabs dread is exploitation by concession-mongers. Picturesque as is the figure of Amir Faisal, he is in some respects a less interesting person than his English aid, Colonel Lawrence. The latter was once attached to the Oriental Department of the British Museum. The study of the languages and ethnology of the East became a passion, and he was in Arabia when the war broke out. He was but one of many thousands who came from all quarters of the earth to take up arms for his country, but few had the advantages of knowledge and personality which make him conspicuous among the throngs attending the conference.

In the Realm of Style

It is not too early to note which way the wind is blowing in the realm of style.

Surely there are enough "Straws" visible to forecast the millinery mode.

Just as the swing of a tunic, the swish of a sash, the embroidered designs, the combination of materials and colors tell their own story of newness in gowns.

The cut of a sleeve, the flare or shape of a collar and the sweep of drapery proclaim the new in capes, wrap-coats and top coats.

The tailored suits for Spring have many style features which distinguish them, set them apart, from the fashions of yesteryear.

Women's Spring Suits

Individualized Styles

Spring suit fashions follow the lines of tailored simplicity but the gay colored panel vests of tricolette or shot silk, cloth of gold collar and cuffs as a trimming, and dashes of colored duvetyn make them frankly feminine.

LICHNOWSKY SEES RUIN IF POLES WIN

Says Granting of Their Claims Means Disaster to Them and Germany.

DANZIG HIS CHIEF CONCERN

Its Surrender to Poland, He Says, Would Violate Every Principle of Justice.

BERLIN, Feb. 4, (Associated Press.)—"The surrendering of any portion of German territory to Poland would mean not only that that portion would be dragged down to the level of a less efficient, less orderly and less developed economic administration, with its resultant great economic damage to the inhabitants of the lands affected, but would also destroy Northern Germany."

This conviction was expressed to The Associated Press by Prince Lichnowsky, the former German Ambassador to Great Britain, in the course of a long conversation concerning peace questions. Prince Lichnowsky is a large estate owner of Upper Silesia and lives there for most of the year.

It is understood that he is to be a member of the German peace delegation. In his opinion, it is misleading to speak of any Prussian border districts as having an "undoubted Polish population." In Upper Silesia there are districts, he admits, in which the Poles have a numerical preponderance, but the cities and villages, he says, are preponderantly German, as are also nearly all the industries and larger landholdings. He contends that the Poles here are not real Poles, as they do not even speak Polish, but a dialect.

The material condition even of the Poles themselves, according to Prince Lichnowsky, would become much worse if they came under what he termed "Polish anarchy" and were cut off from Germany. Industries and coal mines would be ruined if they lost the German market. Transportation to German consumers would be impossible without railway rebates such as have long been granted.

Of Posen and West Prussia Prince Lichnowsky said:

"These provinces were at the time of the census of 1910 inhabited by 1,946,663 Germans and 1,861,942 Poles. It is well-nigh impossible to trace a clear line of demarkation between the German and Polish districts. Of the seventy-two counties making up the two provinces not a single one boasts a purely Polish population.

"Of the four Governmental districts—Danzig, Marienwerder, Bromberg, and Posen—the first three have a preponderance of Germans, and even in the district of Posen the German population reaches a percentage equal to the population of Eastern Galicia, which is claimed by the Poles.

"In the first three districts the populations are vastly more German than foreign, Danzig counting 97 per cent. of Germans, Thorn 67 per cent., Graudens 86 per cent., and Marienwerder 96. Only within the district of Posen do the town populations present slight Polish majorities, the City of Posen counting 57 per cent. and Gnesen 61 per cent. Poles.

"I might add that it is not to Polish but to German culture that the two provinces owe their wealth, even if the world may pretend not to think much of that."

To surrender Posen, said Prince Lichnowsky, would mean bringing the Polish State into the vicinity of Berlin, the surrender of West Prussia would isolate East Prussia completely from Germany, and the extension of Polish rule to Libau would cut off Germany utterly from Russia.

"From geographic, as well as economic, considerations," he continued, "the natural and real solution of the Polish question is for Poland to become part of the Greater Russian Federal Republic. That would solve at the same time the question of a Polish seaport and a Polish market.

"The surrender of Danzig to the Poles, who have under 2½ per cent. of the city's population, would violate every principle of justice. If a plébiscite be insisted upon for German districts occupied partly by other peoples, then there must also be a plébiscite in those sections of other countries occupied by Germans, and also in Alsace-Lorraine. The right of self-determination must be applied to all or none. The Germans must not be made the sole sufferers through its application."

Prince Lichnowsky asserted that a propaganda was being carried on by the Poles in the German border districts, and that a strike movement had been started in Upper Silesia by Polish agitation. It had assumed a decidedly Bolshevist character, he added, "the strikers demanding above all that no military measures be taken to protect the frontier against the Poles."

He proposed as a solution of the Polish and Czecho-Austrian problems the union of all parts of former Russia, including Poland and Galicia, into a United States of Russia, and a similar union of German-Austrian, Czechoslovak, Magyar, and Slovenian States, with the inclusion of Trieste, on condition that Germany keep her Eastern boundaries, which, he declared, "are indispensable for a peaceful and effective reconstruction."

CZECHS STILL ADVANCE AGAINST THE POLES

Warsaw Pessimistic Over Silesian Truce—Poles Arrange One with the Germans.

WARSAW, Feb. 7, (Associated Press.)—Czechoslovak troops, according to reports received here, continue to advance through Silesia, and now are along the Vistula River, thirty miles from their original starting point. It is said that each time the Czechs halt they ask for a new armistice.

In view of these reports, much doubt is expressed here whether the arrangements made by the Peace Conference in Paris regarding the Teschen district, which is in dispute between the Poles and the Czechs, will bear any fruit. Polish leaders are much concerned lest the Czechs keep possession of the territory which they have taken.

Premier Paderewski said today concerning the policies of the Polish Republic:

"We are willing to do our best to live in harmony with every one. We are a liberty-loving people, and we do not believe in oppression. We believe also that he who first takes up arms is always guilty."

COPENHAGEN, Feb. 8.—The negotiations between Polish and German Commissioners looking toward a cessation of hostilities in German Poland have resulted, according to advices received here, in an armistice which will be effective tomorrow.

The reports add that there has been violent fighting at several points in the last few days. The Poles are said to be concentrating special storming troops for use in Silesia.

HOW POLES BEAT SOCIALISTS.

Largely Through Efforts of Women Government Gives Jews Franchise.

WARSAW, Feb. 5, (Associated Press.)—Two outstanding features of the Polish elections in the early part of the week were the energetic work of the women, notably against the Socialists, and the defeat of the latter, despite the large sums of money they are said to have expended. Agitators received the equivalent of $100 a week, and this money is generally believed to have come from Berlin and Moscow.

The Minister of the Interior has issued a proclamation granting electoral rights to the Jews, and announcing that severe punishment will be inflicted for attacks upon them.

BOLD FOR SPANISH REPUBLIC

Deputy Invites Co-operation of Advocates of Catalonian Autonomy.

MADRID, Feb. 7.—In the course of a discussion of home rule for Catalonia in the Chamber of Deputies today, Deputy Domingo, a Republican, turned to the Catalonist benches and said:

"If we help you to get autonomy, will you help us to get a republic?"

Premier Romanones here interposed to remark:

"That is the real foundation of your speech, but the monarchy is quite capable of applying to Catalonia the remedy she desires."

I left America to come to France in December. We agree that if the Bolsheviki had got something worth while to develop in the form of government they ought to have the opportunity to do it without interference. If they have not got anything they'll go on the rocks soon enough.

"I shall go to this conference with the Bolsheviki without any preconceived notions for or against them, but, like a good reporter, to get the facts if I can."

PARIS, Feb. 8.—In addition to the American delegates to the conference on the Princes' Islands with the Russian Bolshevist Government, the following have been appointed delegates, according to French newspapers.

M. Conty, the French Minister to Copenhagen, and General Bampon, for France; Sir Robert Borden, Premier of Canada, and a military delegate, for Great Britain, and the Marquis della Torreta, former Ambassador in Petrograd, for Italy.

Nicholas Tschaikovsky, President of the Provisional Government of Northern Russia, arrived in Paris yesterday to confer with delegates to the Peace Conference regarding the future of his country. He spent the day in conference with delegates and Ambassador David R. Francis, with whom he called on Colonel E. M. House.

M. Tschaikovsky is the only head of any of the Russian Government now in Paris.

ALLIES ATTACKING IN NORTH RUSSIA

Offensive Started to Prevent the Flanking of American Positions—5-Mile Advance.

CANADIANS OPEN BATTLE

Silence Bolshevist Guns, After Which American Units Join Anglo-Russian Advance.

ARCHANGEL, Feb. 8, (Associated Press.)—British and Russian troops, supported by American machine gun and trench mortar units, began an attack at 10 o'clock yesterday morning on the Bolsheviki on the Petrograd Road south of Kadish.

The allied forces advanced five miles down the Petrograd road from Kadish. Two Bolshevist guns were captured by the Allies during the fighting.

The infantry went forward after the Canadian artillery had silenced the enemy artillery in a bombardment of several hours. The attack was made for the purpose of protecting the American positions at Sredmakrenga, about thirty miles eastward, from a flank attack.

LONDON, Feb. 8.—The Bolshevist Government has decided that all males in Russia, irrespective of nationality, must serve in the Red Army, according to a Copenhagen dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company.

TYPHOID RAVAGING RUSSIA.

Twelve Doctors and Forty Nurses Dead in One Petrograd Hospital.

STOCKHOLM, Feb. 8.—An epidemic of typhoid fever is ravaging Petrograd, Moscow and other places in Russia, according to dispatches from Petrograd. In one hospital in that city twelve doctors and forty nurses have died from typhoid.

PROTEST AGAINST HERRON.

Commercial Travelers Cable Wilson, Calling His Appointment an Insult.

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Eastern and Middle West Travelers, held yesterday, a resolution was passed to send the following cablegram to President Wilson in Paris:

"We respectfully urge you to reconsider and recall the appointment of Herron, whose shallow-brained propaganda cannot help but be an insult to every American home. At this particular time we urge on you the necessity of appointing as representatives of Government men only of sound views and stable character, especially where representatives come in contact with Bolsheviki, that the latter will undersand America will not tolerate violence and anarchistic policies with which they are associated."

HOUSE PASSES NEW REVENUE BILL

that was the shape in which the section went to the conference.

With the war ended Mr. Kitchin said, it was generally agreed that the taxes in this section were uncalled for, but as the only point of debate for consideration by the conferees was the proposed lowering of the tax rate, the section was left in the conference report, with the understanding that separate action would be asked in the House and Senate for its repeal.

These taxes provided for the collection of $14,500,000 before the close of the fiscal year so that with its elimination the total will drop from $6,077,200,000 to $6,062,700,000.

Mr. Kitchin assured the House today that the present second class postal rates would remain effective as a result of the conference action and intimated at least that no steps would be taken for the present to reduce the rates.

Developments of the Day.

There were several important developments in the course of the debate today, a few of which may be summarized as follows:

1. Both Democrats and Republicans who entered the debate, and their remarks apparently met with approval, expressed the opinion that there would be a special session of Congress; that the $4,184,510,000 which it is estimated that the proposed law of 1919 would raise will be entirely inadequate, and that the incoming Republican Congress will be forced to adjust the law to raise more in taxes.

2. That soldiers, sailors, marines, and nurses who served in the war richly deserved the flat payment of $60 each, which was provided for them upon their honorable discharge, and that steps would be taken to urge by legislation other than the revenue law to provide a more ample reward. It was estimated that the $60 payment would cost the Government $226,000,000. Every reference to such payments to the fighting forces was received with applause.

3. That Democrats and Republicans believe that there will have to be radical upward tariff adjustments, either for the purpose of obtaining revenue or for the protection of American industry, or both.

More Money for Soldiers.

Several of the Representatives seemed to feel that the $60 payment for the soldiers, in addition to their regular pay, was inadequate. Representative Fordney referred to it as a "measley" sum, and expressed the belief that a Government which could pay many millions to guarantee wheat and make up a railroad deficit could well afford to pay more than a premium of $60 to those who had offered their lives. Representative Gallivan of Massachusetts said he would vote against the bill because of the "pittance" it prvoided for the soldiers and sailors unless it was shown to him that additional premiums could be made available by other legislation. Others joined in this suggestion.

The debate in regard to the soldiers was warm for a time, and Mr. Kitchin got himself into trouble momentarily by a remark to the effect that the armed forces were composed of higher class men this time than any army which had engaged in a European war. He expressed the opinion that they were "not rough and tough" and a "different kind." He believed, also, he said, that the men who went in as privates and came out as privates were as good as those who were officers.

He drew fire immediately from Mr. Humphreys, who wanted to know on what ground he based the fact that the men were better or more patriotic than those who fought in other wars. Mr. Humphreys thought it an unfair reflection on the soldiers who fought in the Spanish war and other wars. It took some explaining on the part of Mr. Kitchin, but he clung to the contention that the draft had caught more high-salaried and more college men.

"Do you mean," demanded Representative Langley of Kentucky, "that college men who went into the war were better than other men?"

Mr. Kitchin said a bit wearily, that he did not mean that at all, and then there were cries for order, and other channels of debate were entered.

Kitchin Attacks Big Interests.

The debate today was opened by Mr. Kitchin, who jumped right in with the intimation that there had been a determined propaganda to defeat the passage of a new revenue law on the part of big interests. He made it plain that the proposed law must be passed, despite its defects, in order to meet the situation.

"If this propaganda had succeeded," declared Mr. Kitchin, "the war profiteers of the United States would have escaped $1,700,000,000 in taxes. If any man votes against this bill on the ground that the taxes it levies are too high he will be voting to take from the pockets of the people $1,700,000,000 and give it to the war profiteers, who already have made billions upon billions, in addition to the tremendous profits they piled up before the war.

"He will be voting to the United States Steel Corporation $165,000,000, which is the difference between the taxes this corporation will have to pay under this bill and what it would have had to pay under the existing revenue law.

"He will be voting to give the Standard Oil Company $20,000,000 out of the war profits.

"He will be voting to give the Bethlehem Steel Company $16,000,000 and the four big meat packers—the meat packing combine—$20,000,000.

"It will take a better reason than one which holds the levies in this bill to be too high to justify a vote against this measure."

The Year's Expenditures.

Mr. Kitchin stated that the Treasury Department's estimate on this year's expenditures reached $19,000,000,000, while it was his opinion that they would come closer to $20,000,000,000, or ten or twelve billion less than if the war had continued. But part of this, he asserted, had been raised as follows:

Seven billion by the Fourth Liberty Loan, which already had been expended.

One billion in war savings certificates.

Six billion in the pending Revenue bill.

This leaves five billion, he said, to be raised by the proposed Victory-Liberty Loan, between now and June 30, 1919, the end of the fiscal year.

"If the expenditures run to $20,000,000,000, as I am confident they will," continued Mr. Kitchin, "the Secretary of the Treasury will have to come to Congress to get an authorization for another billion in bonds.

"The total authorization in bonds since the United States entered the war is $22,000,000,000. Of this, in round numbers, $17,000,000,000 has been issued, leaving authorization for approximately $5,000,000,000.

"Next year, according to the annual report of the Treasury Department, at least $6,000,000,000 will be needed to defray the contemplated expenditures. But I predict that instead of next year's expenditures being what the Secretary of the Treasury's report indicates they will amount to $10,000,000,000.

"The bill before us is designed to raise next year only $4,000,000,000, which means there will be a deficit of $6,000,000,00, which must be got by issuing more bonds. When we think of the enormous aggregate of bonds being piled up we can readily see that they will constitute a mortgage on the people and industries of the country for generations to come."

Representative Kitchin explained that the Revenue bill as originally drafted by the House committee was intended to raise $8,000,000,000, but with the signing of the armistice Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo suggested that it be reduced to $6,000,000,000.

"I very much doubt the wisdom of this reduction," said Mr. Kitchin, "when the big interests have made such enormous profits in the last three years, but it was necessary for me to yield my judgment in order to get a new revenue bill at all."

Mr. Kitchin said that if the average profits of these corporations for the three years prior to the war were deducted, together with all the taxes they have been required to pay during the war, "they still will have a net profit of $12,000,000,000 in their pockets."

He also expressed the fear that instead of the country's bonded indebtedness being $25,000,000,000 to the end of the present fiscal year, it would be $30,000,000,000, and he added that the taxes necessary to pay the interest on this indebtedness would be $1,300,000,000 annually, a third more than all the taxes collected by all the Allies before the war.

Mr. Kitchin said there were some so-called relief provisions in the proposed law to which he could not subscribe and about which he reserved the right to state that he believed them unwise, unjust, and unwarranted. One of these, he said, was the provision that a prospector of mines and oil wells should not be taxed more than 20 per cent. of the sale price if a bona fide sale were made. With the protection of this provision, he said, a prospector would escape paying the heavy excess profits taxes. He said, with a smile, that he had deferred in this matter to the tearful pleas of Scott Ferris, Chairman of the House Committee on Public Lands, and the Oklahoma advocates of the provision. The suggestion was made, he said, that a prospector would not make a sale while his mine or oil well was subject to the full excess profits taxes, unless the relief provision was enacted into law, and he felt that there was considerable weight to this argument. The Senate conferees, he said, had exhibited great stubbornness in advocating this relief provision.

He had been opposed to the present form of the bill as to consolidated returns, said Mr. Kitchin, but had given way to the other conferees when a provision was inserted which took out of the class of corporations and their subsidiaries which may make consolidated returns such subsidiaries as had been organized since the outbreak of the war and 50 per cent. or more of whose net income had been made out of war contracts. There were in the bill, he said, at least a half dozen such provisions which would make it impossible for corporations which had made the majority of their income out of war contracts to take advantage of relief provisions which otherwise might wrongfully apply.

He pointed out also that in connection with the provisions that personal service corporations and partnerships should not be subject to the excess profits tax because of the heavy taxes imposed upon the individual members by other income taxes, provisions had been made to prevent firms of any kind which had made their profits out of cost-plus contracts with the Government from escaping just excess and war profits taxes. Nine-tenths of the cost-plus contracts, he said, for the carrying out of which the Government had supplied most or all of the capital involved, would otherwise have reaped huge returns.

These concessions by the Senate conferees as well as another which made the President, Federal Justices, and other Federal officeholders pay taxes, he said, helped to bring about a compromise on other matters. The Congressmen applauded when the tax on Federal employes was announced.

Mr. Kitchin said that the bill as it came from conference included the tax policy of the House. He said the three points of greatest difficulty had been:

1. The estate tax.
2. The taxes on insurance.
3. The capital stock corporation tax.

The House theories, he said, had prevailed. In the matter of estates the tax rates had been reduced, but he felt this was in a measure justified by the cessation of hostilities. The Senate, he said, had proposed an inheritance tax which would have raised only $22,000,000. The compromise with the House estate tax system incorporated, even with the lower rates, would raise $110,000,000.

The Senate, he said, had very gracefully yielded in the matter of second class postal rates, thus assuring the retention of the present zone system and rates. The Senate Conferees, he said, also had yielded on the 100 per cent. tax on campaign contributions over $500. In fact, he said, "they wanted to yield, insisted upon yielding," and would not consider voting for any amendment which the House suggested. This assertion caused laughter.

Representative Fordney, who may or may not be Chairman of the next Ways and Means Committee when the Republicans come into power, was one of those who asserted that he was convinced extra revenues other than those in the proposed law would have to be provided for next year. The $4,000,000,000 tax levy anticipated by the proposed law for 1919 would not be sufficient, he held, to pay a fair share of the expenditures and prevent excessive indebtedness by bond sales.

Representative Rainey was one of the Democrats who predicted that tariff revision upward must come.

Representative J. Hampton Moore was perhaps the most bitter in his denunciation of the bill, but he announced at the same time that he would vote for it in order to secure higher taxes on corporations which it provided.

"It is a serious financial situation confronting the country, which cries out above all things else for economy and retrenchment. I shall not attempt to discuss the details of the bill. To wander through its pages is suggestive of a journey through the Chamber of Financial Horrors. It is a lawyer's bill, an expert's bill, from start to finish."

30,000 MILLIONAIRES.

22,000 of Them Have Been Created by the War, Says Rainey.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—Representative Rainey, during the debate on the War Revenue bill in the House today, stated that it was "safe to say that there are 30,000 millionaires in the United States today, of which number at least 22,000 were created by the world war."

"I believe," he said, "that there should be but three forms of taxation in the future, the estate tax, the tax on incomes, and the excise tax, as applied to tobacco. Taxation could then be distributed justly."

Mr. Rainey said that he believed in a heavy estate tax in the future, especially on large estates. He stated that if Congress did not provide for such a tax at the time of the death of the owners of vast estates it would "have mobs demanding it" while they lived.

SIX HURT IN CRASH OF WOODEN CARS

CARS TORN AND SPLINTERED

Fact That Train Carried Few Passengers Saves Accident from Being a Disaster.

SERVICE BOARD INQUIRY

Statistics Show Recent Increase in Number of Transit Line Casualties.

In the second serious accident within ten days on the Third Avenue Elevated Railroad of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, six persons were hurt yesterday morning at 8:15 o'clock at 120th Street and Third Avenue when a northbound seven passenger local train of wooden cars ran into an empty train, made up of composite cars, standing idle on the tracks.

The local train was going with enough speed when the collision took place to break the first wooden car of the local train to pieces, ripping apart the two sides, the top and floor of the car, forming a shell which inclosed about 10 feet of the rear of the last composite car. The force of the collision lifted the forward end of the second car of the local train off the tracks and lodged it on the roof of the first car.

Only the fact that few persons travel north at that hour and that the local train carried few passengers saved the smashup from ranking high among the series of bad transit accidents which have occurred within the last few months.

Joseph Murphy of 742 Cauldwell Avenue, the Bronx, motorman of the local train, said his brakes had been working badly all the way up town, but that he had been able to make stops at the stations. He said that when he saw the empty train on the tracks ahead he threw on the emergency brakes, but that they failed to work at all.

The Public Service Commission began an investigation at once, but announced later that the cause had not been definitely discovered. The investigation is being made to discover whether the brakes of the car were defective when it was taken out of the barn. Numerous reports have been made recently to the Public Service Commission from its inspectors that cars of the Interborough which have been withdrawn for repairs have been put back into service with their defects uncorrected, because of the alleged inability of the company to find men for its repair shops. An order was issued recently by the Public Service Commission that no cars taken out of service for repairs should be put into use again until they had been certified as in good condition by Service Board Inspectors.

Following is the list of injured in the accident:

- ANGLUS, LOUIS, 28 years old, a clerk of 1,422 Madison Avenue; lacerations of the hands and face.
- BERNARD, EDWARD, 42 years old, a cloak operator of 116 First Street; lacerations of the head and face.
- BUCKLEY, THEODORE, 59 years old, a watchman of 3,801 White Plains Road; possible internal injuries.
- COHEN, LOUIS, 42 years old, an elevated train guard; possible fracture of the spine.
- CRAWLEY, MRS. LULU, 34 years old, of 175 Devoe Street, Brooklyn; shock and lacerations of face and scalp.
- POSPITOLIC, RAFFAELLO, 67 years old, of 320 East 115th Street; possible fracture of the spine.

After the accident most of the passengers made their way out and walked along the tracks to the East 125th Street station, but the injured were carried by firemen down ladders from the elevated structure to the street and taken to Harlem Hospital. The Public Service Commission made the following statement:

"The facts as reported to the commission following a preliminary investigation by its inspectors were: A northbound empty train, composed of the composite cars formerly used in the subway, which was returning from an express trip downtown, lay on the tracks at 120th Street waiting, apparently, for a train preceding it to pull out of the 125th Street station. While standing at 120th Street the composite train was run into by a seven-car local train, which had followed it up from downtown. The last car of the composite train and the first car of the train which ran into it were badly telescoped and smashed. It was said that the injured persons were all in the first car of the local train. The cause of the collision has not yet been determined."

The previous serious accident on the Third Avenue Elevated occurred on the evening of Jan. 30, when in a rear-end collision at 175th Street one woman was killed and thirty persons injured. The worst accident in the history of passenger transportation in New York City occurred on Nov. 1 of last year, when a B. R. T. train jumped the track, as it entered the tunnel at Malbone Street, causing ninety-nine deaths.

Figures for the number of accidents on New York passenger lines have not been prepared this year, but it was said at the offices of the Public Service Commission that the number would probably be high, because of the policy of using imperfect equipment, the shortage of labor, increasing passenger traffic, and increasing congestion of vehicular traffic in the streets. The total number of persons killed in transit accidents on city lines in 1918 was 296.

The number of deaths in accidents on subway and elevated lines in 1918 was greater than in any year on record. The total of killed was 177. The largest in any preceding year since 1910 was eighty-three in 1914. Of the 177 deaths last year, ninety-nine were due to the Malbone Street accident. Aside from this there were seventy-eight deaths, seven more than in 1917 and eight more than in 1916. The number of persons killed in surface car accidents in 1918 showed a marked decrease, dropping from 157 in 1917 to 119 last year, accounted for in part by the decrease in surface line traffic.

It was pointed out at the offices of the Public Service Commission yesterday that, up to the time of the Malbone Street tunnel accident, passenger travel in New York City had been steadily growing safer. While there was no decline in the number of accidents and deaths from year to year since 1910, the number of accidents and casualties on all lines had remained about stationary, while passenger traffic had nearly doubled, mileage had nearly doubled and the rate of speed had been considerably increased.

This history of increasing safety to passengers was rudely shattered by the Malbone Street tunnel accident, and the growing number of smaller accidents and narrow escapes since that time are admitted by the Public Service Commission. An official table showing accidents of all kinds, whether to equipment or to human beings, of casualties of all kinds, and of deaths on the subway and elevated lines in the city follows:

Year.	Accidents.	Casualties.	Killed.
1913	12,435	11,009	71
1914	12,358	11,598	83
1915	11,610	11,336	74
1916	13,572	13,478	70
1917	13,372	15,092	71
1918	12,455	12,692	177

Year.	Accidents.	Casualties.	Killed.
1913	54,854	30,342	155
1914	54,128	29,416	134
1915	48,176	27,142	94
1916	51,535	28,585	116
1917	52,195	28,526	157
1918	41,086	21,643	119

The reporting of these accidents is made compulsory by law on the part of the railroad companies, penalties being imposed for any inaccuracies, so that there has been no change in the plan of making reports from year to year. The fact that the accidents and casualties had not increased with the increase of traffic and of mileage up to the time of the Malbone accident, is held by the Public Service Commission to be due to the increasing use of safety devices and safety methods. One cause of the decrease of minor accidents in 1918, for instance, is believed to be the employment of platform men to keep order at crowded stations during the rush hours.

The worst record for serious accidents on transit lines in any year preceding 1918 was in 1908, the first full year during which the Public Service Commission was in office. The toll of life that year was eighty-nine.

Seventeen passengers on a crowded west-bound Fourteenth Street car, who were standing on the rear platform, were thrown to the street yesterday morning when the centre bar supporting the rear platform gave way at Avenue A. Rachel Kishwisky, 30 years old, of 2 Avenue D, suffered from glass cuts on the hands and face, and Mollie Fandel, 20 years old, of 242 Second Street, sustained a possible fracture of the skull. Several others were slightly hurt.

CAPITAL UNDER NO CURB.

Glass Announces That Building Operations May Go Ahead.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—Carter Glass, Secretary of the Treasury, announced today that no valid reason existed as to "why sufficient credit should not be made available for useful building operations."

"The impression seems to exist," he said, "that policies initiated during the war by Secretary McAdoo and by the Federal Reserve Board for the conservation of credit are still fully effective and are responsible for inactivity in the building trades. The activities of the country have undergone a great change since the signing of the armistice, and many industries which were engaged in the production of war material and for which credits were essential are now directing their energies to other lines more nearly related to the normal activities of peace.

"Consequently many of the policies which were adopted to meet war needs are now out of date. My own impression is that inactivity in the building trades is directly traceable not to any insufficiency of credit, but to the continuance of abnormally high costs."

NEED MEN TO RAID ILLICIT STILLS HERE

Collector Edwards Says There Are Not Enough Revenue Men for New York.

EISNER CORROBORATES HIM

More Moonshining, He Declares, in City and on Long Island Than in Southern Mountains.

William H. Edwards, Collector of Internal Revenue for the Second New York District, and Mark Eisner, Collector of the Third District, issued statements yesterday regarding the Federal prohibition amendment. Mr. Edwards said:

"Now that prohibition is about to become a law, Government officials are principally concerned with its enforcement.

"Resourceful persons, I am told, are planning to have their liquor despite all the laws and law officers. This office was told the other day of a plan of several wealthy men to incorporate and establish a club on one of the nearby islands within a day's sail of New York, where they might go for week-end trips to satisfy their yearning for the flowing bowl. There has been talk of anchoring several craft outside the three-mile limit where all kinds of drinks might be had.

"Apparently there has been little secret made of the fact that the rich man and the man of moderate means who feels that he must have his liquor has laid in a stock for some years to come. Of course, there is no guarantee that this liquor will escape the scrutiny of the Government, for, no doubt, in the enforcement of the law, Government agents will be given the right to search dwellings for liquor. That will probably be one of the most drastic provisions, and may be one of the hardest and most expressive to carry out.

"While the loss in revenue to the United States will be tremendous—nearly half a billion having been collected in the country last year—it has been plain that for many years liquor has been declining in importance as a source of revenue. New sources have been tapped. Of the total internal revenue collections in 1914 the individual and corporation income taxes constituted less than sixteen per cent. In 1918 they constituted more than eighty per cent. Straight income taxes collected in 1914 were less than sixty-one million dollars; in 1918 the collections were almost $3,000,000,000. Alcoholic beverages in 1914 yielded about 70 per cent. of the total tax. For 1918 collections from this source were not much more than twelve per cent. of the total levy.

"Raids on illicit stills in New York City are becoming more frequent every day. This office has been informed, in anonymous communications, of several places where beer is being made in homes. With the limited men at our command it is well-nigh impossible to cover every section in the metropolitan area. Of course, we can make an effort to minimize the making of beer, wines and liquors, but one of the leading revenue investigators told me the other day that there aren't enough revenue officers in the United States to completely stop the manufacture of liquor in New York City homes."

"The effect of prohibition," said Mr. Eisner, "so far as New York City is concerned, is not confined alone to the loss in revenue. This loss will amount to about $45,000,000 annually, but the enactment of prohibition does not mean that we will be able to reduce the revenue forces. In fact it looks now as though we will have to increase them. I think I can say without fear of successful contradition that there is more moonshining now being carried on in Greater New York and Long Island than there is in the mountains of Kentucky, Tennessee, and Virginia.

"The burden of enforcing the prohibition law will devolve largely upon the Internal Revenue Department. We have found in those States which have had State laws that the United States officials have been the most effective agency in coping with the situation. In Maine, for example, two years ago, three officers, working under the direction of Colonel L. G. Nutt, then the revenue agent in charge of New York, raided and closed in ten days' time more than 100 places."

GIVES PRIZES OPEN TO ALL.

Columbia Announces Number Available This Year.

Columbia University has just issued to the public a bulletin containing information of prizes, which have been established in the university. Competition for these prizes are open to the general public both here and abroad as well as the alumni of Columbia.

Perhaps the most well known of the prizes is the Barnard Medal for meritorious services, which is given every five years. It is bestowed on the person who has distinguished himself most in the cause of science, physical or astronomical, or who has made the most novel application of science to purposes beneficial to the race. Among those who have received the Barnard Medal in the past are Lord Raleigh, Professor William Ramsay, Professor William Conrad Roentgen, Professor Henri Becquerel, Professor Ernest Rutherford, Professor William Henry Bragg, and Professor Lawrence Bragg.

The Nicholas Murray Butler Medal is also given quinquennially. It is given for the most distinguished contribution to philosophy or educational theory, practice, or administration. The Loubat prizes of $1,000 and $400 in cash, respectively, are given every five years for the best work printed and published in the English language on history, geography, archaeology, ethnology, philology, or numismatics of North America.

A prize known as the Cartwright Prize, amounting to $500, is bestowed biennially to the person who submits the best medical essay on any subject, provided the essay is deemed sufficiently meritorious. The Cartwright prize will be given in June of the present year. A similar prize, known as the Alumni Association Prize is given in alternate years with the Cartwright prize. The Grant Squire Prize of $1,000, given every five years, is open only to graduates of Columbia. It is given for original investigation of a socialogical character.

Other prizes are the Stevens Triennial Prize of $200 for the best medical essay, including the research by the writer on the subject chosen; the Joseph Mather Smith Prize of $100 for the best medical essay on a subject to be chosen by a committee, and the Pulitzer Prizes in Journalism and Letters given annually.

OUR NAVAL PROJECT PUZZLES BRITAIN

Cannot Account for Wilson's Support of Great Building Program at This Time.

IDEA OF THREAT REJECTED

Spectator Believes President Has World Policing in View—Freedom of the Seas.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 8.—The Spectator in an article on America and seapower says it would be affectation to deny that the new American naval program has caused much surprise and not a little concern in this country.

"The British public," it says, "had just begun to assume that, with the disappearance of the German war flag from the sea, there would be a general slackening of naval construction here and elsewhere. It is puzzled to find that President Wilson, the chief promoter of the League of Nations and protagonist of freedom of the seas in some form or other, should have selected this moment to press upon Congress a naval program which even our Admiralty at the height of of its enforced rivalry with Germany would have thought very large indeed. * * *

"It seems to us that there are two alternative solutions of the riddle. President Wilson's naval program may be a political move. It may be that he is intending to press for general disarmament and to enforce his argument by pointing to the mighty fleet that rich America could build if she chose within the next ten years. If Congress sanctioned his program, he might tell the naval powers, and especially Great Britain, that America would henceforth take part in competition in warship building unless they agreed that competition should cease. That would be a strong card to play, though we are not quite sure it would be a winning card if national susceptibilities were stirred. It is more probable, however, that President Wilson desires America to become stronger at sea so she may take her full share in the work of policing the world.

* * *

"The Powers which intend to make the League of Nations a success must pay close attention to their navies and maintain them at a high pitch of perfection. It is obvious that the two Powers upon which the main naval responsibility will rest are Great Britain and America. We shall, of course, do our part, as we have always done, and we must not be surprised, but may on the contrary be somewhat relieved to find that America is taking her share of the task very seriously. * * *

Friendly Relations with America.

"Our primary object, we must never forget, is to maintain and strengthen our friendly relations with America. So long as the English-speaking peoples can co-operate together in guaranteeing the peace settlement which is now being devised at Paris the world will be safe for democracy. If, however, Great Britain and America were to drift apart again through misunderstanding and controversies on non-essentials, the peace of the world would be in jeopardy.

"It is of the first importance, therefore, that we should take a calm view of this naval question and remember that the enemy, whose propagandists are still active, is watching anxiously for any means of setting the two English-speaking peoples by the ears. * * * If each nation takes a sympathetic view of the other's motives in building warships, Britain and America need not fear that their legitimate naval ambitions will ever clash. We shall compete most strenuously with America in trade and shipping, as we have done in the past, but it is to us unthinkable that we should ever be drawn into naval competition with America on the lines of that long and far from silent struggle which we had with Germany in the twenty years up to 1914, which competition would undo all the good that has come out of this evil war and shatter the dreams of a happier world which are woven around the project of a League of Nations.

"We can conceive of a harmonious understanding between Britain and America in the matter of sea power and allocation of the work of policing the seas, but we simply cannot conceive of a mad British and American rivalry in battleship building for the barren honor of having the greatest navy in a world which is said to be ready for a League of Nations. We must reject such an idea with contempt."

Freedom of the Seas.

Commenting on the American definition of freedom of the seas as given by THE NEW YORK TIMES Paris correspondent, The Spectator says:

"It is best to say at once that such a code of sea law, if it be correctely attributed to the American delegates, would not be acceptable to this country. Had it been in force in 1914 we should probably be fighting still. We had, for example, to abandon the old definitions of contraband in order to make our blockade effective; we had to modify old sea rules in order to meet a new enemy in the submarine."

"A treaties ban on submarines may be practicable. We do not want and have never tried to control the seas, but our existence as an empire is dependent on our sea power, and we cannot and dare not agree to subject our navy to legal restrictions which may hamper its action in case of war with a strong and resourceful enemy like Germany. Every one knows that if the House of Lords had not rejected the Declaration of London our blockade at the outset would have been a farce."

13,000 MORE MEN SAIL.

Battleship and Seven Transports Are Bringing Troops Home.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—Departure from France of more than 13,000 officers and enlisted men of the American Expeditionary Forces, including the 42d, 62d, and 63d Coast Artillery Regiments, was announced today by the War Department.

The troops are coming on the battleship Kansas and the transports Harrisburg, Louisville, Kroonland, Polar Bear, Malden, Pocahontas, and Caserta. All are due to reach American ports between Feb. 15 and 18.

The Kansas is expected to arrive at Newport News Feb. 16, with the headquarters, medical detachment, and Companies A, B, C, and D of the 116th Ammunition Train, and the 116th Engineers complete, all bound for Camp Dix.

The Harrisburg, due to arrive at New York Feb. 15, has on board the field and staff, headquarters and supply company, medical detachment, and Companies A to G, inclusive, of the 368th Infantry. All of these go to Camp Meade. Also on board are 33 casual officers and about 50 sick and wounded.

The Louisville is due at New York Feb. 16 with the field and staff, supply company, medical detachment, Batteries A, B, C, and D of the 351st Field Artillery, for Camp Meade; headquarters 167th Field Artillery Brigade, detachment of Company G, 368th Infantry, and convalescent detachments Nos. 9, 10, and 12. Also on this ship are about 300 naval men and 13 sailors' wives.

The transport Kroonland is due at New York Feb. 17 with the 42d Regiment Coast Artillery complete, casual companies of Pennsylvania, New York, and Massachusetts men, 1,102d Aero Replacement Squadron, photographic sections Nos. 19, 20, 21, 22, 24, and 26, headquarters 38th Coast Artillery Brigade, convalescent detachments 31, 32, and 45 to 49, inclusive, and 16 casual officers.

The Polar Bear and Malden are to arrive at Baltimore Feb. 18 and New York Feb. 17, respectively, with a few casual officers each.

The Pocahontas is due at New York Feb. 18 with the 62d Regiment, Coast Artillery, complete; the headquarters of the 33d Artillery Brigade, convalescent detachments Nos. 69 and 70, casual companies of Illinois troops, Ohio, Wisconsin, and regulary army, one Quartermaster casual company of Virginia men, the medical detachment of Battery E, and the ordnance detachment of the 61st Regiment Coast Artillery.

The Caserta is scheduled to arrive at New York about Feb. 18 with practically all of the 63d Regiment Coast Artillery and 65 casual officers.

The War Department also announced that these organizations had been assigned to early convoy home: The 16th, 28th, and 266th Aero Squadrons, Signal Corps casual company, base hospitals Nos. 7 and 43 of the 69th Balloon Company, and Bakery Company No. 328.

NEWPORT NEWS, Feb. 8.—The battleship Vermont arrived today after a rough voyage from France with 1,000 soldiers from the 483d and 489th Aero Construction Squadrons, and four casual companies, comprising men from New York, Pennsylvania, Kansas, and New Jersey.

THREE TRAINMEN DIE IN FREIGHT WRECK

MAN SAFE UNDER WRECKAGE

Fireman, Thrown Between Engine and Stone Wall, Escapes Practically Unhurt.

Three trainmen were killed last night when a Lehigh Valley freight train passing over the West Shore tracks in Jersey City jumped the tracks and plunged into a stone wall surrounding the Jersey City Cemetery. This happened about 6:30 o'clock at a point near Newark Avenue and Seventh Street, where the Junction Line of the West Shore passes under the freight tracks of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

The accident is said to have been due either to a defective "frog" or a badly fastened switch. A string of twenty-one cars, many of them containing coal, was proceeding at an ordinary rate of speed when suddenly the engine swerved, ran across several other tracks, and crashed into the stone wall. It struck the wall obliquely, hammered along a few feet, and then overturned. The momentum of the cars behind was so great that the next car to the engine overran the latter and fell on its side on top of it. The next car climbed the pile of wreckage and collapsed on top of it. In this way eight cars piled up before the train came to a stop. The pile of débris was as high as a footbridge that crosses the tracks near where the accident happened. The dead are:

A few minutes after the wreck the broken cars were on fire. The Fire Department ran lines in preparation for fighting the fire by water. They were warned, however, by railroad men that the use of water might cause the boiler of the buried engine to explode. Accordingly the firemen dropped their hose and with axes and levers attacked the pile of wreckage.

While they worked the figure of a man was seen trying to crawl between the wall of the cemetery and the wheel of one of the piled up cars. The firemen went to that point and extricated Edward Paulson, the fireman, of Avenue B, Bayonne. He had been thrown from his seat when the engine struck and knocked through the door of the engine cab and dropped between the engine and stone wall and covered by the wreckage of the next car behind. As each successive car struck and was smashed the wreckage covered him deeper but left him practically unhurt.

The only other member of the train crew was Edward Duffy, a brakeman. Just before the accident he had left Hart on one of the forward cars and gone back almost the entire length of the train to look after a coal car. He was unhurt.

While the firemen were getting the fire out, others worked with frantic haste to rescue the bodies of those who were killed. The progress of this work was further delayed because one of the derailed freight cars had struck the station where the engines take on water and broken the pipe. The firemen had to contend with this flood and keep it from the hot boilers of the engine while the Water Department was turning off the water supply that watering station.

Home of Evangeline to be a Park.

MONTREAL, Que., Feb. 8.—The home of Evangeline at Grand-Pré, N. S., immortalized by Longefellow's poem of that name, has been bought by the Canadian Pacific Railway and will be maintained as a public park. A statue of Evangeline, which was being sculptured by Louis Philippe Hebert at the time of his death, will be completed by his son and placed in the park.

Sees Women's Ability Unused, While Man Out of Touch with America Is Appointed.

A testimonial dinner to Mrs. Norman De R. Whitehouse, the suffrage leader, in recognition of her work in spreading American propaganda throughout Germany from the headquarters in Switzerland, was held last night in the grand ballroom of the Hotel Biltmore, under the auspices of the New York State Woman's Suffrage Association. Mrs. James Lees Laidlaw, President of the association, presided, and about 500 prominent women were present.

Before the regular speeches were begun, Marcel Knecht of the French Bureau of Information formally thanked Mrs. Whitehouse for her exceptionally successful work in minimizing and stamping out enemy propaganda in France. Mrs. Whitehouse, who went overseas by commission of the Committee on Public Information, started originally to go directly through France to Switzerland, where her mission lay, but upon her arrival in France she found need for her services there. She promptly went to work from headquarters in Paris, and, enlisting the aid of the Paris press, inaugurated a campaign that won the commendation of the leading French journalists.

The tribute by the French official was apparently an "unofficial" part of the program, for Mrs. Whitehouse, who, incidentally, wore the golden laurel wreath which was presented to her for the work in the last suffrage campaign, was plainly taken by surprise.

The first speaker was Mrs. Raymond Brown, whose topic was "Woman's Part in Overseas Hospital Work." Mrs. Brown began by telling how, at first, the fighting nations had regarded women as not needed in hospital work, that is outside of nursing. She developed her topic to the point where appreciation of women in hospital work other than simply as "Florence Nightingales" began to dawn on the struggling nations, and then told of how American women had risen to the emergency.

The many New York women who had given up this work in this city, as Mrs. Whitehouse had done, for another purpose, was referred to by Mrs. Brown, who declared that the sphere of women in back of the battle zones of France had steadily widened with the progress of the conflict. At the signing of the armistice, scarcely a war work of France, leaving hospitals out of the matter entirely, but had its quota of faithful women "doing their bit" just as well and as much as the husbands, brothers, and sweethearts at the front.

Mme. Breshkovsky, "Grandmother of the Russian Revolution," who joined in the tribute to Mrs. Whitehouse, was given a cordial welcome. The grand ballroom of the Biltmore last night held more decorations, according to one of the assistant managers, than it had ever had before. Flags of the Allies, silken ones for the most part, completely blotted out the high walls, while the American colors, with here and there "Welcome Home" cards, such as are used for returning army fighters, were suspended.

"And why not the 'Welcome Home' cards like the soldiers have?" said one of the guests. "Aren't we welcoming home a woman who fought, in her way, just as valiantly and just as tellingly as any soldier, or even as any Marine?"

In telling of her work in Switzerland for the Committee on Public Information Mrs. Whitehouse said that the articles sent to her by George Creel, the Chairman, for dissemination in the Swiss press were so fitted to the needs of the work that "some one in this country seemed gifted with infallible insight." She added that already she had proof "in black and white" of the success of the work carried on in that country.

Mrs. Whitehouse said that when she started on her mission she had been advised that most of her work ought to be carried on with as much secrecy as possible, and she added that one of the paradoxes in this advice was that the same persons told her that, no matter how quietly she tried to work, Germany would have knowledge of her plans because of the efficiency of the German spy system. She said she could see no reason for secrecy because her mission as she interpreted it was to tell the neutral nation openly and frankly that the Allies and the United States were supporting a just and righteous cause.

She recounted the work done by other women in Europe, including those who represented foreign nations in work similar to that done by her, and asserted that she believed women were as fully able as men to carry on similar work for the Government. In commenting upon the unused ability among the women of this country Mrs. Whitehouse criticised the selection of Professor George Davis Herron to represent the American Government at the Marmora meeting with the representatives of the Russian factions, but without mentioning the name of Professor Herron. She contended that he had lived abroad so many years that he was out of touch with America and that he had been guilty of many indiscretions. One of these, she said, was his alleged promulgation of a doctrine of "free love."

Mrs. Whitehouse went abroad on her mission on Jan. 7, 1918, and upon her arrival in Berne at once took up her official title of Chief Propaganda Agent of the United States Government in Switzerland. In the mountain republic she faced the hardest task of any given to agents of the Committee on Public Information, for Switzerland early in the war became the fountain head of both German and Austrian propaganda.

BERNE CONFEREES VOTE FOR ALSACE PLEBISCITE

French Socialists Concur with the German Delegates in Approving the Recommendation.

BERNE, Feb. 7.—The French and German delegates to the International Socialist Conference concurred yesterday in approving a plebiscite for Alsace-Lorraine to decide whether the inhabitants desired to be under French or German rule. M. Mistral, a French delegate, said that the French Socialists had always favored a plebiscite.

M. Grumbach, a delegate from Alsace, said that a plebiscite would enable the inhabitants to give "the right answer to Germany."

A resolution offered by M. Locker, a delegate from Palestine, urged that Jews everywhere receive equal rights with other peoples as reparation for the secular injustice they had suffered in most countries.

The International Trade Union Conference last night adopted a motion insisting on the prompt and definite reestablishment of the international trade union body and calling for the summoning of a new international trade union conference not later than next May. The resolution was adopted by a majority of twenty-three votes, nearly all the delegates to the conference voting.

Before this question was taken up one of the German delegates, Herr Janson, raised the question of the German prisoners remaining in allied hands and of of the blockade of Germany. The speaker said that out of 1,000,000 prisoners 200,000 had been taken to the devastated regions in Northern France for reconstruction work. He understood, he said, the difficult position of the French and British delegates, but he wished to give them an opportunity to make a statement on the subject, as the news had aroused bitter feeling in Germany. He said he felt that the forced labor of prisoners was a form of punishment which ought to be protested against.

The British and French delegates said they were ready to make the statement asked for, but could not as yet set a time for making it.

SOCIALIST AIMS AT BERNE

As Seen by James Oneal, Who Is Going to Represent America.

James Oneal, one of the Socialist delegates who will sail shortly for Europe to take part in the International Socialist and Labor Conference at Berne, summarized yesterday the chief aims of the conference, the desires of the American delegates and the attitude of the Socialists toward the League of Nations.

"Our general position toward the League of Nations as defined by the diplomats is frankly skeptical," he said. "Whatever the good intentions of some of its supporters may be, I am convinced that it would only resolve itself, on its present basis, into a business man's league to protect investments and concessions in the backward parts of the world.

"The ascendency of the five leading Powers shows that the league is following the development that powerful combines of capital in this country have taken. That is, as industry in each nation tends to come under the dominance of leading groups of capital, so in the world the leading Powers tend to combine for common purposes.

"The diplomats representing the financial and trading interests of their respective countries will eventually dominate the policies of the league. The system of mandatories practically agreed upon means the division of the backward regions of the world into spheres for investors and traders.

"The Socialists regard a League of Peoples in which the masses rather than the Governments are represented, as the ideal to be striven for. This ideal cannot be completely realized until the nations themselves become representative of the democratic aspirations of the masses.

"The status of Russia will be one of the most important questions facing the congress, and the members of the Socialist Party, regardless of any varying opinions as to the Soviet Government, are practically unanimously in favor of the withdrawal of troops from that country and giving the Russian people an opportunity to settle their own problems.

"One of the most important problems before the congress will be the restoration of civil rights in all countries and the release of all political prisoners. Other questions almost of equal importance will be the demand for general disarmament of nations and the problem of a closer union between the labor unions and the Socialist parties in each country.

"I am confident that if the question of immigration comes up that the congress will oppose any restrictions on voluntary immigration, though at the same time opposing immigration stimulated with a view to breaking strikes or with a view to reducing the standards of living in any country. A general resolution may also be adopted regarding the shortening of the hours of labor."

As to the statement issued in Paris by Charles Edward Russell and William English Walling that the Berne Congress is a ruse fostered by the Germans to aid them in escaping the payment of indemnities, Mr. Oneal asserted that "Walling and Russell represent nobody except a few professional men who have lost the confidence of the masses of the Socialists in this country." He spoke of the refusal of Samuel Gompers to attend the congress as "not a matter of surprise," but something to have been expected, "in keeping with his general conservative views."

RED CROSS SHOP PROFITS.

Report Shows Earnings of $27,000 in Two Months.

According to a statement made public yesterday by Helen C. Frick, President of the Red Cross shop, at 587 Fifth Avenue, the sale of 1,100 women's dresses, ranging in price from $65 to $3, is represented in the profits of $27,000 earned by this establishment from Dec. 9 to Jan. 31.

An even more striking range of prices was reported in the sale of men's wearing apparel, where the highest priced suits sold for $40, and the lowest at 3 cents.

The best showing made by the department was reported from Pandora's box, which was under the special direction of Mrs. Henry Clay Frick, whose ledger showed sales of jewelry amounting to $8,150.

The sales in other departments were reported as follows: Women's apparel, $3,000; bargain division, $1,500; children's wear, $1,154; tea room, $1,500; a total of $11,000.

The articles sold were donated to the shop.

MRS. HEARST ASKS RELEASE

Suggests New Committee to Mayor, Who Asks Her to Head It.

Mrs. William Randolph Hearst in a letter to Mayor Hylan yesterday asked that the Mayor's Committee of Women on National Defense, of which she is Chairman, be dissolved, as she considered its work was finished with the virtual termination of the war. She submitted a report showing what the committee had accomplished since its organization, and said that the report of the Treasurer, covering the financial transactions of the committee, is now in course of preparation.

She suggested that a Division of Employment would "prove of inestimable value in finding places for women who have been engaged in temporary war work and those who will vacate positions formerly held by men who entered the war service."

In reply the Mayor asked Mrs. Hearst to continue to serve with any one she cared to select as her associates on a committee which he stated, "might have for its object the continuation, until demobilization is completed, of your canteen work and a bureau for the employment of women who may be relieved from their present occupations by reason of the return of soldiers whose positions they may be occupying. Your committee might also look into the question of relief to women generally. There are also many important problems which will come up during the period of reconstruction that your committee might assist the city in solving."

The Mayor designated the new committee as "The Mayor's Committee of Women on Reconstruction and Relief," and asked Mrs. Hearst to become its chairman.

Poles Express Thanks to Wilson.

4 OF FAMILY DIE IN 8 DAYS.

Two More of John Twomey's Children Severely Ill.

Within eight days four members of the family of John Twomey have died of influenza and two other members are seriously ill at their home, 438 East 188th Street, and are not expected to live.

The first victim was Francis Twomey, 18 years old, who died on Jan. 29. On Saturday of that week Mrs. Twomey died, and was followed on Monday by Joseph Twomey, the second son, recently discharged from the army. Last Thursday the father, 58 years old, Treasurer of the Chaplain Duffy Club of the Church of Our Saviour, 183d Street and Washington Avenue, died of influenza, although physicians say grief over the death of other members of his family hastened the end.

Another son and a daughter have since been stricken and will be unable to attend the funeral of the father tomorrow.

WANTS ACTION NOW ON RAILROAD POLICY

Director General Hines Says Uncertainty Holds Up Improvements.

SEES EXTENSION INEVITABLE

Declares Return to Private Owners Would Make Present Plans Impossible.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—If the railroads are turned back to private ownership, the Government cannot undertake improvements of the roads contemplated by the Railroad Administration, and incidentally stabilize labor conditions, Director General Walker D. Hines told a group of Chicago Aldermen today. The Aldermen, who were introduced by Senator James H. Lewis, came here to urge the importance of carrying on railroad improvements in their city.

The Director General said that if Congress decided to create legislation and then turn back the railroads, a great situation of uncertainty would be brought about and that the Government would not be in a position to finance railroad improvements extensively.

"I have been very much impressed with the highly important problem you presented," said Mr. Hines to the Chicago men. "I don't think there is anything in this country of greater importance at this time than to resume the improvement work which was necessarily held up by the war. Not only do the public need the improvements, but it is of the highest importance to give labor the employment right now.

"The Railroad Administration will do everything in its power to co-operate in promoting that policy. It not only has an interest in the general welfare to furnish this employment for labor and to see that the public gets the benefit of the improvements, but it has the selfish interest that it wants to see business stimulated so that there will be more business for the railroads to carry. Its interest is the same as yours in trying to get a resumption of work of this character.

"When it comes to what the Railroad Administration can do, it is confronted with uncertainty. There is a very insistent demand on the part of many railroad representatives and business representatives that Congress ought at once to adopt some legislation about the railroads and turn them back as promptly as possible to private control, and that there ought not to be any extension of the Federal control. If it turns out that that policy is adopted, the situation will be that anything the Railroad Administration plans now for the Government could not be carried out, because if these demands are realized there will be a change of management before the plans could be carried out. That creates a situation of uncertainty that is a tremendous obstacle to the Railroad Administration at once doing anything comprehensive on its own responsibility. What we can do, and will do even in the face of that uncertain situation, is to use whatever moral suasion we have to get the railroad corporations to consent to going ahead with these improvements and to financing the improvements, and whatever they can finance it will be welcome and we will be glad to go ahead with the work, but in the face of this uncertainty, with the claim made that the railroads ought to be turned back very shortly to private control, with remedial legislation promptly adopted, the Government isn't in a position to enter upon an extensive program of financing itself.

Sees Solution Improbable.

"There is another side to this matter. I have given a great deal of study to the general question of probable legislative solution of the railroad problem and I feel very well convinced that it is not going to be possible in the immediate future for Congress to work out a permanent solution, and for that solution to be actually worked out and put into effect. I think there are so many difficulties in the way that only time will make it possible to work out the permanent solution and put it into effect. Therefore I have urged on the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce the importance of giving a definite extension to the Federal control, because I believe the chances are nine out of ten that later on they will find they will have to give the extension anyhow, because without it there won't be time to work out and put into effect a permanent solution, and if they will have to give the extension eventually there is an immense public value in giving it at once so as to substitute certainty for uncertainty.

"If an extension were given now so that we could count with reasonable confidence on carrying out a governmental policy in this matter for a substantial period in excess merely of this twenty-one months period, the Government would then be in position to take the initiative in these improvement matters. I have said to the Senate committee that I don't know any way whereby the Government can so readily take action towards stabilizing the industrial situation as it can by giving a definite extension right now so that the Railroad Administration can take the initiative in confident way in these matters. I believe that later on the extension will have to be given, because the solution can't be successfully worked out in the time proposed, and if they don't give it now we will be in a situation where we will have experienced all the disadvantages of not having an extension and all the uncertainty of being unable to go ahead with these important improvements, and later on, after having suffered all that disadvantage, the extension will have to be made anyhow.

Urges Prompt Extension.

"The logic of that situation has been very conclusive and convincing to me, and what you gentlemen have presented to me about the Chicago situation is a most striking illustration of the importance of getting action in this Congress which will give us something definite to go on, and which will be an immense influence in stabilizing this industrial situation and stimulating it, which is what it needs. Even without that, however, I want to do everything I reasonably can to work out the best possible results no matter how this question of extension is solved; but I am thoroughly convinced that the granting promptly of an extension will be of the greatest benefit, and if it is not done now we will have all the public disadvantage and uncertainty, and there will be the extension anyhow.

"In order to begin at once a study of it which will serve on the one hand as useful in our trying to get the co-operation of the corporations, and on the other hand as a basis for our own more self-confident action if we get the extension, I shall be very glad, if you think it would be helpful, to put you in touch with Mr. Powell, Director of the Division of Capital Expenditures, or shall be glad to ask Mr. Aishton to take the matter up with you. I want to get all the results I can even under the present uncertainties, and to pave the way to the most effective action if we get an extension that puts us in position to take care of these matters."

BAKER SPEAKS FOR LEAGUE.

Also Praises Ex-President Taft's Work for the Movement.

BOSTON, Feb. 8.—Secretary of War Baker, in an address at a State caucus of the New England Congress for a League of Free Nations today, was introduced as the representative of President Wilson. He strongly indorsed the League of Nations movement, asserting that the great war would be one of the most futile episodes in history unless a definite program were laid down to rearrange international relations.

He praised former President Taft's "superb leadership" of the movement, which he spoke of as a fire in stubble, that, started in New England, would sweep across the country.

"When Austria put out her peace feeler," said Secretary Baker, "a nurse in a hospital at Toul brought a newspaper containing an account of it to a severely wounded California soldier and asked him his opinion.

"'I tell you,' replied the doughboy, 'I live at least 6,000 miles from here and can't be running across here every ten years or so to adjust these troubles. Let's straighten it out now and make an everlasting adjustment of it.'

"And," continued Mr. Baker, "that soldier expressed the unanimous sentiment of the people of the United States. We went into the war not from selfish motives, but in response to the cry of humanity.

"I know what war costs in money, in life, and in suffering. I cherish no illusions about the glory of war or the romance of the battlefield. Our people sent their sons there only to preserve freedom. The war ended before I thought it would, and it ended in a military victory. There was no chance for the German Army, and had the fighting continued it would have been crushed, largely because of the weight of man power and resources that America was throwing into the struggle.

ARMY MISSING LIST IS BEING CUT DAILY

First Report of 10,000 Unaccounted For Reduced to 7,783, Pershing Cables.

NEW CASUALTY TOTALS

Losses of Second Division, Including Marines, Exceed First's—March Tells Demobilization Progress.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—Last week's casualty report, showing more than 10,000 men of the American Expeditionary Forces missing in action, has been corrected to make the total 7,783. General March said today that General Pershing had reported the new total, with the information that the figures were being reduced by from 100 to 200 names per day, as a result of the checking of records in the central records office in France.

At the same time General Pershing gave the War Department new totals of casualties in the 1st and 2d Divisions, the Marine Brigade in the latter being included. The 1st Division had a total of killed, died of wounds, missing, and prisoners of 5,248; the 2d Division total was 5,200.

The new detailed casualty totals for these divisions were given as follows:

First Division.—Killed in action, 2,303; died of wounds, 1,050; missing in action, 1,789; prisoners, 106. Total, 5,248.

Second Division.—Killed in action, 2,716; died of wounds, 1,329; missing in action, 1,067; prisoners, 148. Total, 5,260.

For some time the general impression in army circles was that the losses of the 1st Division were the greater.

Demobilization on "Homestretch."

General March said today that demobilization in the United States now was on the "home stretch." Up to yesterday a total of 67,088 officers and 1,033,812 men had been discharged, while the total ordered for discharge had reached 1,442,000. The demobilization machinery is now at such a point of efficiency and operation, the Chief of Staff explained, that it is capable of handling more men than Pershing can possibly send, with available shipping. Of troops in the United States only the overhead detachments, which must be maintained for future demobilization of returning units, will be left.

Up to Jan. 31, 236,024 men had been returned from France. The department estimates that 160,000 will be returned in February. This is an increase of 46,000 over the January total, due largely to the transformation of cargo vessels into transports. General March said that fifty-one cargo ships had been ordered converted and that the first of these were now coming into service.

Plans for divisional parades in home cities have been upset by the irregular flow of troops homeward. General March said the units were returning in such scattered form that in a great majority of cases it now seemed improbable that divisional organizations could be held together long enough for large parades. The department is dealing with this question, however, as the divisions are ordered home.

The 27th (New York National Guard) Division will be paraded in New York City, and plans for parading the 42d (Rainbow) Division on its return in Washington, General March thought, would be carried out. Whenever opportunity offers for other division parades, advantage will be taken of it.

The greatest military camp in the world will be established at Brest when plans for extension of embarkation facilities have been completed. General March said Brest would be the backbone of the American demobilization system. It already has handled 51 per cent. of the soldiers sent back to the United States up to date. Its capacity for 50,000 men is to be doubled.

The War Department has not been advised that negotiations for German liners to carry home American troops have been concluded. No definite estimates as to the ships which will be obtained, the time they will be available, or their carrying capacity are now at hand.

An increasing number of officers are applying for commissions in the Army Reserve Corps and for commissions in the regular army. More than 13,000 officers have applied for reserve commissions, and 5,913 are seeking commissions in the permanent force.

Benefit for Lafayette House.

On Wednesday evening, the Lafayette House, a convalescent home for officers at 112 West Fifty-ninth Street, will give a benefit dance at the Hotel Plaza. The home is conducted in the name of the Red Cross, and is supported by a volunteer corps of workers and public donations.

COLORED TROOPS IN TODAY.

Part of Old 15th Infantry Should Reach Pier This Morning.

Eleventh Avenue and Seventeenth Street promises to be thronged early this morning with negroes from all parts of the city coming to greet the 4,500 colored troops due to arrive at Pier 57, North River, on the French liner France. Unless the France is delayed by the fog or snow storms outside the harbor she will reach the Ambrose Channel Lightship at 4 this morning, and arrive at her pier at about 9 o'clock.

There are a good many of the old 15th Infantry on board, commanded by Colonel William Hayward, formerly Public Service Commissioner.

In addition to the police boat Patrol, the colored troops on the French liner France will be welcomed by hundreds of their friends who have chartered the steamboat Correction which will follow the Patrol down the Bay.

The American transports Siboney and Mongolia sailed from Hoboken yesterday for Brest to bring back part of the 27th Division. The hospital ship Mercy left for the same port for sick and wounded. The Mongolia, which was commanded by Captain Arthur R. Mills, U. S. N. R., Commodore of the American Line, had seventy-five women canteen workers of the Y. M. C. A. on board and Major C. T. Hendler of the Judge Advocate's Department of the United States Army.

act," Senator Borah said; "have resulted in a complete censorship of the American press. In my opinion, if Congress should ever assume to usurp the power to establish a censorship, there could be no more effective and successful method adopted than that of giving the Postmaster General certain powers with reference to the exclusion of printed matter from the mails.

"When the Espionage act was first before Congress it provided specifically for a censorship of the press, a thing which seemed almost incredible to be proposed. It was stricken out after long debate, but these clauses which had the same effect remained in the bill. I said in the Senate at the time that if they remained in the bill it would mean just as complete a censorship as the clause which was intended to establish a censorship, and practice has demonstrated it.

"The way in which this resulted in censorship is this: If an article appears in a paper which the Postmaster General deems to be in violation of the Espionage law, attention is called to the fact by excluding the paper from the mails; and immediately the editor or the publisher of the paper seeks consultation with the Postmaster General and secures from him an elimination or a guidance as to what shall thereafter appear in the paper and not be in violation of the law. This is a complete system of licensing the press.

"I am not now discussing the question as to whether this or that particular paper should have been excluded. I simply call attention to the fact that this has resulted in doing what we as Congress have no power whatever to do. It not only resulted in establishing a censorship, but it has resulted in a very universal feeling that it would not apply with equal force and effect to all papers. You can gather any amount of testimony from newspaper men and publishers in the country that one paper published things which were in popular judgment equally reprehensible with what another paper published, while the former paper was permitted to go through the mails and the other was excluded. I mention this to illustrate the fact that the freedom of the press can never be restrained or circumscribed by any scheme or plan which the ingenuity of the human brain can frame which will be satisfactory to the great public, either in its impartiality or in its justice and equality.

"So there has been in this country since the day that Congress passed this act just as complete censorship as that censorship against which Hamilton inveighed and against which Charles James Fox and Erskine, the great minds of those days, battled so earnestly and finally so successfully. Now the war is over and the most serious questions which could possibly confront a people—domestic questions—are up for consideration.

There is a belief that this censorship still obtains. I do not know what the opinion of the Postmaster General is, but there is a universal belief throughout the country that it is still in existence and that the law may still be invoked. We might be willing to yield upon such matters in the exigency of war, but when peace has been restored and we are dealing with our domestic concerns there ought not to be any restraint upon the mind of the American people in any way."

Senator Nelson of Minnesota, opposing the amendment, said he thought there ought to be a more stringent regulation as to sedition. He spoke of the threatened "tide of Bolshevism" in this country.

"Unless steps are taken to check this tide, grave danger threatens our republic," said Senator Nelson. "Some radical speakers now going about the country would bring America to the level of Russia."

Senator Borah replied that he wanted, as well as any other Senator, to smother any wave of Bolshevism, but he felt that to maintain a press censorship was not the way to do it.

"If we would stamp out Bolshevism or any other disloyal element I would have it done through our courts in the usual way," said Mr. Borah. "What I am objecting to is making the Postmaster General the Judge and jury. I want the treasonableness of utterances decided, not in star chamber by one man, but in court."

"The Bolshevists are conducting a campaign to repeal this Espionage law," interpolated Senator Overman.

Senators Knox and Kellogg expressed fear that to repeal the Espionage law would open the way to treasonable and seditious mail matter. Senators Lodge and McCumber thought the Postmaster General's power had been greatly abused.

"I disagree with that," said Senator Borah. "It was simply the inevitable result of lodging such power in the hands of one man. I do not believe Mr. Burleson has knowingly or wittingly abused that authority. If he has, then we have lodged in the hands of one man power with which he deliberately seeks to ruin his fellow-citizens."

COSTIGAN DEMOTION APPROVED BY HYLAN

Mayor Tells Enright in Letter Not to Allow "Propaganda" to Deter Him.

FIGURES ON VICE ARRESTS

Records Do Not Bear Out Charges Against Demoted Inspector's Work.

Before leaving for Palm Beach, Fla., yesterday, Mayor Hylan wrote to Police Commissioner Enright approving the Commissioner's explanation for the demotion of "Honest Dan" Costigan from Inspector to Captain. The Mayor wrote:

Feb. 8, 1919.

Dear Commissioner—This is to acknowledge receipt of your letter of Feb. 7 with reference to your method of administering the affairs of the Police Department.

It was not necessary for you to write me. Your management of the Police Department has met with my approval, and I am sure with that of the honest people of this city.

Do not allow propaganda from any source to deter you from doing what you believe to be in the interest of the people of the City of New York.

Yours truly,
JOHN F. HYLAN, Mayor.

Modifies Statement About Arrests.

Commissioner Enright yesterday modified the statement he made in a letter to Mayor Hylan on Friday when he said that Inspector Costigan's men made only forty-one arrests for gambling while Costigan was in charge of the First Inspection District. The Police Commissioner said that the forty-one arrests included those made by Costigan's predecessor, Inspector Kelly. He did not say how many arrests were made by Kelly's men.

Friends of Costigan, who was reduced last Tuesday to the captaincy of the Beach Street Station, asserted that Costigan's records really show that from Jan. 1, 1918, to Oct. 22, 1918, when he was relieved of command of the Vice Squad, Costigan and his men made 296 arrests in the First Inspection District for gambling alone. They said that while Costigan was in charge of the First Inspection District and head of the Vice Squad he and his men made altogether 2,496 arrests. The time covered by these figures is from Jan. 1, 1918, to Feb. 4, 1919, when Costigan was reduced.

It was said that in the time that Costigan's Vice Squad made 296 arrests for gambling, Inspector McDonald's men, who for some reason were assigned to Costigan's district several times, made only twenty-eight arrests. While acting as head of the First Inspection District and Chief of the Vice Squad, it was pointed out that Costigan also found time to write 7,000 letters, in addition to special work he did for District Attorney Swann.

When Commissioner Enright learned of the figures obtained from other sources, which tended to refute those he gave out on Friday, he said the figures were wrong and that the records showed that the figures he cited to the Mayor were correct.

Declines to Order Records Shown.

The Commissioner was asked if the newspapers might have the official record of the number of arrests made by the special service men who he alleged in his letter to the Mayor made 31? arrests while Costigan was in charge of the First Inspection District.

"I don't see why not," he replied.

He was then asked to write an order so that reporters might obtain the records from the record clerk.

"I don't know whether I want to do that," he replied. He thought there were some things which the records would show that the public was not entitled to, matters in which only the police were interested. He had no objection to making the records public, but he did not want "a lot of newspaper men" going over them.

"I'll quote you all the statistics you want," he added.

Commissioner Enright became angry at the pointed questioning of some of the newspaper men. Turning to one of them, he asked: "What's your fee? Are you cross-examining me? You'd make a good lawyer." The reporter replied that he had no fee, whereupon the Commissioner retorted hotly:

"No, you just simply have gall, that's all."

"You should not object that as a public official you are questioned by newspaper men," the reporter interjected.

"An alleged newspaper man," snapped Enright.

Questioned concerning the report that the bills incurred by Costigan's men were held up in the department, Commissioner Enright said they did not come to him and he never disapproved them. He said he had given instructions to Deputy Police Commissioner Wallis to keep bills down. He found fault with the amount of money spent by Costigan and his men in obtaining evidence.

"Costigan spent $3,362 in 1918, and his bills were as high as $625 in November alone," he continued. "He spent $587 in September, while Inspector Kelly, his predecessor, spent $60 in January, 1918, and $98 in February, 1918."

"Doesn't that show that Costigan was doing more active work against gambling than Kelly?"

"It shows that he spent a lot of money. You've got the record of the number of arrests he made."

Asked whether the city did not get fair value for the money spent by Costigan, the Commissioner said he was not finding fault with the amount of money spent but that Costigan's record as to the number of arrests made for gambling was "very rotten." He read rapidly a list of figures showing the money spent for evidence by Costigan's men. Hasty notes taken by the inquirers showed the following figures: 1918, March, $235; April, $280; May, $205; June, $213; July, $366; August, $589; September, $587; October, $359; November, $625, and December, $411.

In view of his disparaging statements concerning Costigan's work the Commissioner was asked if he intended to prefer charges against the reduced official. He replied that he did not think so. Regarding the reported presence at Police Headquarters of Costigan, in uniform yesterday, Mr. Enright said he knew nothing about him or the rumor that he had been asked to report to Deputy Commissioner Leach.

"Isn't it true that in addition to his duties in commanding the First Inspection District and the Vice Squad, Costigan was called on by District Attorney Swann to do special work?" he was asked.

"Not that I know of."

"Did not Mr. Swann make application for Costigan's services?"

"I don't think so. In the early part of my administration Mr. Swann said he wanted Costigan, but he never made a formal application for him. That is, as far as I can recall."

Announcement of the resignation of Third Deputy Police Commissioner John W. Goff, Jr., was made yesterday. Augustus Drum Porter, heretofore a special deputy commissioner and secretary to Commissioner Enright, was named in Goff's place. The salary is $6,000. Commissioner Enright also announced that John C. Hackett, Secretary to the Police Department, had been appointed to the office formerly held by Porter. Hackett has received $3,600. The salary for his new position is $3,500.

Mr. Goff resigned in order to resume the practice of law, said Mr. Enright. Asked whether Chief Inspector Daly would soon resign, the Commissioner laughed and said he would have to resign if the reporters wanted him to. He also said he did not believe that Rodman Wanamaker intended to resign.

A minor transfer that caused surprise yesterday was that of Patrolman Michael Flynn, from duty in the corridor of Police Headquarters to the Arsenal station. He has been stationed at headquarters since being discharged from hospital after treatment for a broken leg sustained in the course of duty five years ago. Commissioner Enright's explanation for the transfer was that Flynn had been unable to keep the doors closed and that he worked too hard. Mr. Enright did not know whether Flynn would have to do patrol duty hereafter.

WHEAT GUARANTEE BILL INTRODUCED

Names Price of $2.26 for Crop of 1919 and Gives President Sweeping Authority.

CARRIES $1,000,000,000 FUND

Will Be Used to Buy Wheat at Stabilized Price and Sell at Market Quotations Here and Abroad.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—The Administration bill to provide a guaranteed price of $2.26 a bushel for wheat of the crop of 1919 was introduced in the House today by Chairman Lever of the Committee on Agriculture. It would give authority to the President to regulate and control the domestic market and exports of wheat and wheat products until the end of 1920, by which time, it is estimated, the wheat crop of 1919 will have been fully marketed.

The bill carries a revolving fund of $1,000,000,000, which the President is empowered to use to buy wheat offered at the rate of $2.26 a bushel. Authority is given for the Food Administration or any committee designated by the President to buy wheat at $2.26 a bushel and sell it here and abroad at the market price, which figure is fixed in the Liverpool market.

This proviso would permit the President, even though the Government pays the guaranteed price, to sell wheat at the price fixed by the law of supply and demand. It is estimated by experts that the revolving fund will not cover half of the Government losses, if the wheat price should drop to around a dollar a bushel. It is believed that consumers will demand that flour be sold very shortly at a price which will permit of 5-cent bread instead of 10 cents.

President Wilson cabled Chairman Lever requesting prompt action on the bill, upon which exhaustive hearings were held by the committee.

Explaining the effect of the measure, Mr. Lever said:

Grants Sweeping Powers.

"It confers on the President every power to enable him to make good the guarantee to purchasers, to protect the Government against undue enhancement of its liabilities, and at the same time protest against excessive prices and insure the trade against undue losses resulting from fluctuations in wheat prices. The bill includes power to buy and sell wheat and wheat flour and to control trading in wheat on exchanges, in elevators, and by dealers and others engaged in the commercial handling of wheat and wheat flour. It continues the existing authority of the Government to control imports and exports of these products. The life of the bill is limited to the duration of the emergency conditions growing out of the war, and all operations must cease not later than Dec. 31, 1920, so as to permit the normal laws of supply and demand to operate as soon as practicable."

Unlimited powers of license, in so far as they affect wheat and wheat products, are granted under the proposed legislation, both as regards Stock and Produce Exchanges and "any business of importation, exportation, manufacture, storage, or distribution of wheat or wheat flour," with the exception of farmers and farmers' co-operative associations. Authority is given to the President to terminate these powers at his discretion any time up to Dec. 31, 1920, when the provisions of the proposed act expire.

Section 4 of the proposed act, dealing with Boards of Trade, Produce Exchanges, &c., reads, in part:

"That whenever the President shall find that operations * * * under the rules of any Exchange * * * are likely to cause unjust market manipulation or unfair and misleading market quotations, or undue depression or fluctuation of the prices, of, or injurious speculation in, wheat or wheat flour, * * * calculated or likely to enhance unduly the liabilities of the United States under the said guarantees, he is authorized to * * * wholly or partly prohibit * * * transactions at, on, in, or under the rules of any Exchange, Board of Trade, or similar institution or place of business as he may find essential, in order to prevent, correct, or remove such evil pracaices."

Special Accounts and Returns.

Such regulations, under the terms of this section, may require special accounts and returns not only for boards of trade, exchanges, and similar institutions, but "the President may also require all persons acting in the capacity of a clearing house, clearing association, or similar institution or place of business, to keep such records and to make such returns as will fully and correctly disclose all facts in their possession relating to such transactions."

A fine of $10,000 or imprisonment for four years, or both, is provided for willful violation of this section.

Section 5, in part, provides that:

"Whenever the President shall find it essential to license any business of importation, exportation, manufacture, storage, or distribution of wheat or wheat flour products in order to carry into effect any of the purposes of this act, and shall publicly so announce, no person shall * * * engage in or carry on any such business specified in the announcement, unless he shall secure and hold a license issued pursuant to this section. * * * It shall be unlawful for any licensee to engage in any unfairly discriminatory or deceptive practice or device, or to make any unjust or unreasonable rate, commission or charge, or to exact an unreasonable profit or price, in handling or dealing in or with wheat or wheat flour."

Power is given to the President to determine what practices, commissions, or margins of profits fall under the above provision, and to order the discontinuance of same, and to "find what is a fair, just, or reasonable practice; devise rate, commission, charge, profit, or price, and in any proceeding brought in court such order of the President shall be prima facie evidence."

A fine of $5,000 or imprisonment for two years, or both, is provided for violation of this section.

Section 6, authorizing the President to declare discriminatory embargoes, reads in part:

"That whenever the President shall make proclamation thereof, it shall be unlawful to import into the United States from any country named in such proclamation, or to export from or ship from or take out of the United States to any country named in such proclamation, wheat or wheat flour, except at such time or times, and under such regulations or orders, and subject to such limitations and exceptions as the President shall prescribe."

Other sections re-enact necessary sections of the Food Regulation Act.

New Loans to Belgium and Italy.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—New credits of $75,000,000 for Italy and $40,000,000 for Belgium were established today by the Treasury. This raised the total credits for all the Allies to $8,674,824,000, including $1,385,000,000 for Italy and $296,145,000 for Belgium.

290,831 MEN IDLE THROUGHOUT NATION

Federal Employment Bureau Reports an Increase of 35,000 in a Week.

GROWING IN NEW ENGLAND

Cleveland Reports Surplus of 70,000 Workmen—Michigan Cities Also Have Many Idle.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—The seriousness of the unemployment situation is again emphasized in figures made public today by the United States Employment Service, based on official reports from its agents throughout the country on conditions of employment and unemployment.

Figures based on the last information available show a much heavier increase in the area of unemployment than that shown in the reports for the previous weeks. The reports for last week showed the total unemployment amounted to nearly 265,000. During the current week this number has increased to 290,831. The total labor shortages reported amount to only 8,000.

For the week ending Jan. 21, 44 per cent. of all the cities reporting show surpluses of labor. For the week ending Jan. 28 this percentage increased to 50 per cent. For the current week 57 per cent. of the cities reporting show heavy unemployment. The percentage of cities reporting shortages has dropped from 13 to 11 per cent., with practically all shortages decreasing numerically.

For the week ending Jan. 21, 43 per cent. of the reporting cities showed that labor supply about equaled the demand. For the week ending Jan. 28, this dropped to 38 per cent., and for the current week has again dropped to 32 per cent.

Growing Idleness in New England.

Conditions in Connecticut still show the same steady increase in unemployment. In New Haven there is a surplus of labor of 6,000. Bridgeport reports a surplus of 7,500, an increase of 500 over last week. Norwich, New London, Stamford, and Middletown all report surpluses. In Derby unemployment increased during the week from 600 to 950. Hartford, which has been reporting the supply about equal to the demand, now has a surplus of 1,500. Meriden, which has also been reporting supply equal to demand, now shows a surplus of 1,000.

In New York the Albany district reports a surplus of 5,500, which is an increase of 900 over last week. This district has been showing an increase of unemployment of from 500 to 1,000 each week. A considerable portion of this unemployment is due either to expiration or cancellation of Government contracts. Buffalo reports a surplus of 18,000, which is an increase of 1,000 over last week and an increase of 5,000 over the reports rendered two weeks ago. Syracuse and Utica report a surplus of 5,000 and 2,500 respectively. Unemployment in Rochester continues at 4,000.

New Jersey still reports the demand for labor about equal to the supply. Some communities report slight surpluses.

Pittsburgh, which reported a surplus of 5,000 of common labor last week, now reports a surplus of 9,100, with a shortage of about 2,500 miners. At Scranton there has been considerable change in the mining labor situation over last week. One company which reported a shortage of 4,100 mine workers about two weeks ago has closed one of its collieries laying off 800 men. Another company, which reported a shortage of 800 men a short time ago, now says that it does not necessarily need any men. The same situation applies to many other companies.

In Philadelphia the supply about equals the demand for labor. About a month ago Philadelphia reported a shortage of 6,000. Harrisburg reports a surplus of common labor, wtih the prospect of the condition becoming very much worse by the laying off of large numbers of men by several of the big industries. In South Bethlehem the supply about equals the demand, with one of the large steel companies expecting to lay off about 400 men. Erie reports a surplus of 3,000, which is an increase of 200 over last week. Three weeks ago Erie reported a surplus of 251. There is considerable surplus of clerical help throughout the State.

Big Increases in Ohio.

In Ohio, Cleveland reports this week a surplus of 70,000, which is an increase of 5,000 over last week. Akron reports a surplus of 2,000, an increase of 500. Four weeks ago Akron reported a shortage of 1,000. Dayton reports a surplus of 11,000, which is an increase of 3,000 over last week. Toledo reports a surplus of 9,000, Youngstown 4,600, and Cincinnati 2,200. The heaviest surplus in the State is in common labor, and 30,000 are unemployed in the building trades, 20,000 in skilled labor, 10,000 electrical workers, and 5,000 lake seamen.

Detroit, Mich., reports 35,000 unemployed, which is an increase of 2,000 over last week. Grand Rapids reports a surplus of 2,500, which is an increse of 500 over last week. Unemployment throughout Michigan is increasing. Minneapolis, Minn., reports a surplus of 5,000, the same as last week. Duluth and St. Paul report the supply about equal to the demand. There is a heavy surplus of clerical workers throughout the State, but there seem to be opportunities for high-grade tool makers and die sinkers. Milwaukee, which last week reported a surplus of 10,000, now reports a surplus of 11,000. Superior reports a surplus of 1,000.

Mississippi reports a shortage of farm laborers. The demobilized soldiers from Mississippi do not appear to be inclined to return to farm work. There is considerable demand in the State for women and boys. Missouri reports considerable surplus all over the State. Montana reports a surplus of 4,000 laborers, 4,000 ore miners, and 500 railroad workers. General unemployment is developing rapidly throughout the State. Omaha, Neb., still shows a slight surplus. Arizona reports a surplus of approximately 5,000, with men being released in the mining districts. In Idaho the supply about equals the demand.

Slight shortages are still reported in North Carolina, South Carolina, and Tennessee. Norfolk, Va., reports a shortage of about 1,500. Baltimore, which last week reported a shortage of 2,600, now reports a shortage of 700. Four weeks ago Baltimore reported a shortage of 4,800. Louisville, Ky., reports a shortage of 500, with the supply of labor approximately equalling the demand throughout State. In Florida there is a shortage in agricultural workers, wood laborers, and colored laborers for the lumber camps. There is a surplus of carpenters throughout the State amounting to about 1,000.

San Francisco, Cal., which reported a surplus of 4,000 last week, now reports a surplus of 5,000. Los Angeles reports a surplus of 8,000, and Oakland 2,000. Spokane, Wash., shows a surplus, Portland, Ore., reports a surplus of 8,000 which is an increase of 1,500 over last week.

ARREST ARMED LUNATIC.

Had Weapons and a Telegram Addressed to Mrs. Finley J. Shepard.

ATLANTIC CITY, Feb. 8.—A well-dressed young man, who the police believe is mentally unbalanced, intended to "pay a visit" to Mrs. Finley J. Shepard, formerly Helen Gould, it was revealed today following his arrest after he had tried to break into the office of Mayor Harry Bacharach.

The police say they found in his pockets three murderous-looking knives and a set of sharply pointed steel knuckles, also a telegram directed to Mrs. Shepard, which read:

"I am coming to New York on business, and would desire to have moments of your time concerning important matters. I shall explain when I see you."

The man gave the name of Barnadin Paul Rickenbacker of 44 Gennessee Street, Md., but named no town.

HENEY SAYS MAYER OFFERED HIM BRIBE

Investigator Tells Senate Committee Packers' Lawyer Asked for Help.

MAYER DENIES CHARGE

Declares It a Clumsy Lie, and Says He Will Appear Before Committee Tomorrow.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—Francis J. Heney, special investigator into the packing industry, told the Senate Agricultural Committee today that, at one of the committee's hearings last week, Levy Mayer, chief counsel to the packers, had offered him an inducement of a lucrative practice if he would join in with the packers' interests.

"Mr. Mayer was sitting opposite me at the table in this room," said Mr. Heney. "He leaned across the table during a lull in the proceedings and, in a low tone, said to me:

"'You work for our interests and I'll give you more business than you can handle.' Those were his words. I think such a man ought to be debarred from practicing law," Mr. Heney went on. "I make this charge against him now while he is in the city."

Mr. Heney declared that Mr. Mayer made a similar proposal to Frank J. Walsh, former member of the War Trade Board. The Committee will have Mr. Mayer before it on Monday in reply to Mr. Heney's accusation.

Mr. Heney today went into the alleged efforts of the packers to defeat the Borland resolution providing for the investigation into the packing industry by the Federal Trade Commission last year. He declared the packers had resisted an effort of the cattle raisers to provide a fund in the interest of the resolution.

"The packers used their influence upon their banks to prevent the cattle raisers from contributing, and we have the documents to prove it," he said.

Henry Veeder, counsel to the packers, denied that this was true.

"The packers never could have influenced the cattlemen," insisted Mr. Veeder. "The Live Stock Association spent more money and had a bigger lobby in Washington than did the packers."

Mr. Heney produced an affidavit by E. W. Tomlinson, Secretary of the National Live Stock Association, setting forth that the association had raised $47,000 in three years, which was less than one-third, Mr. Heney said, of the amount that the packers had stated the cattlemen raised in one year.

The investigator read letters to show that the packers had fought the Borland resolution in every way.

"We always did everything we could to defeat vicious legislation," interrupted Mr. Veeder. "And we would do it again."

"The work of the packers in defeating the Borland resolution," retorted Mr. Heney, "was vicious lobbying of the worst character."

Senator Kenyon went into campaign contributions of the packers, asking Mr. Veeder if Swift & Co. had not given to the Republican and Democratic funds. Mr. Veeder replied that "Mr. Swift might have made a personal contribution, without my knowledge." He did not know of any contribution from the firm.

"Perhaps they contributed to the Bull Moose and the Socialist parties," suggested Senator Gronna.

"I don't know about that," replied Mr. Veeder.

The witness said the anti-suffrage society headed by Mrs. James Wadsworth, wife of the Senator, had asked a contribution of $100.

"Mr. Swift asked my advice about it," Mr. Veeder went on. "I don't know if he gave the $100 or not."

Mayer Denies Heney Charge.

Levy Mayer of Chicago, counsel for Armour & Co., issued a statement here last night denying the charge made today by Francis J. Heney, before the Senate Agricultural Committee in Washington, that Mr. Mayer had offered him employment with the packers.

"The charge of Heney, made during my absence in New York, is an infamous lie," said Mr. Mayer's statement. "He says the attempt was made by me at an open session of the committee. Next Monday it will be two weeks since I was before the committee. At that time Mr. Armour was testifying. Why did not Heney get up then and immediately denounce this imaginary charge? The lie is too transparent; it is very clumsy. Heney has for months attacked the honesty and integrity of every one of the five big packers and of all their lawyers. Now, in despair, he resorts to still another lie. Some days ago the committee asked me to appear next Monday to discuss the constitutionality of the pending bill. I will then appear and have more to say."

OIL IN DERBYSHIRE.

Americans Strike It in a Well Near Brimington.

LONDON, Feb. 8.—American drillers, working for the Government, have struck oil in a well near Brimington, Derbyshire. No announcement is made as to the extent of the flow.

Six wells are being put down in Derbyshire, testing what is believed to be an extensive oil field.

NEED EXCISE FUNDS TO PAY PENSIONS

Cutting Off of Revenue from the State Causes Serious Problems in This City.

DEFICIT MUST BE MADE UP

An Appeal Will Be Made to the Legislature for Its Payment from New York's Budget.

One phase of nation-wide prohibition that has aroused grave anxiety in the minds of city officials and those interested in the pensioning of municipal employes is, How will the deficit to the various funds caused by the lack of excise revenue be made up? The various pension systems are so built up around the revenue obtained from the operation of the excise law that the stoppage of revenue is going to cause hardship to hundreds unless some means are taken to provide for pensions in some other way. It is probable that an appeal will be made to the Legislature for a law under which deficits may be made up from the budget or some specific revenues be set aside to maintain the pension funds. A city official said yesterday that this is already being done, and he added that, no matter what the costs may be, the city will have to get squarely behind such a law.

In 1918 the city received as its share of the liquor tax $7,395,225, which was 50 per cent. of the total amount received by the State for certificates granted in this city from Jan. 1 to June 30, and 75 per cent. for the period from July 1 to Dec. 31. This was the city's share after the expenses of operation of the State's excise machinery in this city had been deducted and it was a banner year, especially in the last half. In addition to the license fees the city received its share of the revenue under the new law levying a surtax on profits of more than $20,000 a year.

Perhaps the greatest sufferers under prohibition, unless the Legislature makes some provision for them, will be the pensioners who are beneficiaries of the New York Employes' Retirement Fund, under the Grady law. This law applies to all city and county employes, except where special funds exist. Veterans of the army or navy are retired on pensions of 50 per cent. of their annual salaries, under this law, after twenty years of service, and those who have not been in service can go on pension after thirty years of employment. Last year the Employes' Retirement Fund received $350,000 from the liquor excise taxes received by the city. This represents .0473 per cent. of the total.

The number of annuitants and the amounts to be paid to them for the year 1919, as indicated by the pension roll at the end of the last year are as follows:

Nonveterans	271	$211,033.66
Veterans	158	98,414.60
Total	429	$309,448.26

Those on this list have been overtaken by age, and something will have to be done to make up their pensions, it was said yesterday. This pension list is the chief concern of the men who are now figuring out what can be done. The situation was one, it was said, that calls for action, and it is expected that this Legislature will be asked to make the needed provisions of law.

Although the Police Department Pension Fund and the Fire Department Pension Fund have received a certain allotment from excise revenues, they will be taken care of under the charter, for it is obligatory on the city to make up any deficit each year in these two funds. In 1918 the city paid out of the liquor excise tax it received as its share of the city receipts $430,000, representing .0582 per cent. of the amount received by the city. In addition to receiving a share of the liquor tax revenue the Police Pension Fund receives appropriations directly from the city, and the deficit in that fund for 1919 has been estimated at $1,550,000, which amount was placed in the budget for this year.

Similarly under the Charter the city has to take care of the Fire Department Pension Fund. The amount of liquor excise tax paid by the city to the fund of the Fire Department last year was $644,161.55, representing .0871 per cent. of the city's total income from this source. The deficit in the Fire Department Fund last year was $323,233.38. This amount was provided by the issuance of special revenue bonds, redeemable out of this year's budget.

The College of the City of New York Retirement Fund received $25,000 from the city as a contribution from liquor excise taxes, representing .0034 per cent. of the total amount received by this city in 1918. The law permits the payment of such amounts as may be necessary, but not to exceed 1 per cent.

The former Public School Teachers' Retirement Fund received contributions of 5 per cent. of the liquor excise taxes from the city, but since the establishment of the present teachers' retirement system such contributions have been discontinued.

In March of last year a committee selected to study the entire situation reported to Mayor Hylan a plan whereby city employes would retire on allowances totaling half pay after various lengths of service and the cost of such pensions would be borne jointly by the city and by the employe, through anticipatory payments by the latter. The plan did not, judging by published reports, anticipate the loss of liquor revenue taxes as a means of helping the city to bear the burden of such taxation.

WILL BE A PATRIOTIC LOAN.

Secretary Glass Emphasizes Decision as to Offering in April.

PITTSBURGH, Penn., Feb. 8.—The next Liberty Loan will be a "thanksgiving loan" as well as a "victory loan" and must be floated in a spirit of patriotism rather than on a cold commercial basis, Secretary Glass declared in an address here tonight before the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce.

"A little thought will teach the wisest among the financiers that it is impossible now to float purely for investment purposes a loan of five or six billion dollars," Mr. Glass said. "We have got to appeal to the patriotism of the American people, and it will not be in vain.

"The honor of the Government is involved. Being your Government, it is your honor that is involved. Four Liberty Loans have 'gone over the top,' and nothing nor anybody can shake my faith in the purpose of the country to put the capstone to the splendid structure of national credit by making the Victory Loan an abundant success. The American should supplement the patriotism of war by the patriotism of peace.

"When I am told of the difficulties which will beset the Victory Loan, I refuse to lose faith in the enduring patriotism of the American people. I decline to believe that the fathers and mothers who gave four million sons to die if need be that liberty might survive will now haggle over the material cost of saving the very soul of civilization from the perdition of Prussian tyranny."

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—Terms of the "Victory" Liberty Loan, to be offered to the nation this Spring, will be decided soon by Secretary Glass so that necessary legislation may be enacted at this session of Congress. This legislation will provide for an additional authorization to supplement the $5,000,000,000, already provided and for an increase in the interest rate above 4¼ per cent., if the Treasury should decide to raise the rate. In addition, Congress must authorize extension of tax exemption on bonds of the forthcoming loan or of past issues in accordance with any plan which the Treasury may devise. It is the present intention of Secretary Glass to open the loan campaign about April 21 and close it in three weeks.

SMITH BIDS HYLAN ADIEU BEFORE TRIP

Governor Will Not Comment on Enright's Demotion of Daniel Costigan.

LETS A PRISONER GO HOME

Barbaro May Attend His Mother's Funeral, as He Requested, Under a Proper Guard.

Governor Alfred E. Smith, after calling upon Mayor Hylan yesterday to wish him luck on his vacation trip to Palm Beach, held his third reception in the Governor's Room at the City Hall. About 100 persons were waiting for the Governor when he appeared. He was asked first if he cared to discuss the action taken by Police Commissioner Enright in reducing Inspector Daniel E. Costigan to the rank of Captain. He said he would not comment upon it.

The Governor said that the application of the Public Service Commission to the Legislature for an appropriation of $100,000 to fight the suit of the Consolidated Gas Company had not come before him and he had nothing to say about it. Asked if he had received United States Senator Reed's letter in behalf of Joseph Cohen who is awaiting execution for being concerned in the murder of Barnet Baff, the Washington Market dealer, the Governor replied:

There is a great mass of documents to be gone over and I have asked that they be assembled for my perusal. There is certainly no disposition on the part of New York State to have an innocent man suffer for sins committed by another. I have also urged the Pardon Clerk to start work on the case at once and let me know the merits of the various arguments as soon as they can be reduced to recitals of facts."

Among those who called upon the Governor was Dr. Pearce Bailey of Washington, D. C., who came to discuss legislation regarding the feebleminded. Miss May Patterson, a Brooklyn lawyer who is a Democratic district leader in that borough, also had a few minutes' talk with the Governor. Representatives of the Manufacturers Aircraft Association who are to hold an exhibition at Madison Square Garden on March 1 wanted the Governor to be present and open the proceedings. He said he would do so if he found the time.

About thirty of the callers tried to interest the Governor in pardon cases, all of a minor nature. During the afternoon Warden Homer of Great Meadows Prison telephoned that Michael Barbaro had requested that he be allowed to go to New York to attend the funeral of his mother. The Governor gave his consent, provided the prisoner was properly guarded.

Questioned regarding the proposed improvement of New York Harbor, the Governor said that the New York and New Jersey Legislative Committees were scheduled to hold a conference some time next week and that he hoped an agreement would be reached.

After visiting his mother in Brooklyn the Governor will return to Albany early today to take part in the Roosevelt memorial service to be held at the State Capitol this afternoon.

REPUBLICANS MODIFY RULE OF SENIORITY

Senate Caucus Limits Right of Any Member to Serve on More Than Two Committees.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—In a caucus today Republican Senators voted to abolish some of the long standing seniority rights in the organization of committees when they take control of the Senate after March 4. Under the rules as they will be amended, no Senator will be permitted to become a member of more than two of the ten principal standing committees, and the Chairmen of these committees may not be on any conference committee upon a bill reported by another committee without the recommendation of the majority members of the committee which had the bill in charge.

This is a compromise between suggestions made in a resolution introduced by Senator Norris of Nebraska and a plan framed by a committee of which Senator Lenroot of Wisconsin was Chairman, appointed by the Republican conference. The amendments were adopted after a brief session today and without any apparent opposition.

A resolution also recommending that after March 4 no Senate committee shall be composed of more than seventeen members also was adopted. The resolution would affect the composition of about six committees.

COBB PLANS TO CURB AUTO DRIVERS HERE

Magistrate Suggests Amendments to Present Law at Traffic Conference.

WANT LEGISLATURE TO ACT

Would Have Moral, Legal, Physical, and Mental Tests for Chauffeurs.

Changes in the present State Motor Vehicle law, believed to tend toward the restoration of safety on the public highways, are contained in tentative amendments presented yesterday at the traffic conference in the Traffic Court, 300 Mulberry Street, by City Magistrate W. Bruce Cobb. These amendments, it is expected, will be presented to the Legislature within a short time. The changes contemplated are the examination of every applicant for a driver's license as to his moral, mental, and physical condition, and his knowledge of the law, the elimination of the illiterate and the unskilful, and the issuing of ten-day learners' permits to those who wish to learn to drive.

The question of broadening the powers governing the suspension and revocation of licenses came up for much discussion. Those who represented up-State sentiment said that they had no objection to giving the trial judges and the magistrates within the confines of New York City the power to revoke licenses, but they did not think that Justices of the Peace should have these powers. They contended the granting of such power would inevitably lead to abuses.

There was the same objection to changing the provision that the Secretary of State may revok or suspend licenses by substituting the word "shall" for "may." To do this, it was argued, would make it possible for a justice to recommend that a license be revoked and leave the Secretary of State nothing else to do but to carry out the recommendation. The word "shall" appeared in the Cobb recommendation, but "may" was reinstated.

Explains Few Revocations.

Secretary of State Hugo said that the reason why so few licenses were revoked was because the courts throughout the State neglected to inform him of violations. The clause in the present law giving those recommended for suspension or revocation of licenses a hearing before the Secretary of State was left unchanged.

Under Magistrate Cobb's proposed amendments, which were accepted by the conference, Section 282, subdivision 8 of the present law, would read:

"No person shall operate or drive a motor vehicle who is physically, mentally, or morally unfit so to do, who lacks proper skill, who is grossly illiterate or does not speak the English language, or who has not a fair knowledge of the rules of the road. No person shall operate or drive a motor vehicle unless such person is a duly licensed chauffeur or operator, whether the owner of such vehicle or otherwise."

The present clause in the law regarding operators under 18 years, and providing that they may operate if accompanied by a duly licensed chauffeur or the owner of the motor vehicle being operated, is omitted. Under the present law this permission to those under 18 to drive under these conditions applies only to cities of the first class, and by omitting the section it makes the prohibition against such operators State-wide. A new clause authorizes granting any one with physical and mental fitness a ten days' permit, during which time they may learn to drive under the instruction of a licensed driver. This was done because no provision is made for beginners, who now learn to drive in violation of the existing laws.

The evident acceptance of these amendments by the representatives of the New York State Automobile Association was the subject of much gratification to those interested in making the law more stringent.

Magistrate Cobb spoke on the proposed amendments, and among other things he said: "I have included in the essentials of operation gross illiteracy, which so often goes hand in hand with a low order of intelligence, and I may say in passing that it was found in Unied States Army truck tests that a low order of intelligence was an important factor in contributing to accidents. Further, this is an age of signs and printed directions. Experience in New York City shows that illiteracy and lack of English are serious handicaps to safe driving and observances of traffic regulations."

JEWISH WELFARE PROGRAM.

Board to Continue Its Activities Through Reconstruction Period.

Colonel Harry Cutler, Chairman of the Jewish Welfare Board, yesterday told of the reconstruction program that has been undertaken by the organization. "Our spheres of service," he said, "Will be extended to meet the needs of our soldiers during this hazardous period of demobilization. Actuated by the same inspiration, and with the same zeal and solicitude as during the days of war preparation, our representatives in the field and our community workers will mobilize their energies and resources to meet the emergency."

The sudden advent of comparative peace thrust upon the organization four new and momentous problems, said Colonel Cutler. "We have," he continued, "the returned soldier with the red chevron looking for a job; the millions of men in France, England, and Germany who have borne the brunt of the fighting, and now with the inspiration and interest of the war over, need comfort and entertainment more than ever; again, there are returning soldiers with a long voyage on board often crowded transports, and finally, the men in the cantonments here, waiting to be mustered out to whom the days seem unusually long."

Colonel Cutler said that the jobless soldier was the greatest problem, and that committees on employment had been appointed in each of the 165 branch offices of the board, located in practically every community containing any considerable Jewish population in the country.

F. J. HELMLE QUITS BROOKLYN GREETERS

Only Seven of Original Twenty-five Remain on Welcoming Committee.

MAY SUE FOR THEIR MONEY

Legal Action May Be Taken by Brooklyn Citizens to Compel Return of Contributions.

Resignations of members of the Brooklyn Victory Celebration Committee and demands of contributors for the return of money given to cover the expenses of the celebration and the cost of the memorial to the soldiers killed in France were received in large numbers yesterday in the offices of Borough President Riegelmann of Brooklyn and John J. Delaney, the new Chairman of the committee. Those reaching the public were given out by the persons who wrote them, and all said that the reason for the action was the belief that William Randolph Hearst was seeking to control the committee.

A suggestion that legal action be taken to compel the return of contributions to their donors was made yesterday by several members of the committee. Borough President Riegelmann, who accepted the resignation of Chairman Nathan S. Jonas in acceding to the demand of the Hearst sympathiers, would not comment upon the probable action to be taken upon the requests for return of contributions. Chairman Delaney said that he would refer the requests to the newly constituted Executive Committee when it met tomorrow. Many of those who had sought the return of the money specified as an alternative that the sums be given to the Red Cross.

Only seven of the twenty-five members of the Executive Committee have retained their places. Frank J. Helmle resigned yesterday, following seventeen other members in their protest against the "injection of politics" into the affairs of the committee and the threatened dominance by the Hearst supporters. Chairman Delaney said that none of the new members had been appointed, but added that he had received so many promises of support from prominent citizens that he would have no trouble forming a new committee for the meeting tomorrow.

Mrs. Morton J. Halstead, President of the Brooklyn Woman's Club, yesterday notified Chairman Delaney that the members had authorized her to withdraw the name of the organization from those taking part in the celebration. Other resignations reported were: Mrs. Isabel Ely Lord, John J. Pierrepont, Mrs. Pierrepont, Mrs. R. Percy Chittenden, Mrs. Samuel K. Frost, Mrs. James M. Edsall, Charles S. Hartwell, Edward W. Allen, Harris M. Crist, Claude C. Crippen, the Rev. Dr. William Carter, Samuel F. Thompson, Herman D. Bob, John B. Creighton, Mrs. Scott McLanahan, Miss Jane McKee, and Millard F. Tompkins.

Praise Committee's Stand.

Thirty letters praising the stand of the Executive Committee in refusing to accede to the demand of the Hearst adherents for cancellation of the invitation to James M. Beck to speak at the meeting in the Brooklyn Academy of Music last week were given out yesterday by Mr. Jonas. Many of them were from soldiers, and among others who praised the committee were: Supreme Court Justices Chatfield and Callaghan; Norman S. Dike, County Judge in Kings; E. C. Delafield, Captain Robert T. Rasmussen, U. S. A., and C. A. Meissner, who was an honorary Vice Chairman.

The Independent Citizens' Committee, organized in this city as a protest against the membership of Hearst on the Mayor's Committee of Welcome to Homecoming Troops, yesterday gave out a letter received by it from Mr. Jonas. It was written in response to a promise of support in his fight against influences exerted upon the Brooklyn committee.

"The whole matter involves so much of importance to our community and our country that all decent citizens should arise, combine and protest against what has easily become the greatest menace to our free institutions and to our country," wrote Mr. Jonas. "Of course, it is disagreeable for men and women to stand up to fight this vile and loathsome thing, but if we don't do it we will have only ourselves to blame for the worse things that will come."

The Citizens' Committee also gave out resolutions adopted by the American Defense Society and the Strangers' Welfare Fellowship in support of the resolution introduced in the Assembly for the appointment of a State committee to greet the soldiers.

ORGANIZE TO FIGHT 'DRY' AMENDMENT

Maryland Anti-Prohibitionists Form League to Test Validity of Law.

PROPOSES LEGAL ACTION

Declaration Says Ratification Was Forced on Legislatures by "Plotters."

An Anti-Prohibition League has been organized in Maryland and its Declaration of Principles was made public yesterday. According to the declaration, the organization purposes to contest the validity of the Federal Prohibition Amendment by all honorable and legal means. It purposes, because "a sect or division of men * * * denies even the wisdom of God Almighty himself in producing healthful food stimulants and creating a desire for their use," to resist the application and enforcement of the amendment "both nationally and in our own once sovereign State through whatever Constitutional rights may still be reserved to an independent commonalty."

The organization intends, so the declaration states, to expose the indisputable fact that State legislators have been unwarrantably awed into ratifying the "subversive amendment at times and places in which the public voice, by fair plebiscite, has declared the direct opposite to be the public will." But in whatever may be done the declaration insists that it is the patriotic duty of all the members of the organization "to keep cool heads and clean hands, to be respected for our sanity and moderation and to be ready to calm any ebullitions that may threaten the peace of our fair republic."

The declaration asserts that, "When plotters have engrafted on our organic law an amendment that interrupts, seriously and radically, the private habits and customs of a hitherto free people, millions of those people will seek to evade the edict, thus arousing a lack of respect for it which will deepen into contempt. We declare that any interest or cabal which fosters such contempt, is doubly the enemy of the Constitution of the United States of America, and that we shall fight it to the bitter end."

The following are declared to be the practical things the organization can do in carrying on its fight to make the amendment forever inoperative:

"We can prove to any executive, court or legislative body that the imposition of the Prohibition amendment upon the State of Maryland is not with the consent of the governed, but in direct opposition to the will of the people of the State as exemplified in a recent ballot upon that question.

Plan to Prove Law Illegal.

"We can insist that the fifteen States which have the referendum and whose legislatures have superficially ratified the prohibition amendment without submitting the question to the people of those States have not complied with he maxim of American law concerning the consent of the governed and that therefore those States have not ratified the amendment, and that we are within our constitutional rights when we assume that we are not bound as yet to respect the amendment as a part of the constitutional law of the land.

"We can insist that the regulation of the use of stimulating beverages belongs exclusively to the several sovereign States, and that the United States Government is, or should be, powerless to enter any State and regulate the use of such beverages because of the inhibition in Article X. of the Constitution which reads: 'The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people.'

"Inasmuch as the prohibition politicians are now demanding a system of vile espionage under the names of 'Search and Seizure,' we can express our horror of such an un-American inquisition in our homes and castles, our cellars and larders, as will spread dismay from coast to coast, will disseminate an awful dread of such violent and arbitrary measures and make our country stand aghast.

"We can, by standing upon our constitutional rights, mitigate the severities of search and seizure, and we must do so as zealous, jealous, and loyal citizens, for Article IV. of the Constitution declares: 'The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated, &c.'

"It devolves sacredly upon us, as loyal Americans, to defend the Constitution with our lives, our fortunes and our sacred honor, because that instrument is the bill of rights upon which rests the whole fabric of our liberal and benign Government. When, therefore, a sect or junta of men, to compel upon their fellows an order that can never be rightfully more than a mere police regulation, force that proposition into our Constitution, they brand themselves as outlaws and we can and must proclaim them as enemies of that Constitution.

"Finally, to these ends, we can and shall establish headquarters, crystallize sentiment, seek unity of action, get into sympathetic touch with similar organizations throughout our country, aid in legal battle for our rights and so develop honest public feeling that in the end the new amendment may be declared unconstitutional by the courts on the ground of its public impolicy."

HYLAN OFF TO PALM BEACH.

Expects to be Gone Three Weeks—Names a New Magistrate.

Mayor Hylan, accompanied by his wife and daughter, departed at noon yesterday for Palm Beach, Fla., on his annual vacation. He expects to be gone three weeks. Before leaving the Mayor had a long conference with Robert L. Moran, President of the Board of Aldermen, who will be Acting Mayor in his absence.

The Mayor announced the appointment of Gerald Hull Gray as a City Magistrate for thirty days, to take the place of Francis D. Gallatin, the new Park Commissioner. The new Magistrate lives at 53 East Sixty-first Street, and was an Assistant District Attorney under District Attorneys Gardiner and Philbin.

$100 Reward for Missing Dog Hero.

The American Red Cross yesterday announced a reward of $100, donated by "a friend of the Red Cross," for the return of "Gyp," a dog hero of the war, which disappeared from Pershing House, 115 East Twenty-first Street, last Saturday night. "Gyp" is a Great Dane, three and a half feet high and limps slightly on the right foreleg as a result of a wound received in the fighting around Ypres. The dog was the property of Private Louis George Green, a Texan, who was wounded in the fighting in the Argonne Forest, and who is now in a convalescent hospital at Camp Upton. Green was spending the night at Pershing House last Saturday, and the dog was put in the basement. A general alarm for the missing dog has been sent out from Police Headquarters.

Lamberts Remodel Jewelry At Factory Prices

Platinum has come to its own again. As the Government no longer needs the country's supply of it, we and other manufacturing jewelers are allowed to use it as freely as we did before the War.

Would you not like to have your family diamonds remounted in this lustrous metal, which is even more popular now than it has been at any time since 1890, when it was introduced to lovers of art in jewelry?

Thus could you obtain, at a low cost, appropriate and novel wedding gifts, birthday gifts and presents for returning soldiers and sailors. Let us show you how we could give new life and beauty to your old rings and jewelry.

If, on the other hand, you would like us to submit entirely new designs, well and good again. Such additional diamonds as might be required we could supply at the lowest prices—lower prices probably than you would expect to pay, since we are direct importers of diamonds, and do not, therefore, ask our customers to pay middlemen's profits.

All the details of work in the Lambert factory, on the same premises with our store, are directed by members of the firm who have served their time at the workman's bench as apprentices and journeymen.

Charges for remodeling old jewelry and remounting the diamonds you are so proud of are factory prices. Work is strong and durable, as well as artistic.

Let us go over details together at your convenience. It would be a pleasure to show you some of our new productions in the remounting of fine diamonds in platinum.

LA GUARDIA ATTACKS THE ESPIONAGE LAW

Says It Has Served No Purpose but to Cover Waste and Inefficiency in Washington.

RESENTS NAVY BILL PLEA

Thinks Congress Should Know Reasons—Republican Club Hears of Appropriation Evils.

Peace problems and reconstruction were discussed again yesterday at the regular nonpartisan weekly meeting of the Republican Club, 54 West Fortieth Street. Frederick H. Gillett, member of the House from Massachusetts, attacked the present method of making appropriations, saying that it was "inextricably interwoven with the interests of the individual members of Congress," that everything concerned with it tended to greater and greater extravagance, and that the only remedy he could see was in a "popular uprising which would demand the cessation of the bungling."

Fiorello H. La Guardia, member of the House from New York, held that the only purpose served by the espionage law was to cover up waste and inefficiency in the departments at Washington, and severely scored the methods used to coerce Congress into passing the bill providing for a big navy.

Other speakers were former Senator Theodore E. Burton, Senator William M. Calder, and the Rev. William F. Peirce, President of Kenyon College. It was ladies' day at the club, and Alderman Arnon L. Squires, who presided, opened the meeting by saying that in arranging the program he had given no thought to providing special intellectual food for women, but had assumed that they would want the same talk as the men.

After pointing out that appropriations had not, up to this time, been a vital problem because of the immense resources of the country, Mr. Gillett summarized the present situation, stating that while the normal annual cost of government was $700,000,000, we had spent in less than a year $26,000,000,000, a net expenditure of $18,000,000,000, as $8,000,000,000 was lent to foreign Governments.

"While the expenditures are now rapidly diminishing," he said, "the increased army and navy and the interest on our enormous debt and the new items of expenditure such as education, public health, social insurance and development, good roads and other objects which the progressive spirit of today demands will for many years compel large appropriations and require as never before a sound fiscal system."

The desire of every department head in Washington to improve his department was emphasized by Mr. Gillett. He indicated the natural resulting tendency to inflate department estimates and the lack of co-ordination among the departments.

"In 1908," said the speaker, "Congress, with a desire to compel the President to co-operate toward a more orderly fiscal system, enacted a law making it the duty of the President to calculate what the revenues of the coming year would be and then to review the estimates of expenditures proposed and if they exceeded the probable revenues either to reduce them or suggest how the revenues could be increased. That was the germ of an intelligent budget system. But there is of course no penalty upon the President for ignoring this duty, and during this Administration, while the estimates of expenditures have largely exceeded the probable revenues, the President has regularly disobeyed the law and failed to present to Congress the required budget.

"At one time all appropriations and revenue laws were considered by one committee. That was an ideal system, but now a dozen committees are considering as many appropriation bills, each competing with the other to get all it can for its department, with little consideration for the needs of others or for the revenues from which they are to be paid.

"How shall all this be remedied? I have decided opinions, but it is complicated and obscure, and its discussion cannot be compressed into a few minutes. The object I have in view today is to impress upon you that there is a dangerous disease, and not to convert you to my particular remedy. Until the people realize some of the perils of our present condition and bring pressure on Congress to change it, we shall certainly drift along as we are. An aroused public opinion is the only force which can move the inertia of Congress."

Representative La Guardia began his speech by stating that considering all he had done in service—dropping bombs on the Austrians, attack upon airplanes, and other forms of actual fighting—he felt that one of the best things he could have done for the war would have been to vote against the Espionage law. "Every person," he continued, "convicted under that law could just as well have been convicted under the laws that existed before its enactment. But what the law did do was to prevent the exposure of waste and inefficiency in the departments at Washington.

"Let me give a concrete illustration. In January or February of last year I read an account predicting exactly what this country could produce in airplanes by September or October, 1918. The estimate was not 500 machines off. And where did I get the information? In an Italian translation of an article in the Kölnische Zeitung! In other words, the enemy knew what we could do while we were being fed upon rosy predictions.

"At any rate, whatever justification there might have been for the Espionage law during the war, there is certainly none now, and I sincerely hope that the Sixty-sixth Congress will have the backbone to repeal it.

"I say let's use all the power that Congress has and do not let us give up any of it. There is the naval bill, appropriating immense sums for some ships that may be obsolete before they are built. We are told one morning that we must pass this bill. The President has sent a telegram. Why must we pass it? We are not supposed to know, but some members of the Naval Committee have seen the telegram. Well, my certificate of election reads just as does that of every other member, and if there is any pertinent information that they have, I want it. We are told the President needs the big navy bill in his negotiations at Paris. If he were negotiating with Bohemia, or Montenegro, or Poland, that might go, but if he thinks he is putting anything over on England or France, he is sadly mistaken. I suppose what I have said is indictable under the Espionage law."

FIND SYMPATHY HERE DEEP FOR GREECE

Dr. Metaxa Makes Public Part of Report He Will Submit to Premier Venizelos.

HER ASPIRATIONS FAVORED

Former Governor of Saloniki Names Citizens to Whom He Is Indebted—Sails for Paris.

Before sailing on the Adriatic for Paris yesterday, Dr. John N. Metaxa, former Governor of Saloniki, made public certain portions of his report to Premier Venizelos dealing with the results of his mission on behalf of Greece to this country.

"After a stay in the United States for a period of four months in the interest of the territorial and political aspirations of the Greek people, in which time every opportunity was offered me of informing myself with regard to American sentiment in connection with our appeal now before the Peace Congress, I am able to report that circumstances and conditions in America may be considered as extremely favorable to the cause of Greece," said Dr. Metaxa.

Among those to whom he said he was grateful for their sympathy with the cause of Greece, Dr. Metaxa mentioned President Lowell, of Harvard University; President Schurman, of Cornell; President Butler, of Columbia; Frank A. Vanderlip, Madison Grant, Charles R. Miller, Emerson McMillin, Elihu Root, Cleveland H. Dodge, and William Howard Taft.

Interest and Sympathy General.

"The interest and sympathy of Americans, far from being limited," he continued, "is, on the contrary, so general that it may be safely stated that the representatives of all branches of life in America seized the opportunity of gaining a closer acquaintance of the affairs of Greece, and were thus led not only to express their sympathy, but also, as often as not, to give us the benefit of their active aid and support.

"Whether in political, educational, commercial, or humanitarian circles, the response has been invariable and immediate, eagerness to acquire information being only equaled by the generous and unstinted sympathy that was ever forthcoming.

"The starting point for this movement was undoubtedly the acceptance of President Wilson's principle of self-determination, which is the basis of the present cosmic reconstruction and which gave a tremendous impulse, on the one hand, to the desire of all men to be free citizens, and, on the other, to the sympathy of the more fortunate, such as the people of America, for those who have long suffered from tyranny. Apart from his political axiom, President Wilson has expressed his personal sympathy for the unredeemed Greeks of Asia Minor in a letter to Frank S. Jackson, Chairman of the Relief Committee for Greeks in Asia Minor.

"It is indeed natural that political opinion in America should be so wholeheartedly in favor of the Greek people in their struggle for liberty and the union of their race, because the American citizen is essentially democratic in thought and action, and has never lost sight of the fact that it was the Greek people who first established in the world the principles of democracy, which they have never ceased to uphold and defend throughout their long unbroken history.

Kindness of Scholars Here.

"In my interviews or in correspondence with leaders of American thought as President Lowell of Harvard, President Schurman of Cornell, President Butler of Columbia, Frank A. Vanderlip, Madison Grant, Charles R. Miller, Emerson McMillin, Elihu Root, Cleveland H. Dodge, William Howard Taft and many others, I have been very deeply touched by their great generosity and their heartfelt sympathy—in fact, their love for Greece which they feel, deserves a better fate, after all she has done for humanity, than having 50 per cent. of her children serve in bondage under the heel of semi-barbarous races. The kindness and sympathy of American scholars and the gracious hospitality extended to me at university centres, such as Harvard, Yale, and Philadelphia, will ever be one of the most cherished memories of my life.

"There are two classes of American citizens whose great interest in my country I have had ample opportunity of appreciating; the first is the numerous class of American philanthropists, whose pleasure is to study the needs of others and promote their welfare, and who are now filled with dismay at the thought that the Greek people, after so many centuries of unjust suffering, should still continue living under the brutal oppression of a race which has never accomplished anything for the progress or the happiness of humanity.

"The second includes the business men of America, who fully realize that of all of the Near Eastern populations, the Greeks have ever shown the greatest commercial initiative and ability, as opposed to the Turks, whose only achievement is to have devastated 'no man's land' some of the richest and most fertile territories in the world. The return of these territories to their rightful owners entailing the development along modern lines of their hitherto unexploited resources is a subject to which the American business man, with his keen eye for increased commercial possibilities, is by no means indifferent.

"With the claims of Greece the public is now familiar.

"1. Epirus—including Himara, Korytea, Kastoria.

"2. Thrace—including Xanthi, Dedeagatch, Adrianople.

"3. Constantinople—either in full possession, with the guarantees for the neutralization of the strait, or with Greece as mandatory for the powers.

"4. Asia Minor—Smyrna and the contiguous territories inhabited by nearly 2,000,000 Greeks.

"5. The Islands of the Dodecanesus, including Rhodes, which is inhabited exclusively by Greeks.

"And if the Peace Conference fails to render complete justice to Greece, I feel sure that we may still count upon leaders of American thought to retain their interest and continue their efforts on behalf of a people whose only desire is to see the liberation and unity of their race."

HARVARD SEVEN IS VICTOR OVER YALE

Superior Team Play of Crimson Hockey Players Causes Downfall of Blue.

FINAL SCORE FOUR TO ONE

Individual Work of Certain New Haven Skaters Is Excellent but Futile Against Foe.

Harvard's hockey team defeated Yale at the Brooklyn Ice Palace last night by a score of 4 to 1. The superior passing and team play of the Crimson seven carried it to victory. Yale's play was mostly of an individual nature and although the Blue skaters carried the disc down the ice within striking distance of the Harvard goal many times, the Harvard defense around the net was so stubborn that all attempts at shooting goals were successfully frustrated.

It was the first time in two years that there has been a real college hockey game in this city and there was a large crowd of alumni present. The college enthusiasm which has been bottled up for a long time had a free play last night and there was plenty of cheering and waving of college colors.

Harvard's team showed better coaching for they had pretty combination plays and the players were always in position to take passes. The first goal came after 3:27 of play when Bacon took a pretty pass from Captain Gross and shot the puck into the net. Gross was always in the thick of the scrimmages and his work stood out prominently at times. The Yale skaters were fast, but depended too much on individual work.

Avery of Harvard shot the second goal in 6:34 on a pass from Bigelow, and Avery counted again after 16:02 of play when he scored after taking a pass from Captain Gross. The first period ended with the score 3 to 0 in Harvard's favor.

In the second period Bigelow, Harvard's centre, slammed the disc in for a goal 52 seconds after the half started on a rebound from Poindexter's pads. Ingalls counted the last time for the Crimson on a pass from Bacon in 10:30.

The lineup:

Harvard, (4.)	Position.	Yale, (1.)
Holmes	G.	Poindexter
Walker	P.	Smith
White	C. P.	Wilson
Bigelow	R.	Ingalls
Avery	C.	Carson
Bacon	L. W.	Walton
Gross	R. W.	Sargent

Goals—First period, Bacon, Harvard, in 3:27; Avery, Harvard, in 6:43; Avery, Harvard, in 16:02, second period, Bigelow, Harvard, in 0:52; Ingalls, Yale, in 10:30. Referee—William Dobby, Crescent A. C. Assistant referee—D. Doody, Boston Arena. Time of periods—20 minutes.

LEHIGH BEATS N. Y. U. FIVE.

Winners Make Quick Start and Pile Up Score of 33 to 25.

Special to The New York Times.

BETHLEHEM, Penn., Feb. 8.—Lehigh's snappy play in the early part of today's game with New York University was largely responsible for the 33 to 25 victory scored over the visitors. In the first two minutes of play the Brown and White ran up a total of 10 points. Thereafter New York gradually crept up until at half time the score stood 18 to 17. Lehigh's defense braced the second period, and the visitors were held to one field goal which Maran threw just as the final whistle blew. New York's passing was generally good. Maran was especially good in basketing points from foul tries.

Lineup:

New York.	Position.	Lehigh.
Maran	F.	Maurer
Krane	F.	Donovan
Delaney	C.	Steward
Egan	G.	Frains
Brown	G.	Straub

Goals from field—Savaria, (2,) Donovan, (5,) Steward, Frain, Maurer, Ketcham, (2,) Straub, (3,) Maran, (2,) Krane, (2,) Delaney, (3,) Egan. Foul goals—Straub, (3,) Maran, (9.) Substitutions—Savaria for Maurer, Ketcham for Frain, Early for Steward, Kopf for Steward, Holsman for Krane. Referee—Tom Thorpe. Time of halves—Two of 20 minutes.

AIDS SCHOOL ATHLETICS.

Dr. Aldinger Makes Out Plan to Interest All Students.

Special to The New York Times.

Dr. A. K. Aldinger, newly appointed Secretary of the Public Schools Athletic League and Acting Director of the Department of Physical Training, Department of Education, has mapped out plans which will probably result in increased interest in local scholastic athletics and provide greater beneficial conditions for the young public and high school students.

Dr. Aldinger has been appointed to the Public Schools Athletic League to succeed Dr. C. Ward Crampton, Secretary of the organization since 1908. Athletics and games, individual, group, and representative, are to be utilized to the fullest extent under the leadership of Dr. Aldinger. The new P. S. A. L. official also plans to develop and encourage intra-school, inter-school, district, and mass athletics that reach all students. This mode of procedure, it is expected, will better equip the youngsters for their part in the affairs of the nation later on in life. This is the primary object of the Public Schools Athletic League.

Dr. Aldinger has devoted most of his time to developing the nation's schoolboys since 1890. He graduated from the University of Vermont, Medical Department, in 1899. He conducted courses in physical training at the Summer School of Physical Training, Chautauqua, N. Y., for four Summers in the period from 1902 to 1905. While studying at Vermont Dr. Aldinger was captain of the baseball team. He has been director of physical training at various Y. M. C. A. branches in the country and at State Normal School, Bloomberg, Penn., for extended periods. In addition Dr. Aldinger has had coaching experience in almost every sport, including football, basket ball, baseball, and athletics, for a period of twelve years.

Four-Mile Road Run Today.

The Yorkville Athletic League will conduct an open handicap race this afternoon over the four-mile course of the Ninety-second Street Y. M. H. A. It is expected that runners of the other leagues throughout the city will enter for the prizes. Two prizes will be awarded to the first two Yorkville A. L. runners to finish, while a special prize has been set aside for the first member of another league to cross the finish line.

Stearns Wins Golf Trophy.

PINEHURST, N. C., Feb. 8.—John N. Stearns of the Nassau Country Club defeated Donald Parson, of the Youngstown Country Club, 3 and 2, in the final contest today for the President's trophy of the St. Valentine's golf tournament here.

Scoville Wins with Cue.

F. Scoville defeated James Cosgrove last night in the three-cushion carom billiard tournament at Thum's Academy by 50 to 31 in seventy-nine innings. Scoville made a high run of four.

St. George's Club Five Wins.

A field goal by Conrad, within one-half minute of the final whistle, gave the St. George's Club basket ball quintet a victory over Bronx Church House last night in the Metropolitan A. A. U. 145-pound championship tournament. The score was 32 to 30.

ARMY SKATERS DEFEATED.

Defense Crumples Before Boston College Hockey Team.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Feb. 8.—Boston College, substituting on the Army's West Pointers showed lack of team hockey schedule in place of Yale, had an easy time defeating the Cadets by a score of 5 to 2 in a game played on Lusk Reservoir this afternoon. The work and their defensive play was not strong.

Lineup:

Army.	Position.	Boston College.
Burbard	G.	McCloskey
Evart	P.	Morrissey
Rice	C. P.	Failvey
Bartlett	C.	Dooley
Boyd	R.	Hughes
Stout	R. W.	Healey
Sears	L. W.	Corrigan

Score: Army, 2; Boston College, 5. Goals, first half—Hughes, 2; Boyd. Goals, second half—Hughes, 2; Healy, Evarts. Penalties—Morrissey, 1 minute; Dooley, 2 minutes; Bartlett, 1 minute; Boyd, 1 minute. Substitutes—Miller for Stout, Starr for Sears. Time of halves—20 minutes. Referee—Captain Smith.

SWARTHMORE DOWNS ARMY.

Collegians Win Basket Ball Game with Late Rally.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Feb. 8.—In a hard and closely played game the Army lost at basket ball today to Swarthmore by the margin of a single point. The final score was Army 19, Swarthmore 20. The contest was won by the collegians in the last two minutes of play, a goal from foul by Benjamin and an accurate fling at the basket by Kemp accounting for three points and the lead. The Cadets were obliged to shake up their lineup owing to Captain Cranston's injury. Johnson for the Cadets and C. Lancey for Swarthmore featured.

Te lineup:

Army.	Position.	Swarthmore.
Pfeiffer	R. F.	Place
Johnson	L. F.	C. Lancey
Daniels	C.	Benjamin
Barrick	R. G.	Larkin
Clarerboss	L. G.	Kemp

Score—Army, 19; Swarthmore, 20.

Goals from field—Johnson, (5,) Barrick, (2,) Clarerboss, Place, (2,) C. Lancey, (2,) Stewe, Kemp. Goals from foul—Johnson, (3,) C. Lancey, (4,) Benjamin, (4.) Substitutions: Army—Daniels for Pfeiffer, McQuarrie for Daniels. Referee—Ed Thorpe, De La Salle. Umpire—Mr. Koch, Yonkers Y. M. C. A. Time of halves—20 minutes.

NAVY BEATS HUMPHREYS.

Basket Ball Team Closes Season with Sixteen Victories.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Feb. 8.—The Naval Academy defeated Camp Humphreys, made up of the West Point basket ball team of last season, by 31 to 9, here this afternoon. The midshipmen closed their season with a clean sheet, winning all sixteen of their games. Gene Vidal Britton and other well-known army athletes played with the visitors this afternoon.

The navy lads appeared slightly nervous at the start and the visitors made the first score, a field goal by Shrader. The contest was a keen one until toward the close of the period, when a navy rally brought it to a close with a safe margin of 18 to 5. Lewis, Watters, and Davis did the best work for the navy.

Summary:

Naval Academy.	Position.	Humphreys.
Lewis	L. F.	Britton
Lowes	R. F.	Shrader
Thomas	C.	Vidal
Bolton	L. G.	Niles
Watters	R. G.	Hahn

Field Goals—Naval Academy: Lewis, (3,) Watters, (2,) Thomas, (2,) Davis, (2,) Bolton, (2,) Lowes; Camp Humphreys: Shrader, (4.) Goals—Naval Academy: Bolton, 7 in 14; Camp Humphreys: Berton, 2 in 6; Shrader, 3 in 4. Referee—Mr. O'Brien of Brooklyn.

MIDDIES WIN SWIM MEET.

Defeat Lehigh in Tank Match by Score of 40 to 8.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Feb. 8.—Lehigh was beaten 40 to 8 by the Midshipmen here this afternoon in a hastily arranged tank match. A first and a second made up the total score of the visitors and the interest in most of the events centred in the competition among the Midshipmen. The exception was the plunge for distance which was won by Rosenmiller, Lehigh, who defeated Jones, Navy, both as to time and distance. Goggins, the Navy Captain, was the big point winner.

The summary:

160-Yard Relay.—Won by Navy in 1:23 2-5; Navy swimmers, Goggins, Emory, Landin, and Gallagher.

220-Yard Swim.—First, Gallagher, Navy; second, Jacobs, Lehigh. Time—2:40 3-5.

40-Yard Back Stroke.—First, Branman, Navy; second, Weed, Navy. Time—0:28.

Plunge for Distance.—First, Rosenmiller, Lehigh, 60 feet in 0:57 4-5; second, Jones, Naval Academy, 59½ feet in 1:00.

LEHIGH WRESTLERS LOSE.

Navy Grapplers Win All but One Decision in Meet.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Feb. 8.—Though putting up a plucky and skillful fight in every bout, Lehigh lost at wrestling to the Naval Academy this afternoon, 27 to 5. The midshipmen gained three falls and three decisions, while Lehigh's only victory was when Sevier defeated Mayberry in the 125-pound class. Spofford, Swigert, and Gallery did specially good work for the winners.

The summary:

115-Pound Class.—Gallery, Navy, threw Childs, Lehigh, with a half Nelson and arm hold in 4 minutes 35 seconds.

125-Pound Class.—Sevier, Lehigh, threw Mayberry, Navy, with a chancery hold in 4 minutes 30 seconds.

135-Pound Class.—Swigert, Navy, gained decision over Bertolet, Lehigh, after regular bout of 9 minutes and extra bout of 6 minutes.

145-Pound Class.—Swafford, Navy, threw Loeser, Lehigh, with a half Nelson and body hold in 8 minutes 10 seconds.

175-Pound Class.—Gates, Navy, awarded fall over Manley, Lehigh, after 8 minutes 35 seconds, half Nelson, wrist lock, and body scissors hold.

STEVENS TRACK TEAM WINS.

Piles Up 44 to 36 Score Against Pratt Institute.

The Stevens Tech track team defeated the Pratt Institute of Brooklyn athletes yesterday in a dual meet at Hoboken, N. J., by a score of 44 to 36. Brown, with victories in the half mile and mile races, and Roberts, with successes in the high hurdles and high jumping contests, led the Stevens Tech team. Brown showed plenty of endurance by taking premier prize in the mile run shortly after he had led his rivals in the half-mile chase. His time for the mile was 4:48 3-5, and for the 880-yard run he was clocked in 2:09.

Clark scored all of Pratt's victories, getting first place in the 25-yard dash, the broad jump and the shot put. He also finished second to Roberts in the high jump.

Hotels to Have Baseball League.

The New York hotels will have a baseball league this year, with a schedule of eighty-eight games, the first of which will be played early in April. Charles LeMaire, assistant manager of the Waldorf-Astoria; Frank A. Ready, office manager of the McAlpin; Frank Creamer of the Biltmore, O. O. McIntyre of the Majestic, J. L. Martin of the Vanderbilt, Robert T. Dunlop of the Commodore, and a number of other hotel men representing the Claridge, Plaza, Pennsylvania, Astor, and Knickerbocker, will meet at the McAlpin Hotel early this week for a discussion of plans for the new league.

GUNNERS IN FORM AT N. Y. A. C. TRAPS

C. Stein and R. S. Smith Carry Away Honors for Day at Travers Island Shoot.

There seems to be no let up in the large fields that are gathering this year to take part in the weekly shoots of the New York Athletic Club. Yesterday, forty-five gunners turned out and as the conditions were about right, the scores were high and all hands had an excellent afternoon of good sport. The best work was done by R. S. Smith, a gunner who seldom breaks into the limelight, and C. Stein, one of the best shots in the club.

The latter gunner won the high scratch prize with the excellent total of ninety-seven out of a possible 100 targets. He also scored legs on the club, the accumulation and the Red Cross cups. Mr. Smith won the high handicap prize and also took home the Travers Island trophy. He also scored on the Haslin, the club, the accumulation and the Red Cross trophies.

The special scratch shoot fell to W. B. Ogden, after a shoot off against R. L. Spotts and B. E. Eldred. The special handicap shoot was won by W. Bauer, also after a shoot off. The new ghost trophies also were thrown. F. E. Williamson was the only man to miss. He fell down on Trap No. 3. On Trap No. 1, J. I. D. Bristol won. F. B. Stephenson turned the same trick on Trap No. 2 and on Trap No. 4, the white "bird" was killed by F. J. Ham. As usual, legs on the Haslin, the club and the accumulation cups were scored by all gunners with full scores of twenty-five targets.

SEEKS ARMY-NAVY BOUT.

Promoter Rickard Plans Title Bout for U. S. Service Boxers.

An army-navy boxing championship bout as the preliminary to the proposed title bout between Jess Willard, champion, and Jack Dempsey, challenger, is the plan of Promoter Tex Rickard. The Western promoter expects to make arrangements for the service bout and is now sounding official sentiment for the purpose of ascertaining if such a contest would be sanctioned.

Rickard plans to hang up a purse of $10,000 for the nation's fighters to strive for. The leading boxers of both branches of the service, here and abroad, would be selected through an elimination process. It is planned to conduct a tournament in both the army and navy before the date of the "big" match, in which both arms of the nation's fighting service will have the best possible representation. In this way Promoter Rickard plans to make his proposed service match an unquestioned title bout.

The Western promoter expects to close negotiations with Jack Dempsey tomorrow. The Salt Lake City heavyweight, according to his manager, Jack Kearns, will arrive here either tonight or tomorrow morning, and a meeting will be held in the afternoon.

Offers for a place to hold the match between Willard and Dempsey continue to pour in to Rickard. Yesterday the Westerner received a communication from a resident of Ohio which promised Rickard a bonus of $250,000 if the bout were promoted in a city which Rickard refused to divulge. Rickard took the offer under consideration.

Tom Cowler of England and Joe Jeannette, veteran colored heavyweight of Hoboken, N. J., will be opponents tomorrow night in the stellar eight-round bout at the Armory A. A. of Jersey City. This will mark the first ring meeting of these two heavyweights.

The next show of the New Jersey Sportsmen's Club at Newark, N. J., is planned for Feb. 26. Four eight-round bouts between prominent boxers are in prospect, but as yet no match has been definitely closed.

OTHER BASKET BALL RESULTS.

Cathedral Prep basket ball team defeated the Upsala Prep five yesterday in a fast game on the latter's court at Kenilworth, N. J., by the score of 37 to 25.

Mainly through the efforts of Birch and Hobbs St. Paul's School basket ball quintet trounced the Morristown H. S. five yesterday in one-sided fashion on the former's court at Garden City, L. I. The score was 31 to 12. This gave the St. Paul's School five its sixth victory.

By a margin of one point the Riverdale Country School basket ball team defeated the Collegiate School five yesterday at Riverdale. The score was 21 to 2. In a game between the second teams of both schools Collegiate was successful by a count of 19 to 16.

The Fordham University Tyros defeated the Xavier College Goblins last night on the Fordham court by a score of 16 to 11. The Fordham Tyros second team downed the Xavier Brownies in another game by a score of 15 to 11.

School Basket Ball Results.

Ethical Culture School's basket ball team, by a rally in the closing minutes of play, defeated the Barnard School five yesterday on the former school's court by a score of 28 to 25. In a preliminary game the Ethical second team defeated the Barnard second five by a score of 27 to 16.

Horace Mann School's basket ball quintet was forced to its limit to defeat the New York Military Academy five yesterday by the score of 27 to 18. The contest was decided on the Horace Mann court. At the end of the first half Horace Mann led by 15 to 12.

Wykeham Rise School of Washington, Conn., defeated the Hillside School five yesterday on the former's court by a score of 35 to 12.

YALE EASILY BEATS COLUMBIA IN TANK

Eli Swimmers Win Five of Six Events in Dual Meet and Score 46 Points to 7.

Columbia University's swimming team was swamped last night in its dual meet with Yale, in the Morningside Heights natatorium. The New Haven natators, taking first and second places in five of the six events which made up the program, rolled up the one-sided score of 46 points to 7.

E. Binney, Jr., was the stellar individual performer. Binney carried off premier laurels in the 50-yard swim, and in doing so equaled the intercollegiate record and created a new Intercollegiate Swimming Association mark. The Eli natator splashed his way through the short distance to victory in 25 seconds.

Binney got off to a good start and gradually drew away from the remainder of the field to win by about seven feet. E. Archibald, a team mate, was second, while A. S. McCabe, the Blue and White entry, was distanced.

In the 100-yard swim a tight race was furnished. The winner was John Hincks of Yale, and he was followed by H. Milroy, another New Havenite, and L. Schiff of Columbia. Hincks and Milroy trudged through the water practically on even terms for about half the distance. Hincks suddenly increased his stroke and drew away to earn a commanding lead. His time was 1:00 2-5.

The closest thing to a Columbia success came in the plunge for distance, in which G. C. Carter, a Blue and White swimmer, finished second. Carter returned a plunge of sixty-five feet, which was two and one-half feet lower than the effort of M. L. Loeb of Yale, the winner. In every other event, with the exception of the relay race, Columbia swimmers occupied third position.

B. S. Benjamin displayed plenty of ability as a diver when he defeated K. T. McAleenan in the fancy dive. Both are Yale men. Benjamin finished with 93.6 points, while McAleenan's share of the points was 86.

In the 220-yard swim H. Hopkins and J. Thompson, both of Yale, furnished an interesting battle for premier laurels, with Hopkins winning the coveted place in 2:55.

Yale's water polo team rallied in the final period just in time to defeat the Blue and White sextet by the score of 36 points to 26. The Columbia team showed the way at the end of the first period by 20 to 15, but in the second period the Yale offensive swept the Morningside Heights players before it.

The summaries:

Fifty-Yard Swim.—Won by E. Binney, Jr., Yale; E. Archibald, Yale, second; A. S. McCabe, Columbia, third. Time—0:25.

100-Yard Swim.—Won by John Hincks, Yale; H. Milroy, Yale, second; L. Schiff, Columbia, third. Time—1:00 2-5.

220-Yard Swim.—Won by H. Hopkins, Yale; J. Thompson, Yale, second; R. C. Rogers, Columbia, third. Time—2:55.

Fancy Diving Contest.—Won by B. S. Benjamin, Yale, with 93.6 points; K. T. McAleenan, Yale, 86 points, second; J. Klemes, Columbia, 82.5 points, third.

Plunge for Distance.—Won by M. L. Loeb, Yale, with 68 feet 6 inches; G. C. Carter, Columbia, with 65 feet, second; G. Boyce, Yale, with 64 feet, third.

200-Yard Relay Swim.—Won by Yale, (Hincks, Milroy, Binney, and Archibald;) Columbia, (Schiff, McCabe, Gallagher, and Rogers,) second.

Make A Woman Your Consulting Clothes Expert!

IF a man fingers a Piece of Cloth, he's Stanley in Darkest Africa. He's blindly groping—he doesn't know. If a woman fingers a Piece of Cloth, her fingers, trained from childhood to be as sensitive as a physician's or a magician's, have eyes—she knows.

Same way with Tailoring, with Linings, with Trimmings, with Seams, with Buttonholes; with the Contour of a Collar, the Shape of a Shoulder, the Lay of a Lapel.

KNOWING that a woman knows Value more than any man, and that Stein-Bloch Clothes have it more than any others, we invite every woman solicitous for the appearance of any man to come along with him to the John David Shop as Consulting Expert.

A WOMAN'S expert opinion won't hurt a man and can't hurt our clothes, for Value, genuinely given and truly there, is afraid of no man and no woman. May we expect you both to-morrow?

It has to be first won, then held.

GOODRICH DE LUXE Truck Tires have won the reputation as the most resilient, enduring and economical of all truck tires, —won it by performance, by doing the work a truck tire should do a little better, a little surer, a little longer and a little cheaper than any other make of truck tire;

—not only won that reputation but held it continuously, unremittingly, valiantly, in the face of every test.

BUILDING TRADES STRIKE IS LIMITED

Only Contracts Upon Which Work Is Being Done Will Be Affected.

LOCKOUT GOES INTO EFFECT

Carpenters in Uniform, Says Their Head, Will Be Paid to Picket the Army Base in Brooklyn.

The deadlock on the condition under which the carpenters striking against the Building Trades Employers' Association will return to work continued yesterday, and the threatened lockout of union employes in the allied building trades who declared a sympathetic strike went into effect at noon. The threatened general strike of building trade unionists throughout the country will not be called tomorrow, it was learned last night, but will be limited to contracts on which association members are engaged.

Government and private contracts in about twenty cities will thus be affected, including work in Bridgeport, Conn.; New Haven, Waterbury, Hartford, Norwich, Conn.; Boston, Lawrence, Mass.; Providence, R. I.; Camden, N. J.; Washington, D. C.; Buffalo, Cleveland, Columbus, Ohio; Detroit, Chicago, Terre Haute, Ind.; Mobile, Ala., and New Orleans.

The carpenters, said William L. Hutcheson, President of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, would not return to work unless they received assurance that they would get the increase of a dollar a day. For the builders Ronald P. Taylor, President of the Building Trades Employers' Association, issued a statement in which he said:

"When the strike is officially called off, and the men return to work, a committee for the Employers' Association will meet the representatives of the men at once."

It was a physical impossibility to obtain the consent of men who have been striking for many weeks, said Mr. Hutcheson, to return to work without assurance that their demands have been granted. The builedrs, on the other hand, declare that no formal demands have been presented, and at a conference between their representatives and those of the carpenters questions other than wages might come up for settlement. They refused, also, to establish a precedent in treating with men on strike.

Mr. Taylor declared that the association would base its stand on lines similar to that taken by Charles Piez, the spokesman for the Government in the Seattle strike—that work would not be resumed unless the men return to work, and wages would not be increased. He declared, however, that work would be continued at the United States Army Base, Brooklyn, tomorrow, and if the union men did not return to work there, others would be employed.

"If the association wants war," said Mr. Hutcheson "they will get it. There are 500 discharged soldiers, carpenters by trade who are unable to find employment, and these will be paid to picket the Army Base in their uniforms. The men will be marched to the base in a body on Monday in case the employers attempt to put through their threat of an open shop. And if necessary my own son, discharged naval officer, will lead these picketing forces.

"We invite the Building Trade Employers' Association, since they have raised the question of patriotism, to submit the entire case to the War Labor Board. If they are patriotic they will place their case in the hands of the tribunal established by the President of the United States for the settlement of disputes between capital and labor."

If the builders objected to his membership on the War Labor Board, said Mr. Hutcheson, who is an alternate Chairman, he would gladly retire during the adjudicating of the case.

Thomas R. Priest, International Vice-President of the Bricklayers', Plasterers', and Masons' Union, said last night that there would be no strike in the allied trades.

"We cannot strike because we have been locked out" he declared. A factor which is becoming increasingly apparent in the situation is the decreasing cost of building materials. The employers are all protected by strike clauses in their contracts, and some of them stand to make more money with a strike on now than they would if the work continued. When we put this matter up to them at the conference early in the week we were told that this was none of our business. The carpenters intend to stand pat. They will hold out until May, and then will work according to the law of supply and demand. That is, if a carpenter is needed badly, $20 a day will not be too large a wage for him."

Union leaders said yesterday that 1919 was expected to be a banner year for building construction in Manhattan and that plans for buildings to cost $83,000,000 have been filed.

THREE AVIATORS KILLED.

Their Seaplane Plunges 500 Feet Into Bay Near Pensacola.

PENSACOLA, Fla., Feb. 8.—Three naval flyers, Ensigns Duane Rutledge, Robins, La.; David Mingle, Tyrone, Penn., and Ralph McCormack, East Boston, Mass., were killed last night when their seaplane from the training station here fell 500 feet into the bay and was demolished.

Spectators who saw the machine go into a nose dive thought the aviators were manoeuvring, even after the plane struck the water. When the machine did not rise, mechanics thought engine trouble had developed and went to assist, only to find the three bodies floating in the wreckage of the plane.

There probably is not a man, woman or child among the 100,000,000 inhabitants of the United States upon whom the war has not had a profound effect. Great reforms are being hastened and this will be a better and cleaner world after the ordeals of fire through which it has passed. The ratification by the States of the Prohibition Amendment and the struggle for a League of Nations, which means a greater spirit of brotherhood among mankind, are signs of the times. The participation of the United States as never before in the world's affairs has brought to the people new interests not limited to the neighborhood, town or city in which they live, but interests that are world-wide. A miracle has been wrought in men's minds, a miracle in which there is a tremendous thirst for knowledge, a knowledge which is absolutely necessary today, as never before. Where can people find correct, authoritative, and comprehensive information on the many different subjects in which they are interested, as a consequence of this awakening? They naturally turn to the wonderful storehouse of knowledge—the world's greatest guide to correct and authoritative information—The Encyclopaedia Britannica. The Britannica furnishes practical, detailed, and authoritative articles of great value to the business man, to the manufacturer, to the importer, to the worker in the many new industries. The Britannica will give a foundation for study of subjects which will be uppermost in our minds for years to come. The Britannica is the great work of useful information. It is the book for Americans today who are waking up to new thoughts, new work and new interests.

A Complete Library of Knowledge

But this marvelous work with its 41,000 separate articles is more than a guide for the enterprising business man of the United States, fitting him to be a citizen of the world—a world merchant. The Britannica is a complete library of knowledge on every subject. It discusses in a way that you can understand every branch of science, industry, literature, art, religion, inventions and engineering; history and race development; wars and peace; architecture, astronomy, chemistry, sociology, education, steam, electricity, geology and geography, biography, law and physics. You and your family will find in the Britannica a liberal education. In answer to the hundred questions which every day come to your mind and to your wives' and children's minds—it will tell you more about everything than you can get from any other source.

What Is Before Us?

We are in a transitional period between war and peace. There will be many serious post-war problems which will demand settlement. Do you know what the tendencies are in our industrial life? Does peace send the prices of commodities up or down? Will wages go up or down? Will money be "easy" or scarce? Have nations heretofore faced bankruptcy or have they repudiated their war debts? Will there be a tremendous immigration to this country or will there be emigration? Are you inclined to be stampeded with fear of what will happen when peace is finally concluded or are you sitting down and studying the facts of past cases that were somewhat similar? Are you familiar with what happened after other wars—in England after the Napoleonic campaigns—in the United States after the Civil War—to France, to Germany and to Neutrals after the Franco-Prussian War? Do you understand the questions that come up in the Peace Conferences—geographical, political, industrial? Are you equipped to know what is justice and right in dealing with Germany; also with regard to the "new nations" of Europe?

This wonderful book of knowledge—the new Encyclopaedia Britannica—literally brings the whole world to the reader. It tells all about foreign countries, their people, their history, their progress, their resources, their imports and exports. An hour a day with the Britannica will give you as clear and comprehensive an idea of the rest of the world as we Americans now have of the States of the Union.

Woman Needs the Britannica As Never Before

The war has changed the status of women industrially and politically. By the necessities of war women have been forced to take the places of men in our industries and they are successfully filling positions of great responsibility. The mother must keep abreast of the great thoughts and movements that are taking place throughout the world, that are vitally affecting her. Woman today in her greater and more important place in the world needs the Encyclopaedia Britannica as never before—she needs it to teach her how to fulfill her new status as a citizen—how to make her more efficient in the business world, and, as a mother, to make herself broader and a bigger woman so she can bring her children up according to the highest standards.

WOULD UNDERTAKE WORLD GOLD FUND

Federal Reserve Board Declares for System to Facilitate International Exchange.

WAR FINANCING REVIEWED

How Watch Was Kept on Trade Dealings for Enemy Account Revealed in Annual Report.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—Willingness to undertake development of an international gold exchange fund to facilitate financial transactions between nations without actual shipment of gold was expressed today by the Federal Reserve Board in its report for 1918. This arrangement would be similar to that now maintained by the board to settle balances between banks within the United States.

The fund might be developed among the Entente nations and a few leading neutrals, "but it is conceivable that all civilized countries may eventually be participants," said the board. The gold would be deposited in trust in some Government bank or banks to guarantee exchange obligations, and it was proposed that the fund should be limited to current commercial and exchange transactions.

This is one of the suggestions for future financial development growing out of successful domestic war operation of the Federal Reserve system, which the report reviewed in detail. Referring to the settlement of trade balances in this country through the Federal Reserve clearing channels, the report said:

"The successfhl operation of the gold settlemen fund has suggested the possibility of avoiding shipments of gold from one country to another in settlement of balances arising out of ordinary commercial transactions, and the board is ready, if authorized to do so, to undertake negotiations looking to the establishment of an international gold exchange fund, or to assist in any way in its power in negotiations which may be begun by a government department looking to that end. The board believes that definite plans cannot perhaps be worked out untill a stable peace has been assured.

"Assuming that the leading nations of the world will be at peace for a long period of years, there seems to be no reason why an international arrangement of this kind should not operate as efficiently as our own gold settlement fund which has cleared enormous transactions between distant sections of a country of vast area. The saving of loss and expense incident to abrasion and transportation charges and interest on gold transferred will be enormous, and the advantage to the commerce of the world will be incalculable."

Foreign Exchange Scrutiny.

The report disclosed for the first time extensive operations of the Federal Reserve Board's system of regulating foreign exchange transactions of the last year to prevent dealings on enemy account. Agents were maintained at all cable offices, and these worked in close co-operation with other Government agencies to detect enemy transactions. Total purchases and sales of demand and cable exchanges between dealers in the United States from Feb. 20, 1918, when the regulation became effective, to Dec. 31 were $5,158,000,000, of which $3,737,000,000, or 72 per cent., were for exchange on Great Britain.

The report told in cryptic financial terms how the Federal Reserve System in this country functioned in co-operation with the Treasury in tremendous war tasks of raising Liberty Loans, floating certificate issues, settling trade balances, discounting billions of commercial paper, assisting in the rationing of capital, and providing a free channel for flow of credits to all parts of the country where they were most needed.

Owing to war exigencies, said the report, "the Federal Reserve Board felt it to be its duty to assist in making effective the policies determined upon by the Secretary of the Treasury, however inconsistent some of the steps necessary to be taken might be with principles which usually govern in normal times.

"Within a few months the country's war financing will have been completed, and the board can then deal with the problems incident to bringing our credit structure and our banking operations back to a normal basis.

"The ability of the country to absorb investments has proved to be far greater than had been anticipated, and our credit structure, although expanded, is unshaken. We have no currency problems, and conditions are not comparable with those which existed at the close of the civil war. True, the purchasing power of money has declined, but this is due to the urgent and abnormal demand for goods and services and the accompanying expansion of credit and currency."

Expansion of Banking Credits.

The board predicted that banking credits now concentrated in this country soon would be extended through the world with the development of foreign trade. Attention was called to the fact that even during the war strain the gold reserve maintained against Federal Reserve notes never fell below 60 per cent., though only 40 per cent. was required by law. This was interpreted as indicating a healthy condition necessary as a prelude to financing of foreign trade.

Warning against danger in the post-war readjustment, the board said:

"Drastic contraction would be followed by results no less disastrous than those which would attend undue expension, and the processes of deflation must therefore be permitted to work themselves out in a gradual and orderly manner. Discount rates, which for the past eighteen months have been based on the rates borne by the Government issues, must for the time being continue to be fixed with regard to Treasury requirements, but when the war obligations of the Government have been digested, and the invested assets of the Federal Reserve Banks have been restored to a commercial basis, rates can be established with reference to the commercial requirements of the country."

An idea of the service rendered by the Federal Reserve system in connection with war financing may be gained from the statement that since the war began $31,452,000,000 of Liberty bonds and certificates of indebtedness have been subscribed for and collected through the twelve reserve banks. Rediscount operations between the reserve banks during the year were reported as $655,635,000.

Despite the big strain on the reserve system, the surplus over the required reserves has fallen only $17,400,000 since the declaration of war. The so-called free gold, or surplus of reserves, on Dec. 27, 1918, was reported as $528,600,000. Aggregate net earnings of the banks were $55,446,000 last year.

The Federal Reserve system now includes 936 State banks and trust companies, with aggregate capital and surplus of $750,000,000, and aggregate resources of about $7,330,000,000, the board reported. The number of State institutions eligible for admission, including those now members, is 8,500, with resources of about $13,500,000,000. Last year 686 State banks, with aggregate resources of about $2,300,000,000, became members.

In Aid of Lenox Hill Settlement.

Society women are to act as auctioneers at the sale and exhibit which opens on Tuesday at 723 Fifth Avenue in aid of the Lenox Hill Settlement. One of the first things to be sold will be three pairs of live wild Canadian geese.

An interesting feature will be the exhibition of Czechoslovak art and the making on the spot of bas-relief portraits by an Italian sculptor.

Mrs. R. Penn Smith, Jr., formerly Miss Carol Harriman, heads the Executive Committee. Mrs. Landon Thorne is to act as saleswoman in the furniture department and Mrs. Lydig Hoyt will sell clothing. Miss Katherine Mackay, daughter of Clarence Mackay, is to be among the sellers, also the Misses Georgia Appleton, Edith Pratt, Molly de Forest, Margaret Flint, and Constance Jennings.

WEDS W. EUGENE KIMBALL.

Mrs. Josephine Hotchkiss Williams a Bride in St. Thomas's.

W. Eugene Kimball of Glen Cove and New York and Mrs. Josephine Hotchkiss Williams, the widow of Waldron Williams and a daughter of the late Horace L. Hotchkiss of Rye, N. Y., were married at 3:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon in the chantry of St. Thomas's Church, the rector, the Rev. Dr. Ernest M. Stires, performing the ceremony.

The bride entered the chantry from the side, walking with her son, Barent Williams. She wore a blue chiffon gown, topped by a hat of red feathers. There were no attendants, and the guests, about seventy-five in all, were relatives and close friends. Mr. and Mrs. Kimball will spend their honeymoon at Palm Beach, and on their return will make their city home at 521 Park Avenue. Mrs. Kimball is a sister of Mrs. Arthur Lucien Niles.

Mr. Kimball is a broker at 5 Nassau Street. He has a country place, Cedarcroft, Glen Cove, and has made his Winter home at the St Regis. His first wife, formerly Miss Edith Gibb of Brooklyn, died in 1914. Mr. Kimball has three daughters, Mrs. William Ross Proctor, Jr., Mrs. John T. Terry, Jr., and Miss Hope Williams.

Schermerhorn-Fueslein.

The wedding of Philip Grim Schermerhorn, a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Stevens Schermerhorn, and Miss Elsa Carla Fueslein, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Fueslein of 120 East Eighty-sixth Street, took place at 4:30 yesterday afternoon in the chantry of St. Thomas's Church, the Rev. Dr. E. M. Stires officiating.

The bride, who walked up the aisle with her maid of honor, Miss Leonie Fueslein, wore a white chiffon and lace frock and a tulle veil. The bridesmaids were the Misses Gertrude Anderson, Marion Alexander, Constance Schermerhorn, and Vera Fueslein, another sister of the bride. They wore yellow with touches of lavender and carried jonquils. Major E. Gibert Schermerhorn was his brother's best man, and the ushers were Archibald Stevenson, James T. Powers, the actor; Captain Edwin Starbrook, and Paul Gibert Thebaud, Sr. An informal reception was held in the chantry.

Miss Rush to Wed Lieut. J. J. Cabot.

Captain William R. Rush, Commandant of the Navy Yard in Charlestown, Mass., and Mrs. Rush of Boston announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Catharine Rush, to Lieutenant James Jackson Cabot, Aero Squadron 188, U. S. N., and a son of Lieutenant Godfrey Lowell Cabot, U. S. N., of Cambridge, Mass. Lieutenant Cabot was graduated from Harvard in 1913. After studying aviation he was sent about a year ago to England, conducting new airplanes to France, and served as a fighting flyer the last month before the signing of the armistice. He recently returned home.

Boynton-Porter.

The marriage is announced of Miss Helen Porter, daughter of George Bruce Porter of Detroit, Mich., and Frank David Boynton, Jr., son of the Superintendent of Schools and Mrs. F. D. Boynton of Ithaca, N. Y., which took place on Friday afternoon at 1 o'clock at the Church of the Heavenly Rest, this city. The bride was graduated a week ago from the College of Architecture at Cornell. Mr. Boynton was a crack runner at Cornell, where he was graduated in 1917.

MUSIC

By James Gibbons Huneker

Boston Symphony Matinee.

He would not be Henri Rabaud and the composer of "Marouf" if his program selections were uniformly colorless. Yesterday afternoon at Carnegie Hall color predominated in the scheme of music-making by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Brahms, his second symphony, did begin the program, but Fauré, Saint-Saëns, and Berlioz atoned for the so-called "drab" quality of that singularly charming and eloquent composition. Perhaps it was a Gallic reading; it certainly sounded euphonious, and the transparency of the orchestral voices was so marked that we could not always hear the original Brahms. His spirit filtered through the open bars and was lost; the allegretto was a solitary exception. It may be confessed, however, that even if not always Brahms, it was interesting. This does not apply to the first movement, which we missed. Delicacy and clarity were the chief characteristics of Mr. Rabaud's reading. But the scale of dynamics was a narrow one. This also means emotional dynamics.

Fauré's incidental music to Haraucourt's comedy, "Shylock," proved innocuous. The play with the "Jew that Shakespeare drew" was hardly Shakespearan. We recall Haraucourt as a clever writer and a deviser of exotic forms of spectacle, a perfume concert among the rest, which doubtless suggested the odorous concert in this hall years ago, which Sadakichi Hartmann directed. At the time the Paris boulevard press irreverently referred to him as "Monsieur Haricot," in a word, the precious bean dear to New England. Well-scored, vapid music is that of Fauré. The symphonic poem "Phaeton," by Saint-Saëns, was the high-water mark of the matinée. Both band and conductor met in happiest confluence. The "Carnival Romain" was a brilliant exposition of Berlioz at his brilliant best. There was a large audience and plenty of applause. We are still hoping to hear Rimski-Korsakoff's symphonic poem "Antar," which Brooklyn enjoyed last month, but which Mr. Rabaud has not yet vouchsafed the greatest part of Greater New York.

CONCERTS OF A DAY.

The Philharmonic with Guiomar Novaes—Damrosch and Bauer.

Guiomar Novaes and the Philharmonic Orchestra gave the third of the Saturday evening concerts of New York's oldest musical society last evening in Carnegie Hall, where a large audience was attracted by a program out of the usual order. The Brazilian pianist was heard at her best in Chopin's concerto No. 2, and Mr. Stransky conducted Rachmaninoff's "Isle of the Dead" to great applause. There were also Cornelius's overture to the "Barber of Bagdad" and Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Scheherazade."

An audience of young folk greeted the morning matinée of the symphony concerts for children yesterday in Aeolian Hall, with varied music of Haydn, Flotow, Massenet, von Blon, and Grainger. Mr. Damrosch explained the drums and other percussion instruments, which his listeners watched with shining eyes as they did their martial bit in the ensuing performance.

Harold Bauer, the pianist, at his afternoon recital in Aeolian Hall yesterday produced for the first time here "A Set of Eight," by Edward Royce, a composer whose works have figured on two recent programs. He gave others of Bach-Tausig, Schubert, Schumann, Chopin, and Wagner.

Felix Garziglia, a French pianist, made his second appearance here last evening in Aeolian Hall, playing a program of Chopin, Liszt, and his countrymen, Chabrier, Ravel, and Debussy.

OPERA STARS IN MATINEES

Farrar Sings Carmen, Garden Gismonda—Helena Marsh's Debut.

There was a battle royal of two favorite singing actresses of the American stage for New York operagoers yesterday, and honors about even as to the matinée crowds of enthusiastic admirers. Geraldine Farrar reappeared in "Carmen" at the Metropolitan, with Martinelli, Couzinou, Rothier, and Conductor Monteux, a change of cast presenting Miss Sundelius as Micaela.

Mary Garden at the Lexington appeared in Fevrier's "Gismonda," the first repetition in the Chicago company's season here, and another fine audience followed her latest impersonation of a Duchess of Athens. Fontaine, Maguenat, Huberdeau, Journet, and others sang, and Campanini returned to his old place in the conductor's chair.

Helena Marsh, a young American mezzo-soprano, had her first hearing as a member of the Metropolitan cast in last evening's performance of "Manon Lescaut" when she sang the youth who appears in Manon's boudoir in the second act. It was a modest début, well sung, and the young woman looked pleasant in boy's clothes. Muzio, Crimi, Montesanto, and Sugurola were in the more familiar rôles, and Papi conduced. In spite of bad weather it was a field night for the Italians.

Puccini ruled two opera houses last night, his most popular "Madame Butterfly" drawing a great crowd at the Lexington, where Tamaki Miura, Lamont, and Bouillez repeated their success of a week ago, conducted by Polacco. The large audience was especially noticeable for the presence not only of New York society folk on a "popular" Saturday night, but also for the great number of the Japanese prima donna's countrymen in the boxes.

Chas. Dullin Leaves French Players.

Charles Dullin, the versatile actor of Director Jacques Copeau's French company at the Theatre du Vieux Colombier, has severed his connection with the French company and is shortly to return to Paris.

M. Dullin has been connected with M. Copeau's company since its inception and has been one of the favorites at the French theatre, appearing with equal success in leading comedy and tragedy rôles there.

Comedy in Aid of Darrach Home.

For the benefit of the Darrach Home for Crippled Children, the Amateur Comedy Club will present a three-act satire on Greenwich Village called "The Village," written by Frank W. Tuttle, on Saturday evening, Feb. 15, at the Garden Theatre. Many prominent women are acting as patronesses. Mrs. N. M. Pond of 53 West Seventy-fifth Street is receiving applications for tickets.

DRAMA

By John Corbin

A Mid-Western View of Greenwich Village.

HOBOHEMIA, a comedy in three acts, by Sinclair Lewis. At the Greenwich Village Theatre.

Jamesina Jasselby	Helen Westley
Oliver Jasselby	Noel Tearle
Ann Saffron	Grace Morse
Ysetta Jones	Mona Bruns
Jandorf Fish	Theodore Doucet
Nona Barnes	Beatrice Prentice
Ciro Malavici	Geoffrey C. Stein
Dennis Brown	Frank M. Thomas
Bill Hupp	Ralph Bunker
Miss Smith	Ruby Craven
Ole' Clothes Man	Phil White
Miss Pewslip	Lois Frances Clark
Inga	Hilda Englund
Little Child	Gladys Plingo

Home talent in satire having apparently run down, the Greenwich Village Theatre opened its doors last night to a skit on denizens of the locality which is written from the point of view of the Middle West.

"Hobohemia" appeared first as a story in The Saturday Evening Post, and has now been refashioned by its author, Sinclair Lewis, into a three-act comedy. The plot is the usual one. A silly little girl comes to New York to find her "soul," leaving the brave and opulent young real estater, who loves her, back in the Middle West—or, as he calls it, the Mid-West. He follows and rescues her, overwhelming the soul specialists with the size of his wad of greenbacks, and beating them at their own game. The model is that of the late departed "Walk-Offs," "The Country Cousin," and countless other works of art the primal inspiration of which is the movies.

As usual, the author's strategy consists in the very simple process of representing the citizens of this burg as howling idiots, and the Mid-Western young lover as a paragon of brains and homely virtue. It is a stand-off between the two lots as to which is the more preposterous. That the Village affords plentiful material for satire has been demonstrated by Lawrence Langener, Susan Glaspell, and other playwrights of the Washington Square and Provincetown schools—as has also the fact that the Villagers like nothing better than to see their foibles intelligently ridiculed. What they will say to Mr. Lewis's heavy-handed caricatures may be imagined, but not set down in cold type.

The cast contained a number of excellent actors. The free versifier of Noel Tearle, the cubist painter of Geoffrey Stein, and the Ole' Clothes Man of Phil White are capital creations, worthy of a far better play. The admirable Helen Westley, who played a smock-frocking dressmaker, was hopelessly submerged in the violent silliness of her part. As the Mid-Western hero Frank M. Thomas showed an agreeable and vigorous personality, but was likewise so handicapped as to be out of the running time. The play was staged by Frank Conroy. On the whole, the most successful feature of the production is its title. The more one knows of what is called Bohemia the more one respects the hobo. But the title had nothing to do with the play.

John B. Van Schaick Dead in France

George Ellsworth Koues.

George Ellsworth Koues, of an old Knickerbocker family, died yesterday at his home, 70 East Seventy-seventh Street, in his seventieth year. Mr. Koues was a son of the late Theodore Mitchell Koues and Louisa Henderson Board Koues of New York, and was born in Rahway, N. J.

Mr. Koues was for a number of years with the Equitable Trust Company. He was one of the organizers of the Society of Colonial Wars of New Jersey, of which he was Secretary for a number of years. He was a member of the New York Society of Colonial Wars and a member of the Board of Governors of the Society of the Dudley Family of New England. The Chaplain of the Society of Colonial Wars will read the funeral service Monday.

Surviving are six daughters, Mrs. Alanson McDowell Gray of New York, Mrs William Greene Roelker of Rhode Island, Mrs. Ernest Sachs of St. Louis, and Misses Helen, Dorothy, and Rose W. Koues of this city.

PIG IRON OUTPUT STILL ON DECLINE

Many Furnaces Going Out of Blast and Suspension May Be Indefinite.

RAPID DROP IN COKE PRICE

Finished Steel Keeps Up Rigidly—Hope in Reduced Ocean Freight Rates.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Feb. 8.—Production of pig iron in January was at the rate of about 39,250,000 tons a year, this being about 4 per cent. under the December rate, and 6 per cent. under the record rate attained last September. Production continues to decline, and this may easily continue for several months. The decrease in output is due chiefly to furnaces going out of blast. Some of the furnaces are to be relined and improved, but many furnace owners are indisposed to undertake improvements at this time, on account of the high cost of all construction work.

The decline in coke prices has been rapid. The first shading of the Government limit on furnace coke occurred a trifle less than three weeks ago, but in the last day or two Connellsville coke has been offering at from $4 to $5 a ton, the Government limit on furnace coke having been $6. It is said that coke offered at less than $5 is not of standard grade, and that may easily be the case, for a great deal of coke far below standard has been made. During the war nearly all of it was shipped to furnaces and invoiced as furnace coke, at the Government limit.

Iron and steel scrap values are still on the decline, not so much because of the heavy offerings as by reason of the very light consuming demand. The recognized quotation on basic pig iron is $30, Valley, and heavy melting steel scrap can be bought at half this figure or a trifle more, but the steel makers seem to prefer to use pig iron even though it is contended that the cost of production is not very much under the quoted market price. Producers generally are actuated by a desire to keep as much labor employed as possible.

Finished steel prices are being rigidly maintained, there being no signs of the slightest shading in any quarter. The character of orders now being placed is such that the buying would be discouraged rather than encouraged by weakness in prices, as the buyers are interested in filling only absolutely known requirements, and would not buy any additional material, no matter what the price asked. The same observation applies to unfinished steel and to pig iron, except that occasionally there are resales of pig iron at cut prices. Eventually a time will come when price will be a consideration, and then such prices will be made as will start buying on a large scale.

Aided by Low Sea Rates.

The United States Shipping Board has reduced ocean freights to all points, putting them on a parity with rates from British ports, and the iron and steel export market will now have a real tryout. Hitherto American manufacturers have been at a disadvantage as compared with their British competitors, on account of high ocean freights. If there has really been considerable iron and steel demand from the non-producing countries the British makers would by this time have booked a fair tonnage of business to keep them employed for a time, their industry being about only one-third the size of the American industry.

An interesting fact in the steel situation has received little attention. The United States Steel Corporation as a whole has been operating at a considerably heavier rate than the independents, and has been putting surplus material into stocks. The condition may bring about interesting developments later. It is estimated that the corporation is operating at an average of 85 to 90 per cent. of capacity, while the independents are operating at an average of about 50 per cent. The idleness is greatest in the East. Operations in the Pittsburgh district are not much below the best rate attained last year. Men are being laid off at most of the mills, but they belong to the common labor class, and there are still unfilled places for skilled workmen.

Among the finished steel products the demand for sheets is the heaviest. The most conspicuous buyer is the automobile industry, which will soon attain its former rate of production. There is very fair demand from metal furniture manufacturers, but very little demand for sheets used for building purposes. Demand for electrical sheets is very moderate indeed. The leading interest has booked a large order for electrical sheets from the French Government, sufficient to enable it to run full in the departments concerned for sixty days. The steel trade is looking to the farmer more than to the building trade for the earliest revival in demand. The farmer normally consumed large tonnages of wire products, particularly nails, wire fence and a considerable tonnage of sheets demand for agricultural implements is already of fair proportions. The lightest call for steel is from the building trades generally and from the railroads. The Railroad Administration has placed an order for 600 locomotives, but there is no car buying in sight. Nearly three-fourths of the 100,000 freight cars ordered last April are still to be delivered. It is reported that railroads are considering buying 500,000 tons of rails, but the vital question of price does not seem to have been seriously considered as yet. To bring their track up to the condition of a few years ago the railroads should use from 1,500,000 to 2,000,000 tons of rails a year for relaying purposes in the next two or three years.

No Fixed Price on Rails.

Standard section rails continue quotable at $55 per gross ton for Bessemer and $57 for open hearth, f. o. b. mill. These quotations are of course purely nominal as regards large lots, since there is nothing under negotiation that would make the matter of price a vital issue. The prices mentioned are simply those that the War Industries Board and the rail mills agreed on last September. So far as known they govern settlements for rails bought by the Government for military purposes. At the time the arrangement was made the Railroad Administration refused to sanction it, contending that the prices were too high. If the matter were under discussion at this time the Railroad Administration would undoubtedly make a still stronger claim for lower prices.

It was on Sept. 1, 1875, that the Carnegie Steel Company rolled its first steel rail at the Edgar Thomson works, Braddock, Penn. It is probably within the bounds of truth to say that today they have less rail tonnage on their books than at any time since several weeks before the date mentioned, as orders were probably taken before the first rails were rolled. At the present time the company is understood to have only 2,000 tons of standard rails on its books, and there is doubtless a reason other than that of mill conditions why the tonnage has not been rolled and shipped. The Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company has a little tonnage on its books, and the Illinois Steel Company has what is, in the light of present conditions, a considerable tonnage.

Rumors were traveling here this week that 500,000 tons of rails were required by the railroads, but whether any definite steps are being taken to put the business through is not known. However, it is felt that neither the Railroad Administration nor individual roads would consider buying any rails at present prices. There is no demand for billets at $43.50, the recognized price, and rails used to be considered worth not much more than billets. The 500,000 tons of rails mentioned is a small amount for the railroads. Some years ago it was computed that rails wear out at the rate of something like 225,000 or 250,000 ton-miles of freight traffic. This formula would mean that if the railroads year after year hauled 250,000,000,000 ton-miles of freight they would require a million tons a year of rails for replacement purposes. Since October, 1916, the freight traffic has been averaging considerably above 400 billion ton-miles a year, while replacements lagged somewhat behind in 1917, and far behind in 1918. To restore and maintain their properties, it is safe to say that the railroads ought to replace rails this year and next at 1,500,000 to 2,000,000 tons a year, and with a fair tonnage of rails taken for electric lines, for industrial use, for steam track extensions and for export, there is a possibility of the record rail output being approached or maybe even surpassed. That record was made in 1906, with almost 4,000,000 tons produced of standard light and girder rails.

Fair Demand for Tubes.

There is a fair demand for tubular goods, running between 50 and 60 per cent. of productive capacity. Demand continues to be in the line of oil-country goods. Deliveries on old contracts for line pipe are now fairly large, but not much new business in this commodity is coming out. Demand for standard steel pipe is relatively light, due to the small amount of building in progress and to the very conservative attitude of jobbers.

Steel bars are being held strictly at the recognized quotation of 2.70c, Pittsburgh, plus freight to destination. Bars rolled from old rails are held on the basis of 2.80c. There is a moderate amount of specifying on old contracts for steel bars, and what buying does occur is only for very prompt shipment. Iron bar prices present a still more irrational structure, with the recent decline on the part of Western mills on bars for Western shipment. About the beginning of the year they adopted 2.90c, Pittsburgh, as their price basis, against the 3.50c at mill that obtained during the period of Government control. The Pittsburgh mills continued to regard 3.50c, Pittsburgh, as their market, and the Eastern mills continued to regard their price as 3.50c, Pittsburgh, plus freight, if for Eastern delivery, and 3.50c, mill, if for Western shipment. Then further competition developed on the part of Western mills, whereby they sold at 2.90c, Pittsburgh, for delivery at or near the Atlantic seaboard, thus shipping against their freight. The Pittsburgh and Eastern mills are selling practically nothing, and the Western mills very little, showing that it does very little good to reduce prices in times like these.

There is quite a difference in the rate of operation of tin plate mills by the leading interest and the independents. The former last week ran all of its mills, but as it ran only fifteen turns instead of sixteen its percentage was a little over 90 per cent. This week it operated 99 per cent. of its tin mills and a rate between 90 and 100 per cent. is to be continued this month and next, there being orders enough to keep them going this way. On the other hand, the independents are averaging not over 50 per cent. One large independent producer averaged 82 per cent. last week, but was idle this week, and expects either to run week about or continue operating a small number of mills. The divergence in rate of operation is explained chiefly by the leading interest chancing to have business with consumers whose requirements are heavier at this time than are the requirements of other consumers.

Heavy Shipments of Tin Plate.

There are heavy shipments of tin plate to the oil trade, particularly in connection with the large tonnage that was permitted by the War Industries Board's order of late last October. Prior to that time hardly any tin plate had been going to the oil trade, so there have been arrears to make up. The price is being strictly maintained, $7.35 per base box, free on board mill, Pittsburgh. There is not much contracting for the half year, the average buyer preferring to purchase from hand to mouth. Among consumers there is some speculation as to what will be the price for the second half of the year. There are no definite guesses on this, but in one quarter the suggestion is hazarded that there may be none, or that, in other words, the mills will postpone taking up the subject until the fourth quarter.

There has been no interruption in the decline of scrap values, there being practically no bottom to the market, since neither dealers nor consumers have any definite idea at what figure they would begin to buy. A sale of 500 tons of rather select heavy melting steel is reported at $15, delivered, and it is said the purchase was made more as an accommodation to the dealer than anything else. The two principal users of wrought iron turnings are understood to be bidding $9, and not anxious to buy even at that price.

There is very little activity in the pig iron market. Largest sales recently reported are 200 tons of basic and 150 tons of foundry iron, both for prompt shipment and at recognized prices. There have been some resales at cut prices, but details are carefully guarded. The furnaces appear all to be adhering strictly to regular quotations. Only a few furnaces have blown out, and it is stated, furthermore, that very little iron has been piled at furnaces.

Coke production in the Connellsville region last week was 262,644 tons, a loss of 14,680 tons from the preceding week. Compared with the corresponding week of 1918, when the weather was at zero and below day after day, the production of the past week was about 48,000 tons greater. The market is very quiet. Shipments are going forward without interruption, hence furnaces have no occasion to make open market purchases. Standard coke commands $5 to $5.50, and foundry, spot or prompt, $6 to $6.50.

Coal production during the week in the region fell to 171,399 tons, a loss of 18,308 tons from the preceding week. Reduced to its coal equivalent, the coke production represents 393,966 tons of coal, making the aggregate coal production 565,365 tons, a decrease of 40,328 tons from the preceding week.

PROVIDENT LOAN'S GROWTH.

President Bannard Reviews a Quarter of a Century of Activity.

In his annual report for 1918, Otto T. Bannard, President of the Provident Loan Society, reviews the history of the organization, which has completed its twenty-fifth year. Since its institution the society has made nearly 6,500,000 loans, aggregating $228,000,000, says Mr. Bannard's report, which was made public yesterday.

"A quarter of a century has already passed," says the report, "since the original incorporators, upon the initiative of the Charity Organization Society of New York, obtained at the end of the legislative session at Albany, after what seemed like insurmountable opposition to the so-called 'Vanderbilt pawnshop,' the special act authorizing the Provident Loan Society to organize and transact business. The original subscription was $100,000, and on May 21, 1894, after persuading a professional pawnbroker, Leopold Hecht, to give up his existing office and come to us to protect us from the wiles of the dishonest with their stolen goods and imitation jewels, and teach us the technique of what was to most of us an unknown world, we launched the enterprise, but with certain modest misgivings as to our future.

"In war or peace the service rendered to the community has been most necessary and acceptable, and the stability of the $7,200,000 certificates issued to obtain capital, and of the earnings derived therefrom, the uninterrupted growth from a one-room office to twelve large buildings, eleven buildings owned without mortgage, loaning nearly twenty-three millions in 1918, make an impressive monument to the fifteen years of devotion given by Frank Tucker, the First Vice President, and the organization created and developed by him to meet the constant expansion of business in three boroughs of the city.

"The month of December, 1918, showed the largest amount loaned ($2,170,591) for any month in our history. The amount of loans outstanding Dec. 31, 1918, was $10,233,000, and the average loan made during the year was $53, compared with $42 in 1917, there being 53,000 fewer loans made this year than last, although the total amount loaned was about $2,400,000 greater in 1918. Good employment, perhaps caused fewer loans, and war conditions, and the prevailing money market led to the borrowing of larger amounts."

DROP OF $4,000,000 IN GOLD RESERVE

Reserve Banks Show, However, Gain of $93,500,000 in War Paper.

RETURN OF NOTES CHECKED

Circulation $3,400,000 Larger Than Last Week—Net Deposits Show a Decline.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—Substantial increase in the holdings of war paper, largely by the three Eastern Reserve Banks, and considerable reductions in Reserve deposits of the larger banks are indicated in the Federal Reserve Board's weekly bank statement issued as at close of business on Friday, Feb. 7, 1919.

The banks' gold reserve show a decrease of about $4,000,000, some of the banks reporting exchanges of Federal Reserve notes for gold. Holdings of war paper increased $93,500,000, other discount remained practically unchanged, while acceptances on hand went up $1,400,000. United States short term securities, due mainly to redemption by the Treasury of temporary certificates of indebtedness, declined about $127,000,000. Total earning assets show a decrease of $32,400,000 for the week.

The return flow of notes to the issuing banks appears to have ceased, at least temporarily, the Federal Reserve note circulation being $3,400,000 larger than the week before. Net deposits, on the other hand, show a decline for the week of $45,300,000, which accounts largely for the rise of the reserve ratio from 53 to 53.5 per cent.

MEMBER BANKS' REPORT.

Decline in U. S. Bonds and in War Paper Holdings.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—Declines of about $30,000,000 in the holdings of United States bonds and of $6,200,000 in the amount of war paper on hand are indicated in the consolidated weekly statement of the Federal Reserve Board showing condition of 771 member banks in about 100 leading cities.

Following the redemption on Jan. 30 of the balance of the Oct. 1 certificate issue and the close on that date of subscriptions to the fifth certificate issue in anticipation of the Fifth War Loan, reporting members show an increase in their holdings of Treasury certificates of $57,500,000, of which $44,400,000 represents the increase at the banks in the twelve Federal Reserve cities.

Aggregate holdings of United States war securities and war paper were $3,467,600,000, and constituted 25.1 per cent. of the total loans and investments of all reporting banks, as against 25 per cent. the week before. For the banks in the twelve Federal Reserve cities this ratio, because of the larger proportionate decrease in the holdings of United States bonds and war paper and the increase in other loans, shows a decline from 26.5 to 26.3 per cent. For the New York City banks a decline of this ratio from about 30 to 29.5 per cent. is noted.

Government deposits increased $204,200,000, time deposits about $23,000,000, while net demand deposits fell off $43,400,000. Reserve balances with the Federal Reserve banks show an increase of $31,800,000 and cash in vault—a decrease of $14,400,000.

ALASKAN ROAD NEEDS FUNDS

Lane Asks for $13,800,000 to Complete the Enterprise.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—With labor and materials now available, the Government is preparing to rush work on the Alaskan Railroad, and Secretary Lane asked Congress today for $13,800,000 to complete the job. The Alaskan Railroad Commission estimates it will take three years.

The appropriation of $13,800,000 now asked includes $4,000,000 of the original estimate of $35,000,000 for the construction of the road, and a deficiency appropriation of $9,800,000 representing the increase in the cost of practically everything that is necessary for the work. It is estimated that the road can be finished for $44,800,000.

While work never was stopped, it was slowed down materially by the war, which drew thousands of men out of the territory and cut off the supply of steel. Since the armistice was signed the call of the Northwest has again been felt, and at the offices of the commission it was said today that several thousand applications have been received for work on the railroad both from men formerly there and others who never have visited Alaska.

Plenty of steel for next season's work already is on hand, and between 15,000 and 18,000 tons of materials and supplies will be shipped North this year. Prospects are that ample cargo space will be available for transportation.

Trading Active on Paris Bourse.

PARIS, Feb. 8.—Trading on the Bourse was active today. Three per cent. rentes were quoted at 65f. 10c. for cash; exchange on London, 25f. 98c.; 5 per cent. loan, 92f.

THE WEATHER

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—There is a severe disturbance off the North Pacific Coast, the general depression extending southward into Northern California and eastward into Alberta, but the resulting precipitation thus far has been confined to Western Washington, Western Oregon and extreme Northern California.

In New England and the Middle Atlantic States the weather will be fair Sunday and Monday, and it will also be fair Monday in the South Atlantic and East Gulf States, Tennessee, the Ohio Valley, and the lake region, except Upper Michigan.

It will be colder Sunday from Maryland southward and southwestward to Northern Florida and the East Gulf Coast; also in the Lower Ohio Valley and Tennessee.

It will be warmer Monday in the upper lake and western lower lake region, the Lower Ohio Valley, Western Tennessee, and the East Gulf States.

Winds for Sunday and Monday along the North Atlantic Coast will be moderate west, with cloudy weather; Middle Atlantic Coast, moderate west and northwest, generally fair; South Atlantic Coast, gentle to moderate shifting, generally fair.

FORECAST TODAY AND MONDAY.

Eastern New York and Southern New England—Cloudy Sunday; Monday fair.

New Jersey and Eastern Pennsylvania—Fair Sunday and Monday; little change in temperature.

Northern New England—Partly cloudy Sunday; Monday fair.

The temperature record for the twenty-four hours ended at 11 P. M., taken from the thermometer at the local office of the United States Weather Bureau, is as follows:

	1918.	1919.		1918.	1919.
3 A. M.	31	33	4 P. M.	29	33
6 A. M.	27	36	6 P. M.	24	34
9 A. M.	25	34	9 P. M.	29	32
12 M.	21	33	11 P. M.	29	32

This thermometer is 414 feet above the street level. The average temperature yesterday was 34; for the corresponding date last year it was 27; average on the corresponding date for the last thirty-three years, 30.

The temperature at 8 A. M. yesterday was 33; at 8 P. M. it was 33. Maximum temperature, 37 degrees at 2:10 P. M.; minimum, 32 degrees at 10 P. M. Humidity, 56 per cent. at 8 A. Faith and Understanding Faith is acceptance based on belief. Understanding is knowing through actual experience.

* * *

Many new patrons of Gimbel Furniture during the February Sale must take the assertions regarding this merchandise on Faith.

* * *

But a great number of patrons who know Gimbel Furniture from experience, who understand its worth through actual demonstrations, are coming back for more.

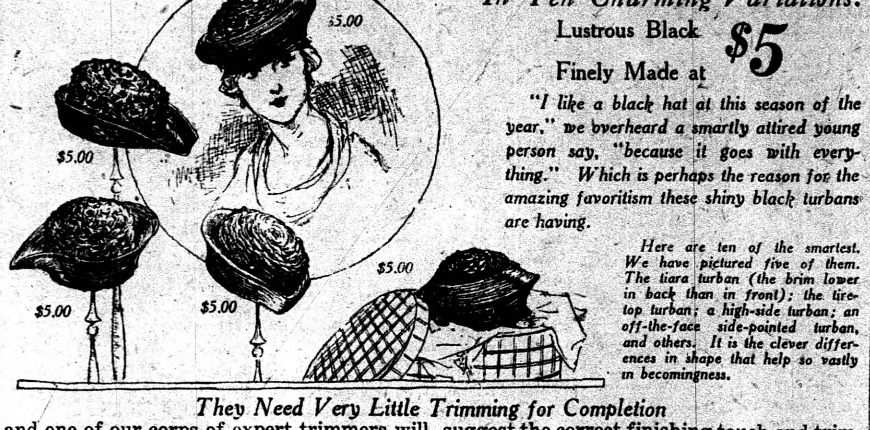
* * *

The sage says there is no advertising quite so good as the "wagging tongue of a satisfied customer" and this February Furniture Sale is doing more to swell this host of "satisfied customers" than anything we have ever done.

* * *

This event is now in progress with a tremendously broad selection at very moderate prices.

The Fashionable Rough Straw and Lisere Turbans of the Hour



In Ten Charming Variations.

Lustrous Black
Finely Made at $5

"I like a black hat at this season of the year," we overheard a smartly attired young person say, "because it goes with everything." Which is perhaps the reason for the amazing favoritism these shiny black turbans are having.

Here are ten of the smartest. We have pictured five of them. The tiara turban (the brim lower in back than in front); the tire-top turban; a high-side turban; an off-the-face side-pointed turban, and others. It is the clever differences in shape that help so vastly in becomingness.

They Need Very Little Trimming for Completion and one of our corps of expert trimmers will suggest the correct finishing touch and trim the hat without extra charge.

PRAISE FOR VALOR OF NEW YORK MEN

Deeds of the 27th, Rainbow, 77th, and 78th Divisions Told in Official Records.

UNITS COMMENDED BY HAIG

British General Recounts the Great Bravery of Americans in Three Major Attacks.

FIGHTING FROM DAY TO DAY

Chronological Data in War Department Tells of Their Work in Detail.

THE NEW YORK TIMES prints this morning the chronology of the overseas operations in which the 27th, the Rainbow, the 77th, and 78th Divisions of the American Army participated. The record is from the files in the office of the Chief of Staff in Washington, and is published with the consent of General March, the Chief of Staff. The complete chronological history of the American forces in France will not be completed for many months, and will be in its completed form several printed volumes in size. The work is now being done by the Historical Division of the General Staff.

The chronological documents in General March's office form a volume of about 300 pages, and it is from that volume that the facts relative to the activities of the divisions in which New Yorkers fought are taken. The 27th is the New York Guard Division, the 42d, or Rainbow Division, includes the old 69th New York, reinforced by drafts from the other infantry units of the old State Guard; the 77th is the division of selective draft men from New York City, Long Island, and Westchester, Dutchess, and Putnam Counties, while the 78th comprises selective service men of the remainder of New York State, New Jerey, and Delaware.

The chronologies follow:

TWENTY-SEVENTH DIVISION.

1917.

October—Division organized at Camp Wadsworth, S. C., under command of Major Gen. John F. O'Ryan.

November 30—Division reviewed by the Governors of New York and South Carolina.

October, November, and December—Division in training.

1918.

April—Overseas movement began.

May to August—Advanced battle training in France.

September 1—Division reported in action. Headquarters reports "patrols along front of 27th Division active. Our own and enemy artillery active."

September 27—27th headquarters reports that "we have taken over forward sector from British division." Same date division reports that "at 11:45 A. M. 107th Infantry attacked with limited objectives east of Bellicourt in order to straighten out line, and the regiment reached all objectives."

September 27—Night report reads that at "11:30 P. M. the 27th and 30th Divisions attacked west of Le Catelet. Enemy regained the knoll by a counterattack, but the position was recaptured by us. We made 200 prisoners on this front."

September 28—Action around Le Catelet continues. At 9 P. M. the division reports that "the enemy still holds portion of the trench system captured by us yesterday. Prisoners now number 298, including 8 officers. Our casualties are 412."

September 29—Division headquarters at 8 P. M. reported that "27th and 30th Divisions, co-operating with the British north of St. Quentin, attacked at 6 A. M. and crossed the Hindenburg first line and the St. Quentin Canal. Twenty-seventh Division captured Bony and Le Catelet. All immediate objectives reached by noon."

September 30—Action continues. Twenty-seventh and 30th Divisions cross the St. Quentin Canal Tunnel and captured many prisoners.

Haig Praises Americans.

October 12—Twenty-seventh Division headquarters reports that enemy resistance is increasing in the St. Benin-Souflet sector.

October 18—Division headquarters reports that an attack in conjunction with British troops was made this morning and that the allied forces advanced 500 yards. Enemy counterattacked at 1 P. M., temporarily stopping further progress. Report adds that enemy's resistance has stiffened.

October 19—Field Marshal Haig in report states that "in the course of the last three weeks the 27th and 30th Divisions of the Second American Army Corps, operating with the Fourth British Army, have taken part with great gallantry and success in three major offensives, besides being engaged in a number of lesser attacks. In the course of this fighting they displayed soldierly qualities of the highest order and have materially assisted in the success of our attacks. Having fought with the greatest dash and bravery in the great attack of Sept. 29, in which the Hindenburg line was broken, and having on this occasion captured Bellicourt and Naurey with a large number of prisoners, on Oct. 8 the troops of the American corps again attacked in the neighborhood of Montbrehain.

"In three days of successful fighting they completed an advance of ten miles from Montbrehain to St. Souplet, overcoming determined resistance and capturing strongly defended villages and woods. Throughout the last three days the 27th and 30th Divisions have again attacked daily, and on each occasion with complete success, though the enemy's resistance was most obstinate.

"Fighting their way forward from St. Souplet to high ground west of the Sambre Canal, they have broken the enemy's resistance at all points, beating off many counerattacks and realizing an advance of nearly five miles. Over 5,000 prisoners and many guns have been taken by the 27th and 30th Divisions in these several operations."

October 20 to Armistice of November 11—Twenty-seventh continued with great gallantry to co-operate with British in pursuit of retreating enemy.

SEVENTY-EIGHTH DIVISION.

August 31—Division organized at Camp Dix, N. J., under command of Major Gen. Chase W. Kennedy.

September, 1917, to May, 1918—Division in training at Camp Dix.

October 4—Division reported in action.

BIG GAIN IN CATTLE.

2,750,000 More Dairy Animals Now Than When War Started.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—The number of cattle, including milk cows, swine, and sheep in the United States increased 6,315,000 during the year 1918. These figures will be made public in a report of the Department of Agriculture which has gone to the printers and will be ready for distribution in the next week or ten days.

Never in the history of the United States have there been so many hogs in the country as at present. During the war period from 1914 to Jan. 1 of this year the swine increased by more than 16,600,000 head. Also in 1918 there was registered for the first time in more than two decades a substantial increase in the number of sheep in the country. As for dairy animals the herds have increased by more than 2,750,000 head since the outbreak of the war and by more than 3,260,000 since 1910. Cattle, other than milk cows, also shows a tremendous increase. The cattle herds in the United States have increased by more than 8,500,000 since the outbreak of the war.

On Jan. 1 last the value of the milk cows of the United States was $1,836,035,000, the other cattle was worth $1,960,670,000, the value of the swine was $1,665,987,000, and that of the sheep flocks $579,016,000.

In the case of sheep the statistics show a reverse of conditions. In 1900 there were 11,640,000 more sheep in the country than at present. There was a still further decline shown in 1910 when the census figures show that the number had decreased from about 61,500,000 to 52,500,000, or about 2,600,000 more than are now in the country. In 1914, the first war year, the total had decreased to 49,719,000. The year 1918 shows the largest gain in twenty years, the gain for that year being approximately 1,260,000.

CITE WAR HEROES HERE.

New Yorkers Among Those Who Win Distinguished Service Cross.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—Several officers and men from New York and New Jersey were in the lists of those receiving the Distinguished Service Cross for acts of heroism made public here today as follows:

First Sergt. Mike A. Hartman, A. S. No. 1783104, Co. I, 314th Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action near Montfaucon, France, Sept. 27, 1918. Sergeant Hartman advanced alone and silenced a machine-gun nest which was holding up an entire platoon. Home address, Mrs. Margaret Hartman, mother, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Second Lieut. Harold James Ash, Co. C, 345th Battalion, Tank Corps. For extraordinary heroism in action near Bois de Montrebeau, France, Oct. 4, 1918. Driving his tank in the face of 77 mm. gun, Lieutenant Ash, then Sergeant, continued with his mission until his tank was destroyed. He remained with the tank until a machine-gun nest was destroyed, and then accompanied the tank commander on foot through severe fire, killing two snipers with his pistol while the commander was disabling machine and anti-tank guns, after which he returned to his lines. Home address, Mrs Elizabeth Ash, mother, 1,793 Amsterdam Avenue, New York, N. Y.

First Lieut. Penrose V. Stout, Air Service, 27th Aero Squadron. For extraordinary heroism in action near Charny, France, Sept. 28, 1918. While engaged in a solitary patrol of the enemy lines, Lieutenant Stout attacked an artillery regulating machine. He was almost immediately attacked by five enemy planes, and subjected to infantry and anti-aircraft fire, but fearlessly continued the unequal fight until his machine guns were broken and he was shot through the shoulder and lung. Home address, Frank R. Chambers, Bronxville, N. Y.

First Lieut. John A. Walsh, Co. E, 302d Engineers. For extraordinary heroism in action near Chevières, France, Oct. 13, 1918. Accompanied by a Sergeant, Lieutenant Walsh went in advance of our lines to reconnoitre for locations for crossing the River Aire. After being constantly exposed to heavy shell fire, they reached the bank of the river, where Lieutenant Walsh pushed further on and was killed by machine-gun and sniper fire. Next of kin, Mrs. Mary Walsh, mother, 313 East Eighty-fifth Street, New York City.

Bugler Richard Marcellia, A. S. No. 558037, Machine Gun Co., 47th Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action near Bazoches, France, Aug. 9, 1918. Responding to a call for volunteers to destroy a hostile machine gun, Bugler Marcellia, with two other soldiers, boldly went forward through machine-gun fire and accomplished this mission. Home address, Mrs. Gaby Marcellia, mother, 2,146 Crotona Avenue, New York City.

Private (First Class) Edward W. A. Dietz, A. S. No. 2176527, 314th Engineers. For extraordinary heroism in action near Bantheville, France, Nov. 6-7, 1918. Private Dietz accompanied an officer on a reconnaissance of the bridge at Pouilly, and the road from Pouilly to Inor. Successfully reaching the river, he crossed, an act which had not been done by any troops previously. Recrossing under heavy enemy fire, he made his way to Pouilly, collecting on the way most valuable information and data for engineer work. Just as they approached their destination he was wounded, the officer with him being killed. When darkness set in, he returned and supplied most valuable information regarding the reconnaissance. Home address, William H. Dietz, father, 34 Jay Street, Newark, N. J.

Capt. Charles K. MacDermut, 314th Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action near Moprey, France, Nov. 10, 1918. Although seriously wounded by three machine-gun bullets while reconnoitering, Captain MacDermut continued to direct his troops and refused to receive medical treatment or to allow stretcher bearers to come to the exposed position until night. Home address, C. K. MacDermut, father, 127 Park Street, Leonia, N. J.

Capt. Newell P. Weed, Tank Corps, For extraordinary heroism in action near Foret de Argonne, France, Sept. 26, 1918. During the operations on the edge of Foret de Argonne Captain Weed advanced alone some 300 yards ahead of the tanks and infantry through heavy machine gun fire in order to reconnoiter a passage for his command. Examining German trenches he was surprised by German infantrymen, and was being conducted to the rear when he heard one of his tanks. In spite of the fact that he was unarmed, and the Germans threatened his life if he moved, he signaled the tank and made his escape. Home address, Mrs. Newell P. Weed, wife, 65 Union Street, Montclair, N. J.

Others receiving the Distinguished Service Cross in today's lists were:

Private Charley N. Parcell, Rocky Mount, Va.; Sergeant Manley Bradley, Nash, Va.; Private Oscar Clauson, Grenna Snaaland, Sweden; Private Daniel L. Vern A. Morgan, Council Bluffs, Iowa; Sergeant Luther E. Lindahl, Sheffield, Penn.; Sergeant Stephen J. Weston, Waterbury, Conn.; Private Harold W. Enright, Warren, Ill.; Second Lieut. John C. Vaan, Columbus, Ga.; Sergeant Louis Scionti, no address; Corporal Henry J. Garst, St. Louis, Mo.; Private Albert L. J. Ihrke, Mayville, Mich.; Corporal Edward Bessinger, Chicago, Ill.; Second Lieut. Frank J. Hoeyniak, Evanston, Ill.

Points Out Magnitude of Work Accomplished and Few Complaints Found Warranted.

DEFENDS 12,000 WORKERS

Declares Their One Aim Was to serve and That 10 Were Killed and 40 Wounded.

What the Y. M. C. A. has done, rather than why the organization has been criticised, was explained yesterday by Dr. John R. Mott, International Secretary of the Y. M. C. A., who discussed "The War Work Program of the Y. M. C. A." before about 3,500 women members and guests of the League for Political Education in Carnegie Hall. Dr. Mott, following his introduction by Robert Erskine Ely, Secretary of the league, made it plain at the start that he did not plan a defence of the association; he wished, he said, to lay the accomplishments of the organization before his audience and let them decide. He did, however, make direct reference to the criticisms, and said the Y. M. C. A. welcomed "all honest criticism, especially constructive criticism."

"The attitude of the Y. M. C. A.," he said, "is to welcome all honest and constructive criticisms, no matter from what quarter. We judge of the honesty of critics in two ways: First, is the person criticising ready to give the name, date and place. He should be at least willing to do so in strict confidence. I need not add that we carefully guard any such confidence, but it is impossible to deal adequately with criticisms unless the critic is willing to be thus definite. If he is unwilling to afford you a handle of which you can take hold is it unfair to assume that there is something ulterior or unfair behind his criticism?

"The second way by which we judge the honesty of a critic is in his attitude and action after he has shared with you the information on which his criticism is based. If, after he has given you the definite facts, and his best personal advice, and you have assured him that you will give the matter prompt and thorough attention, he goes behind your back and continues to knock and to spread distrust, you can make up your mind that he is not playing the game, and that there is something sinister back of it all. Our request of all sincere critics, and by that I mean all those who really desire to have the grounds of criticism removed for the good of the service on behalf of men in the army and navy, is fourfold.

"In the first place, be definite; secondly, be constructive; thirdly, play the game, that is, when assurances have been given that the complaint will be investigated and that it will be dealt with conscientiously, give the organization the benefit of the doubt; fourthly, let him tell of all the good things he knows about the association."

Explaining his fourth point, Dr. Mott quoted a woman acquaintance who had related a conversation she had recently with a wounded soldier in a hospital. This soldier, according to Dr. Mott, had said of the Y. M. C. A.: "They're no good; they are a bunch of grafters," and the woman had then asked if he knew anything good about the organization. The soldier admitted, continued the doctor, that the "Y" had furnished him with the best meals he had abroad and at the lowest cost, and that the association had saved him money by changing his pay into French coinage, that the "Y" huts were "mighty bright, cheerful places," and that a certain "Y" navy hut "was the most popular place in France." Fourteen reasons why the Y. M. C. A. was first-rate were supplied by the lad who had called the Triangle men "a bunch of grafters," said Dr. Mott, as against only "two flyspecks" or complaints. The wounded soldier also confided to Dr. Mott's friend that through the Y. M. C. A. he had heard the greatest preacher he had ever listened to, "a man who 'got' me when I needed to be 'got.'"

No Criticism in Other Wars.

As a preface to a detailed exposition of what his organization had done in this war, Dr. Mott said that there never had been any kicks about its regular work in the United States or of its war work in the Civil War, in the Russo Japanese War, in the matter down in Cuba, or in the mobilization on the Mexican border. Recalling what the Y. M. C. A. did in Cuba, Dr. Mott said:

"Not long before his death I had a conversation at Oyster Bay with Roosevelt, and he harked back to the splendid service rendered by the Y. M. C. A. in Cuba, in Texas, and in other parts of the South, and added, 'Anything I can do to help you men in this present time I am going to do.'

"The other day when I was having luncheon with General Pershing at General Headquarters in France," continued Dr. Mott, "of his own initiative he spoke with evident feeling of the way the American Y. M. C. A. had served along the border during that trying, irksome period, and how we had gone with him into the area of occupation and stood by when we were most needed. I remind you again, this organization has not changed, its ideals have not changed, the spirit has not departed.'

Although the vast civilian work of the organization had gone steadily forward in this country while the war was progressing and although every camp, in fact, every detachment on this side had its Y. M. C. A. hut or worker, there had been no complaints of the work, said Dr. Mott. Of this he added:

"This, to my mind, is highly impressive. Working in nearly 1,000 buildings and tents and other structures, and with a staff of more than 4,000 men, conducting their varied activities before the very eyes of the people who could criticise, were there ground for criticisms, we are commended on the whole, for doing a very good piece of work. And by none are we more commended than by the men who are being served themselves, and by many of the leaders of other organizations with whom we had been glad to co-operate in the recent campaign."

In detail, Dr. Mott reviewed the Y. M. C. A.'s work with the troops of Italy, France, Czechoslvakia, and quoted the commendations of their leaders. The association's work with 3,000,000 Italian soldiers, he said, resulted in the Italian King telling him in an interview to spread the Red Triangle work to the maximum in the Italian Army. There has not been a single criticism from Russia, said Dr. Mott, who added that Dr. Thomas Masaryk, President of the Republic of Czechoslovakia, commented in highest terms upon the work done for his military forces. Dr. Mott said that Maj.-Gen. Graves, the highest American officer on Russian soil, had declared the Y. M. C. A. had done more to stabilize Russian territories than any other influence. Out of Palestine, Mesoptotamia, Gallipoli and Macedonia have come nothing but praise and goodwill, declared Dr. Mott.

French Comment Work.

The speaker reminded his auditors that there had been no complaint of the work done for 4,000,000 French soldiers and that this work had been so satisfactory that the French military authorities continued, and are continu-

Police Deputy Ella O'Grady Now Cool To Hylan's Sister-in-Law at Headquarters

A great deal of interest was manifested yesterday at Police Headquarters at the apparent coolness between Miss Anne O'Hara, Mayor Hylan's sister-in-law, who is an executive clerk in the building, and Mrs. Ellen O'Grady, Fifth Deputy Police Commissioner. For some time the two were almost inseparable, but now it is said they are never seen together.

The Mayor's sister-in-law formerly occupied a desk in Mrs. O'Grady's office. The two were seen entering the building together daily for a long time, arriving in Mrs. O'Grady's automobile. They were inseparable at lunch time.

Some time ago Miss O'Hara's desk was removed from Mrs. O'Grady's office and taken to the office of Augustus Drum Porter, who was promoted yesterday to Third Deputy Police Commissioner. After that the women were not seen together. They went to lunch at different hours, and when Miss O'Hara went home she went on a Fourth Avenue surface car and not in Mrs. O'Grady's automobile. The question asked at headquarters yesterday was whether Miss O'Hara would accompany Mr. Porter to the office of the Third Deputy or whether she would remain in the office of the secretary to the Commissioner.

And if Miss O'Hara takes up her desk in Mr. Porter's office, it was asked what effect that would have on Mrs. O'Grady. What Mayor Hylan thinks of the tangle could not be learned last night, as he was in a hurry to leave for Palm Beach.

AIR MAIL SERVICE EXTENSION URGED

This Country Behind Europe in Work, Says Assistant Postmaster General Praeger.

TRANSCONTINENTAL PLANS

Failure of Congress to Grant Permission for Extension One of the Causes of Delay to Department.

Failure of the United States, as contrasted with the initiative shown by European nations, to develop extensively the aerial mail is called to the attention of the country in a special report prepared by Otto Praeger, Second Assistant Postmaster General. He points out that the United States, despite the equipment which the signing of the armistice freed from military use, is operating only a single aerial mail route while Europe boasts of thirty-one. He urges the extension of mail routes on the basis of the success of the New York-Washington line, the single aerial mail venture of the Post Office Department.

This route, according to the report, is only 218 miles long, while the European aerial routes, not including those used exclusively for the despatch of special matter, come to more than 6,000 miles. One single route, operated by Norway, he says, covers 670 miles. Statistics collected by the Post Office Department show that Italy has 12 aerial mail routes; France, 6; Norway, 4; Denmark, 3; Greece, 2; Great Britain, Spain, Austria and Germany, each 1.

Four transcontinental lines for aerial mail are under contemplation in this country, but while other and smaller nations are making increased efforts to enlarge the facilities of this faster service, the United States hesitates, Mr. Praeger infers.

New York-Washington Figures.

He makes public some interesting data in connection with the New York-Washington route. In the first six months of its existence its operation covered 68,892 miles, at a cost to the Government of $75,165.91, including 6 per cent. on investment and 33 1-3 per cent. for depreciation. In that period airplanes carried 7,452½ pounds of mail between the two cities. The revenue derived by the Post Office Department, according to Mr. Praeger, totalled $60,653.28. The net deficit, not taking into account the 6 per cent. investment, was $8,939.08.

The New York-Washington route, he says, was established not as a typical commercial line, but to solve the problems that had to be met to establish a daily dependable schedule. He points to the flying records of the pilots in the aerial mail service. The fastest time carrying the mail from College Park, Washington, to Belmont Park, N. Y., he states, was an hour and a half; the slowest time for a continuous flight was four hours fifty-six minutes. The average time was two hours forty minutes.

The contention of Mr. Praeger in advocating the broadening of the aerial mail service is that the greater the distance between two points on a route, the greater is the service to commerce. It is pointed out that a letter leaving New York at 6 A. M., and arriving in Chicago at 3 P. M., in time to connect with the carrier delivery, will advance the mail between the two cities by sixteen hours over any train dispatch that can be made after 2:45 P. M.

Based on cost accounting statistics collected by the department, the cost of an east and west trunk line from New York as far west as Omaha and a north and south trunk line from Boston to Atlanta has been estimated at a total of $1,600,000. Mr. Praeger says he is desirous of establishing the New York-Chicago line immediately and extending it west to the foot of the Rockies during the coming fiscal year with a view of reaching the seaports of San Francisco and Seattle.

Time to Coast, Forty Hours.

The air mail time between New York and San Francisco, according to the official, will be forty hours. He also hopes to tap this transcontinental line to serve Minneapolis and St. Paul on the north and St. Louis and other points on the south.

It was learned yesterday from those familiar with the aerial mail situation that the department has been hampered in the work of extending the lines by the failure of Congress to give the necessary permission to go ahead with the plans. Another source of delay is caused by the necessity of modifying many of the military types of planes, which have been found to be too light for the mail service.

HONORS H. L. BRIDGMAN.

Museum of Natural History Recognizes His Work for Science.

At their last meeting, held on Feb. 3, the Trustees of the American Museum of Natural History elected Herbert L. Bridgman of this city an honorary Fellow of the institution. It was announced yesterday that the Trustees took this action in recognition of Mr. Bridgman's assistance, rendered by service on a number of the museum's most important exploration committees, and "in especial acknowledgment of his contribution to the advancement of science and education through his writings."

Other honorary Fellows of the museum are Roald Amundsen, Dr. Bashford Dean, Lieutenant George T. Emmons, U. S. N., George Bird Grinnell, Baron Ludvig Moncheur, Rear Admiral Robert E. Peary, U. S. N., Dr. Leonard C. Sanford, Sir Ernest Henry Shackleton, and Vilhjalmur Stefansson. The late Colonel Theodore Roosevelt was also an honorary Fellow.

BRITISH TO ATTEND LOWELL CENTENARY

American Academy Arranges Observance of Anniversary of Birth of the Poet.

JOHN GALSWORTHY COMING

Many Canadians Also Have Accepted Invitation to Celebration to Promote Anglo-American Unity.

Officers of the American Academy of Arts and Letters announced yesterday that the number of invitations accepted by literary men in Great Britain, Canada, and the United States indicated that the international celebration of the centenary of James Russell Lowell, the poet who was for five years Ambassador to Great Britain, would be the most notable gathering of British and American men of letters in the history of literature. The celebration is to be held in this city on Feb. 19, 20, 21, and 22.

Among the British literary men who will attend is John Galsworthy, who cabled to Nicholas Murray Butler that he would arrive this week on the Carmania with a party of Englishmen of letters and publicists. James M. Barrie, member of the British Academy, cabled that he would be unable to come, but he has sent a letter to be read by William Gillette, a member of the American Academy, when a special performance of the Barrie play is given in the Empire Theatre on Feb. 21 for those who have gathered for the Lowell centenary. Alfred Noyes also will be here, and he is to read one of his new poems at the meeting to be held in the Ritz-Carlton Hotel at 11 o'clock on Saturday morning, Feb. 22.

Those who have arrived for the celebration on Wednesday, Feb. 19, will be the guests that night at a reception to be given by President Butler of Columbia University, and Mrs. Butler at their home, at 60 Morningside Drive. Elihu Root will preside at the dinner to be given in the Ritz-Carlton Hotel the following evening, and the speakers will be John Galsworthy and Maurice Hutton of the University College in Toronto. On Friday evening the members of the academy will attend the special performance of the Barrie play, "Dear Brutus."

The centenary celebration will be concluded with a public meeting in the Ritz at 11 o'clock on Saturday morning. Alfred Noyes will read one of his recent poems, and the speakers are to be Brander Matthews, Edgar Lee Masters, and Barrett Wendell. During the centenary celebration many other gatherings of literary men will be held at Columbia University, the Century Association, and the University Club.

Want Good-will Fostered.

James Russell Lowell was Ambassador to Great Britain from 1880 to 1885, and for this reason the members of the American Academy desired to have present at the centenary celebration all of the British and Canadian authors who were able to attend, so that the new spirit of sympathy among the English-speaking nations might be fostered. William Milligan Sloane, chancellor of the American Academy, expressed this desire in his call for the centenary.

"Throughout the history of the United States the nation which gave us our original concepts of life in all its forms of government and institutions has in at least five of our critical epochs afforded to us the means of repelling dangerous foes planning and menacing the overthrow of all that safeguards our liberties," wrote Chancellor Sloane. "In the latest of our successful efforts to confound such enemies we have worked efficiently with, through, and for Great Britain to save the liberties, not merely of themselves and us, but of all civilized peoples.

"In large measure the efficiency of our co-ordination has been due to the full comprehension, one of the other, in the common speech which expresses identical ideas in spoken and written language. Alike during the war and now at the Peace Conference the representatives of all the English-speaking peoples were, and are, true to type, differing about details but exhibiting that spirit of compromise which underlies the highest statesmanship.

"Such considerations have moved the American Academy of Arts and Letters and the National Institute of Arts and Letters to seize the first appropriate occasion to arrange an international celebration for strengthening and rebuilding the foundations on which both nations rest. Amonog our men of letters James Russell Lowell is the outstanding representative of reciprocal good-will between America and Great Britain. The centennial of his birth falls at the very moment when that good-will is strong as never before."

A special committee directing arrangements for the centenary comprises Dr. Butler, Augustus Thomas, and Hamlin Garland, with Chancellor Sloane and Robert Underwood Johnson, Secretary of the American Academy, as ex-officio members. It was announced by the committee that the delegation of Canadian literary men coming to the centenary is the largest entertained by American men of letters. A few of them are Dr. James Cappon, of Queen's University at Kingston; Pelham Edgar, of the University of Toronto; Sir Robert Alexander Falconer, President of the University of Toronto; Duncan Campbell Scott, the Canadian poet; Stephen Leacock, and the Rev. Frederick George Scott, the canon of Quebec Cathedral, who is also a poet.

ROOSEVELT'S WORDS THAT MADE HISTORY

Abbott Credits His Speeches with Saving Great Britain and France at Critical Time.

SENT KITCHENER TO EGYPT

Quieted Unrest Akin to Bolshevism Among Frenchmen and Left Them Strong for War.

Basing his eulogy upon his many years of association with Colonel Roosevelt, Lawrence Abbott of The Outlook, once termed the "Roosevelt Boswell," delivered a commemorative address yesterday on the dead leader before the League for Political Education, meeting in Carnegie Hall. Before the address the 3,500 women present stood and sang two verses of "America," and when the eulogy was closed their voices rang out the stirring measures of "The Battle Hymn of the Republic."

"It is impossible in limited time," said Mr. Abbott, "to give an adequate picture of the personality of Colonel Roosevelt. It is my belief, however, that the greatest contribution Theodore Roosevelt made to his time was his personality.

"I cannot even catalogue many of the attributes of Mr. Roosevelt in so short a time. Among statesmen he was recognized as a man of predominant capacity, among soldiers as a brave and capable soldier, among scholars as one well equipped, and among children as a sympathizing, understanding, protecting companion. One of his greatest attributes was his sense of humor—his joyousness, and his quality of being a 'good mixer.' He liked this in others, too, and once he told how he had met the Italian King and found him likeable, 'a man who carries his own ward at election time,' as the Colonel put it.

"Theodore Roosevelt, although to his own intense disappointment he could take no active part in the great war, did contribute some of the elements which made it possible to win it. One of these, I believe, was his great and famous speech at the Sarbonne in Paris, one of the three that made history just after his emergence from the African jungles.

"France at that time was suffering from a serious, critical unrest. It was the same element that is now called Bolshevism, although it was not then called Bolshevism, as the term had not been invented. Mr. Roosevelt in that address spoke of the beauties of citizenship in a republic and denounced the system of rule by savagery and assassination. No public address, that I know of, exerted so profound an effect on a nation. Le Temps printed 50,000 copies and had them distributed to all the schools of France. The great radical demonstration set for May 1 was not held, Briand, then Premier, refusing a permit for the first time in fifteen years. The police and soldiers were told to use their weapons to defend themselves, public feeling ran so high. It was in great measure due to Mr. Roosevelt's speech that France found herself and was able to hold back at that time and to stand firm and unshaken during the four years of war just ended. I firmly believe that Colonel Roosevelt's speech so widely scattered through France left an indelible imprint on the French consciousness.

"I was a fellow guest with Colonel Roosevelt at Khartoum, when the Governor General entertained the explorer. This was just following the murder of a leading Turkish official. It was a political murder, inspired by the same element that is now known as the Bolsheviki. Egypt was in a very critical condition, and many feared a repetition of the Gordon disaster. The matter was discussed at the dinner that night.

"Speaking of the murderer, who was in custody, Colonel Roosevelt said in his own decisive, emphatic manner: 'I would try that man by court-martial. I would give him a fair trial. The facts are easily established. Then I would shoot him. If the Home Government sent an order later to wait until the matter could be adjusted, I'd tell the Home Government it was too late; the man's dead. That is the only way to deal with assassination.'

"One of the officials present later asked the Colonel to tell the Home Government this when he got to London, and the Colonel said he would if he got the chance. And I understand that he did.

"Mr. Roosevelt had the reputation of being extremely impulsive. My friends, I tell you that the famous Guildhall speech, which everybody regarded as impromptu, was prepared four weeks in advance. Lord Cromer, Kitchener, Lord Grey and other British statesmen saw, read it and approved it before it was spoken. Yet our newspapers the next day said: 'Just like Roosevelt, going off half-cocked and butting in, telling Great Britain how to run her Government.'

"That address by Mr. Roosevelt sent Lord Kitchener to Egypt as the representative of Britain. It meant that after three years the threat of an uprising was destroyed, and it also meant that rebellious propaganda, already at work, was checked. Had Kitchener not gone to Egypt and halted this propaganda, Prussia would have been strong enough there in the war just ended to join with the Turks and seize the Suez Canal. Such an event would have prolonged the war, perhaps lost it, so Colonel Roosevelt's speech, which sent 'K. of K.' to Egypt, contributed another element of success in the present war."

Mr. Abbott concluded by relating the article which appeared in Le Matin, Paris, following the death of Mr. Roosevelt. Le Matin's editor, Stéphane Lauzanne, had been in America eighteen months immediately before the Colonel's death, and just before Lauzanne went home he asked the Colonel for a message. It was:

"I have no message for France today. I have given France all that I had. My one regret is that I have not been able to give myself."

This giving of himself to his country, said Mr. Abbott, was the outstanding attribute of Colonel Roosevelt, and he suggested that his message to France should be inscribed on one of the memorials which are to be erected.

TODAY'S MANY MEMORIALS.

Thousands of Gatherings Will Pay Homage to Roosevelt's Life Works.

Memorial services in honor of Colonel Theodore Roosevelt today will be numbered by thousands throughout the United States and by hundreds in this city. The ceremonies today will exceed any similar demonstration, at least since the death of Lincoln.

The tribute will be unique in that no man before him had so great a number of personal friends and intimates, and thousands who will do him honor today will speak from their own knowledge. In hundreds of churches in this city the pulpits will be occupied by personal friends of the ex-President, and organizations of every description, political, social, and military, will be addressed by men and women who were regular pilgrims to Sagamore Hill, or who came in living contact with Colonel Roosevelt in this city, in Cuba, at Albany, in Washington, in Africa, or South America.

At the services of the American Defense Society at Trinity Church today the Rev. Dr. William T. Manning, who delivers the eulogy, will read the following message from Major Gen. Leonard Wood, perhaps closer to Colonel Roosevelt than any of his legion of personal friends:

"We have lost our great leader at a time when he can ill be spared. His loss will be impressed upon us more and more as the days go on. His fearless courage, wise experience, strong and conscientious leadership are all needed and wanted. He has left us, however, the priceless legacy of his life-work, and he has marked out to us very clearly a safe and honorable line of procedure in national affairs. Personally, I feel his loss very deeply. We have got to pick up the torch where he dropped it, and carry on the work for the reorganization and the re-establishment of normal conditions."

Charles E. Hughes will deliver the memorial address at the Republican Club at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon, and resolutions adopted by the club will be read. A proclamation, calling the attention of the people of New Jersey to the dedication of the day to services in honor of Colonel Roosevelt, was issued yesterday by Governor Edge of New Jersey.

The Aldine Club, of which Colonel Roosevelt was a member, made public yesterday resolutions of appreciation which it had adopted.

The National Security League will hold seventeen meetings in honor of the memory of Colonel Roosevelt in this city today, and will hold other meetings in every State in the United States.

Motion pictures of "The Fighting Roosevelt" will be displayed at the memorial service tonight at the Grace Methodist Church, in West 104th Street, near Amsterdam Avenue.

Lawrence Abbott, an intimate associate of Colonel Roosevelt for many years, will speak at the meeting of the Community Council at Forest Hills Inn at 4 o'clock this afternoon.

Congressman F. H. La Guardia, Major in the Aviation Corps, will speak this afternoon at a large gathering at the clubrooms of the Hungarian Republican Club, at 192 Lenox Avenue.

Chauncey M. Depew will tell of Colonel Roosevelt at the Twenty-third Street Branch of the Y. M. C. A., where the War Camp Community Service will hold one of its many meetings.

Elon H. Hooker, formerly Treasurer of the Progressive Party, will speak at the evening service of the Washington Heights Baptist Church on "Intimate Reminiscences of Roosevelt."

Father J. J. Curran of Wilkes-Barre, Penn., who aided Colonel Roosevelt when he was President in settling the anthracite strike, will speak at the memorial exercises at 11 o'clock this morning at the Riverside Theatre. The National Association of Audubon Societies, which is urging the erection of a Roosevelt Memorial Fountain, issued a eulogistic statement yesterday.

OUTLINES ZIONIST STAND.

Jacob H. Schiff Gives His Views on the Future of Palestine.

Jacob H. Schiff, in a statement made public yesterday through the Zionist Organization of America, said he favored the establishment of a Jewish Homeland in Palestine, but found himself unable to indorse some of the phases of the Zionist propaganda, in particular the emphasis on Jewish nationalism at the expense of religion.

The principal event which caused him to modify his previous position, Mr. Schiff said, was the Russian revolution. He thought that whatever the political structure of the Russian state might eventually be it was safe to predict that the many restrictions from which the Jews have suffered in Russia would be removed. He called on all Jews to participate in the work of establishing the Jewish Homeland by contributing to the Palestine Restoration Fund.

"The Zionists have made the mistake of emphasizing Jewish nationalism, whereas they should have emphasized the Jewish spirit," he continued. "An autonomous Jewish homeland is necessary for the development of the Jewish spirit in Palestine. Of course all practical men realize, and many Zionists among them, that an autonomous Jewish homeland is not a matter of months or even years. It cannot be created by edict. The population of Palestine must become Jewish, and by this I mean that the majority of the population must consist of Jews.

"Agricultural and educational opportunities must be created. Roads must be built, swamps drained, arid land reclaimed, and harbors improved. And this involves large sums of money. These sums must be provided by Jews all over the world, and American Jews must bring forward their share. I would urge all Jews who give thought to the future of their people and of their religion to contribute to the Palestine Restoration Fund of the Zionist Organization."

PLAY FOR BLIND SOLDIERS.

Satire on Greenwich Village to be Given at the Garden Theatre.

Members of the Junior League will act as ushers at the performance of the "The Village" to be given at the Garden Theatre next Friday evening by the Amateur Comedy Club, for the benefit of the Permanent Blind Relief War Fund for soldiers and sailors of the Allies, of whom several thousand remain to be rehabilitated by being taught trades and professions that they are able to exercise despite their disability of sightlessness.

The Amateur Comedy Club has given each year for the last thirty-four years a private dramatic performance which has been a notable feature of the New York season. The war relief activities of its members, however, have led them to permit the sale of tickets for this benefit. The play, a satire on Greenwich Village, which was successfully tried out at the Garden Theatre, was written by a member of the Club, Frank W. Tuttle, and all the scenery, costumes and effects were designed by members.

Tickets beside being obtainable at the agencies and principal hotels can be had from the headquarters of the Permanent Blind Relief War Fund, 500 Fifth Avenue.

OPEN EXPORT TRADE COURSE

City College Will Teach Foreign Commerce in Detail.

The College of the City of New York announced yesterday that the first course in practical steamship operation, export technique, United States and foreign customs administration, foreign credits and finance, and South American and Russian markets would begin on Wednesday afternoon in the assembly room of the Board of Trade and Transportation, 203 Broadway, at 5:15 o'clock.

The course will cover organization of ocean transportation systems, the work of the ship owner, the operator, brokers, marine insurance brokers, and adjusters. It will also cover the practical and legal aspects of chartering and operating vessels, including the treatment of all documents involved, and the care of questions growing out of the Government's control of shipping. Students may enroll for the courses by applying to Professor Frederick Robinson, director, Commerce Building, College of the City of New York.

State Answers Gas Suit.

The answer of Attorney General Newton to the suit of the Consolidated Gas Company for an injunction restraining the city and State from attempting to enforce the eighty-cent gas law, and to have the law declared unconstitutional, was filed yesterday in the Federal District Court. It denies the statement of the plaintiff that the eighty-cent rate does not return a reasonable interest on the capital invested and that the rate is confiscatory and therefore unconstitutional.

EXPECT NO CHANGE IN WAR TAX BILL

Administration Circles Believe Measure Will Be Passed This Week.

TO RAISE $6,070,000,000

Imposes 6 Per Cent. Tax on Incomes Over $1,000 and Surtax After $5,000.

COLLECTS ON ALL LUXURIES

Provides for Revenue from Corporations with Big Profits from War Contracts.

The war revenue bill, which was submitted to the House of Representatives on Thursday, it is believed in Administration circles in Washington, will be passed without alteration before the end of this week. It is expected that the bill, if it becomes a law, will return a revenue, in 1919 of $6,070,000,000, the largest amount in taxes ever raised in any country in the world. The bill provides for a tax on individual incomes, on the income of corporations and partnerships, on estates, on railroad tickets and insurance, on cigars, cigarettes, tobacco, and the manufactures thereof, on admissions to places of amusement, on luxuries, including automobiles, motorcycles, pianos, organs, player pianos, phonographs, sporting goods, chewing gum, cameras, candy, firearms and ammunition, on yachts, motor boats and toilet soaps.

It also provides for special taxes on domestic and foreign corporations, on the business of brokers and those dealing in exchange, bullion, coined money, and bank notes; on the business of pawnbrokers, ship brokers, custom house brokers, proprietors of theatres, museums, and concert halls; on the proprietors of circuses, and on every building, space, tent or area where "feats of horsemanship, acrobatic sports, or theatrical performances, not otherwise provided for in the bill," are held.

It also provides for a stamp tax on bonds, debentures, certificates of stock and of indebtedness, and on the employment of child labor. The bill, when it becomes a law, will reach the big and little incomes of individuals and corporations, and, while it is true that the largest incomes are hit the hardest, it will be difficult for any income owner to dodge or escape the payment of the tax.

In respect to individuals, $1,000 of every unmarried man's income is exempt from taxation, and $2,000 of the income of every married man. On the first $4,000 of every individual taxable income, the tax is fixed at 6 per cent., while the tax on the balance of the taxable income is fixed at 12 per cent. In addition to the normal tax, surtaxes are levied upon individual incomes, beginning with 1 per cent. of the amount by which the net income exceeds $5,000 and does not exceed $6,000, and running up to a surtax of 65 per cent. of the amount by which the net income exceeds $1,000,000. For each calendar year after 1918, and so long as the measure is in force, the normal individual tax will be 8 per cent., with a tax of 4 per cent. of the net income in excess of credits on the first $4,000 of taxable income.

Tax on Corporations.

As to corporations, the bill provides that, for the calendar year 1918, they shall pay 12 per cent. of the amount of net income in excess of certain credits, and for each calendar year thereafter 10 per cent. In addition to the normal tax, certain corporations must pay war profits and excess profits taxes, as the individual must pay surtaxes. The imposition of the war profits and excess taxes is regulated by the terms of three brackets. The first bracket provides for a tax of 30 per cent. of the amount of net income in excess of the excess profit's credit, determined by Section 312 of the bill, and not in excess of 20 per cent. of the invested capital.

The second bracket provides for the levying of 65 per cent. of the amount of the income of any corporation in excess of 20 per cent. of the invested capital. The third bracket provides for the levying of a tax of 80 per cent. on the amount of the net income in excess of the war profits' credit: determined under Section 311 of the bill, if the sum exceeds the amount of the tax computed under the first and second brackets. For the taxable year of 1919, and each taxable year thereafter, there shall be levied a tax on the income of every corporation in an amount equal to the sum of 20 per cent. of the amount of the net income in excess of the excess profits' credit, determined under Section 312 of the bill, and not in excess of the invested capital. The second bracket also provides for a tax of 40 per cent. on the net income of a corporation in excess of 20 per cent. of the invested capital. There is a special provision under the second bracket for determining the tax on corporations having a net income of more than $10,000, which secured Government contracts between April 6, 1917, and November, 1918.

The tax to be paid by such corporations, according to the provisions of the bill, must be equal to the sum of the following: (1) Such portion of a tax computed at rates specified as the part of the net income attributable to such Government contracts bears to the entire net income, and (2) such portion of a tax computed at rates specified as part of the net income not attributable to such Government contracts bears to the entire net income. In computing such tax the excess-profit and war-profit credits applicable to the taxable year shall be used.

For the purpose of determining the part of the net income attributable to such Government contract or contracts, the proper apportionment and allocation of the deductions with respect to gross income derived from such Government contract or contracts and from other sources, respectively, shall be determined under rules and regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary.

(d) In any case where the full amount of the excess-profits credit is not allowed under the first bracket of subdivision (a) or (b), by reason of the fact that such credit is in excess of 20 per centum of the invested capital, the part not so allowed shall be deducted from the amount in the second bracket.

(e) For the purposes of the Act approved March 21, 1918, entitled "An act to provide for the operation of transportation systems while under Federal control, for the just compensation of their owners and for other purposes," the tax imposed by this title shall be treated as levied by an act in amendment of Title II. of the Revenue Act of 1917.

In computing their net incomes, individuals may make deductions for the ordinary expenses incurred in carrying on their business, including reasonable compensation for personal service, for rentals, interest charges, taxes paid or accrued in the taxable year, except income, excess profits imposed by the United States, any of its possessions, or by any State or Territory, county or school district, or other taxing subdivision of a State or Territory; for losses sustained during the taxable year not compensated by insurance, and deductions also may be made for several other accounts.

Credits for War Profits.

Two sections of the bill, 311 and 312, provide for the credits for the account of war profits and excess profits permitted to corporations. Those sections read:

Sec. 311. (a) That the war-profits credit shall consist of the sum of:

(1) A specific exemption of $3,000; and

(2) An amount equal to the average net income of the corporation for the pre-war period, plus or minus, as the case may be, 10 per centum of the difference between the average invested capital for the pre-war period and the invested capital for the taxable year. If the tax is computed for a period of less than twelve months such amount shall be reduced to the same proportion thereof as the number of months in the period is of twelve months.

(b) If the corporation had no net income for the pre-war period, or if the amount computed under paragraph (2) of subdivision (a) is less than 10 per centum of its invested capital for the taxable year, then the war-profits credit shall be the sum of:

(1) A specific exemption of $3,000; and

(2) An amount equal to 10 per centum of the invested capital for the taxable year.

(c) If the corporation was not in existence during the whole of at least one calendar year during the prewar period, then, except as provided in subdivision (d), the war-profits credit shall be the sum of:

(1) A specific exemption of $3,000; and

(2) An amount equal to the same percentage of the invested capital of the taxpayer for the taxable year as the average percentage of net income to invested capital, for the prewar period, of corporations engaged in a trade or business of the same general class as that conducted by the taxpayer; but such amount shall in no case be less than 10 per centum of the invested capital of the taxpayer for the taxable year. Such average percentage shall be determined by the Commissioner on the basis of data contained in returns made under Title II. of the Revenue Act of 1917, and the average known as the medium shall be used. If such average percentage has not been determined and published at least 30 days prior to the time when the return of the taxpayer is due, then for purposes of such return 10 per centum shall be used in lieu thereof; but such average percentage when determined shall be used for the purposes of section 250 in determining the correct amount of the tax.

(d) The war-profits credit shall be determined in the manner provided in subdivision (b) instead of in the manner provided in subdivision (c) in the case of any corporation which was not in existence during the whole of at least one calendar year during the prewar period, if (1) a majority of its stock at any time during the taxable year is owned or controlled, directly or indirectly, by a corporation which was in existence during the whole or at least one calendar year during the pre-war period, or if (2) 50 per centum or more of its gross income (as computed under section 233 for income tax purposes) consists of gains, profits, commissions, or other income, derived from a Government contract or contracts made between April 6, 1917, and Nov. 11, 1918, both dates inclusive.

(e) A foreign corporation shall not be entitled to a specific exemption of $3,000.

Sec. 312. That the excess-profits credit shall consist of a specific exemption of $3,000 plus an amount equal to 8 per centum of the invested capital for the taxable year.

All persons and organizations having taxable incomes must make returns on or before March 15. The tax may be paid on the installment plan, one payment being made when the return is made, and the others at intervals of three months, or payment of the whole amount may be made when the return is made.

How to Compute the Corporation Tax

Company with $40,000 Capital and Income of $20,000.

Mark Eisner, Collector of Internal Revenue for the Second New York District, prepared four following examples for computing the income of certain corporations, probably the most numerous class of corporation income taxpayers. With each example, worked out under the new bill, a comparative example is given, worked out under the 1917 law. The first example is that of a corporation not subject to either excess or war profits taxes. The second, third, and fourth examples are those of corporations having invested capital of $40,000, $100,000, and $500,000, respectively, with all credits and deductions noted before the total tax is computed.

Individual Income Tax on Incomes from $3,000 to $1,000,000

The War Revenue bill provides that $1,000 of a single man's income is exempt from taxation and $2,000 of the income of a married man. On the first $4,000 of the taxable income of any individual the tax is 6 per cent., and 12 per cent. on all taxable incomes above that amount. The surtax begins at 1 per cent. of the net income in excess of $5,000 and not in excess of $6 000, and runs up to 65 per cent. where the net income is in excess of $1,000,000. The table below shows the total amount of tax which individuals of various incomes must pay, the amount that each will have left and the percentage thereof, after they have paid their taxes:

PRAISE FOR VALOR OF NEW YORK MEN

Headquarters reported successful light raids on enemy observation and liaison posts, following artillery preparation. Prisoners and machine guns captured.

October 9—The corps advancing. Goes forward on a front of 4,000 yards for a distance of about seven miles. Two thousand prisoners and thirty guns captured.

October 13—Attack on Grand Pré this morning met with heavy machine-gun fire and troops of the 2d Corps were forced to retire south of the River Aire. Hostile counterattacks in evening were repulsed.

October 17—Fierce fighting continues in region of Bois de Loges and Bois Bantheville.

Germans Forced Back.

October 18—After fierce combat lasting four days, Germans retire from Bois Bantheville north of Landres and from Bois de Loges east of Grand Pré. Bois Loges filled with mustard gas.

October 19—The 78th Division pushing forward, and their lines reach Bellejoyeuse Farm. The division begins mopping up the Bois de Loges. The division headquarters reports that "enemy is resisting stubbornly with machine guns and grenades" and that artillery is active on both sides.

October 20—Division reports, "Enemy machine guns very active. Heavy artillery fire on both sides. Our lines withdrawn to the Grand Pré-St. Juvin road."

October 21—Troops attacking in region of Bantheville.

October 27—Division headquarters reports the 78th has completed the occupation of the right of way north and northeast of Grand Pré. This same day units of the 78th entered Bellejoyeuse Farm and found it unoccupied.

November 2—This evening drove the enemy from the Bois de Loges. Closely followed his retreat.

November 2-11—Action continues.

November 11—Armistice.

FORTY-SECOND DIVISION, (THE RAINBOW.)

September 30—Division completely organized and reviewed at Camp Mills, L. I., by Secretary of War Baker.

October 18—Movement overseas began.

November 30—Division proceeding to training area, in France.

1918.

February 16—Division proceeded to Lunéville in accordance with secret instructions. Participated in fighting along Lorraine lines from Lunéville to Baccarat.

March 31—Division stationed at Lunéville and Baccarat. Troops engaged in carrying out active front-line operations in conjunction with French troops in operation against enemy. Part of the line taken over.

April 30—Division held the Baccarat sector of the Lorraine front during the month of April. It participated as an entity in the fighting, local and general, on the front of the 7th French Corps.

May 1-22—Hostile daily average from May 1 to May 22 was 450 rounds. Smallest number for one day was 100, largest for one day 1,500 rounds. Our own fire for same divisions and same period averaged 800 rounds, excluding two exceptional days, May 1 and 2. On May 1 20,000 rounds were used and on May 2 the number used was 33,000. The minimum of our fire for one day was 300.

May 22-23.—Noon to Noon. Patrols very active, nine belonging to ourselves and the French operating during the night and early morning. There were no encounters. Artillery showed little activity on either side, our own, however, in conjunction with French, throwing about 50 per cent. more shells than did the Germans. Our anti-aircraft batteries successful in driving back many hostile planes. Hostile trench cannon registered some hits on our trenches. Enemy by rifle and grenade fire showed much nervousness during night, as he has been doing in this sector for some time. Last night the troops of the 42d threw 1,000 propaganda tracts in the German lines by means of rifle grenades.

Send Over Two Shells to One.

May 23-24.—Noon to Noon. In spite of slight increase in hostile artillery fire, French and American batteries maintained superiority of two shells to one. Slight use of gas by enemy. There was also an increase of small arms fire. Hostile patrol, attempting to approach our lines in early morning, driven back by rifle fire and grenade fire. Considerable movement behind German lines in working parties and on roads. Our anti-aircraft batteries active. Division threw 1,000 propaganda tracts into German lines.

May 24-25, Noon to Noon.—Almost complete cessation hostile artillery fire. Our own normally active. Hostile rifle fire also light. Machine gun fire normal. Large bodies of men and convoys observed in addition to normal movements on enemy roads. In one case ten companies of infantry with mounted officers and followed by wagons and trucks observed. Surveying and working parties very busy. Hostile machine-gun practice and signals for projector attacks also observed. Skirmish manoeuvres held behind German lines in afternoon. Our own troops, aside from artillery, were active mainly in patrols. Our patrols executed successful reconnoissances.

May 25-26, Noon to Noon.—Aside from patrol action, day quiet. Artillery activity subnormal. Machine-gun activity slight, except against patrol. Frontline battalion's machine companies successfully relieved during night. German deserters of the Landwehr class entered our lines this morning. In afternoon enemy fired fifteen winged bombs from trench cannon. Ours and French artillery using six times as many shells as the Germans. Much patrolling activity.

May 29—Following are additional and confidential details concerning attacks on 42d Division. Between 5:30 and 9 P. M., May 26th, 1,000 shells, of which 90 per cent. were gas, were thrown on our batteries. Practically no damage done. After this artillery fire was resumed and continued until morning with about 55 per cent. gas. At 1 A. M., the 27th, gas projector attacks, comprising about 800 shells in two bursts and consisting mainly of phosgene and some mustard. Our casualties were mainly in the 168th Infantry, (Iowa unit.)

May 28-29—The increased activities of artillery on both sides after the hostile attack of May 26-27 is shown by fact that from noon May 27 to noon May 28 our troops used 3,577 shells to 1,395 fired by the enemy. The Germans used 200 gas shells to our 153. Summarizing the events of two weeks from May 14 to May 28, the Division Chief of Staff reports: "The enemy has manifested greater activities of all sorts during this period than before, and has made vigorous but unsuccessful attempts to capture prisoners. It is probable that the enemy has been reinforced, as his fire has been much heavier without specific provocation than during the precipitation. It is probable that new or additional troops have come into sectors in the enemy's rear area, possibly being retired divisions from the Somme."

Win Hand-to-Hand Fight.

May 29—Additional and confidential details concerning attacks on 42d Division. Gas attack was made with projectors, some 250 to 300 drums, mainly of phosgene, being used. Our casualties were very light even in comparison with extent of attack. The enemy attempted to surround one of our outposts, attacking from three directions. Some of the enemy entered our trenches, but after fierce hand-to-hand fighting were expelled. We took prisoners, but number not yet reported. One prisoner states that division had order to take Americans prisoner at any cost. The gas attack and the three infantry attacks took place at about 12:30 A. M. Our trenches were bombarded with high explosives and gas during the remainder of the night.

May 29-30—Noon to Noon. Reduced hostile artillery fire. Continued lively movement behind enemy lines. American and French batteries used 30,000 shells, of which 1,600 were gas, and hostile batteries 325 shells, of which 55 were gas. Believed fire of our artillery struck ammunition dump, as large clouds of smoke followed by explosions noted.

May 30-31—Light fire of hostile artillery. Reduced activity hostile infantry. German artillery used 365 shells, as compared with 654 used by Americans and French. Our patrols active. Very little hostile patrolling.

May 31-June 1—Noon to Noon. Enemy artillery feeble. His machine guns active. French and American batteries used nearly 700 shells to enemy's 200. Our patrols fairly active.

June 2-3—Noon to Noon. Hostile artillery still inactive, but machine guns showing considerable activity. German infantry activity more than normal. Patrolling active on both sides. During twenty-four hours our batteries fired 250 and the enemy 29 rounds.

June 3-4—Noon to Noon. Hostile artillery fired only 170 rounds, to which our own and the French batteries replied with 950 shells. There are signs that the German front lines are now more strongly held than formerly. The rifle and grenade fire directed at our patrols is now distinctly heavier. During night one of our patrols blew up hostile observation post. Another patrol met and attacked a German patrol of seventeen men. After a fight in which three of the enemy were seen to fall our patrol retired. In disputed territory outside our wire has been placed a row of silhouette targets which show the outlines of a German soldier's head and shoulders. These are used by the enemy for target practice.

June 4-5—Noon to Noon. Enemy artillery showed increase, firing nearly 800 rounds. American and French batteries fired 1,200 rounds. Sounds of digging, hammering, and blasting from hostile positions very noticeable. One of our patrols found new trenches under construction and old ones undergoing reconstruction. This same patrol was strongly assailed, but succeeded in retreating with slight casualties.

June 5-6—Great artillery activity, especially in shell bombardment of our front lines and our batteries with high explosives and gas shells during the night. This was accompanied by steady harassing fire of machine guns. The bambardment occurred between 1 and 3 A. M., and comprised the use of 4,000 rounds of small calibre. In part this bombardment consisted of fire of diversion to accompany gas projector attacks made on the French divisions adjoining our troops to the east. Our batteries replied vigorously. Total shells used by enemy, 4,500, while we used 6,000. Our batteries appear to have struck and ignited an ammunition dump. Hostile aerial activity also above normal, comprising twenty flights over our lines. Much patrolling during the night, one enemy patrol being dispersed by our machine-gun fire and another driven back by one of our patrols after brief combat. The enemy showing a more aggressive spirit than heretofore.

Repel Two Attacks.

The enemy attacked in force at 12:45 A. M. in the region of the triangle Clerambaute Wood and on Le Thiolet, and at 1:15 A. M. on our positions at Bouresches. Both attacks were completely repulsed, with heavy losses to the enemy. Also between 6 and 7 o'clock this morning (June 5) the Germans made a rather strong attack on Bouresches and Clerambaute Woods. The Germans did not reach our positions. They were stopped 200 meters from our lines by the fire of the American infantry.

June 6-7—Notable features were abnormal activities of German aviators and of German troop movements. Twenty planes and twenty-eight balloons were in operation during the day, and two planes at night. Plentiful indications of construction noted. American and French batteries used 1,150 shells, of which 500 were gas, as compared with 350 used by the enemy.

June 7-8—German artillery fire more than usually heavy on our batteries. Continued lively movements behind the enemy lines. Two German batteries fired 600 rounds and French and Americans replied with 1,200. Hostile patrol appeared before our trenches early in the morning, but was dispersed by our rifle fire and barrage.

June 8-9—Aside from an increase in enemy aerial activities day was unusually quiet. German artillery fired about 200 and our batteries about 500 rounds. Our patrols very active. While one of our patrols was advancing one of our men fell into a shellhole, and the enemy, sending up three flares, opened fire with three machine guns.

June 9-10—Continued quiet. Enemy artillery fire decreased to ninety rounds, ours and French to 500 rounds. Only seven hostile planes observed. No rifle or grenade firing from German lines. In the morning our artillery dispersed and inflicted losses upon a working party which was constructing new wire belts between the enemy's first and second lines.

June 12-13—Great increase in hostile aviation, twenty-seven planes being observed in the sector. Artillery on both sides returned to about normal. Hostile fire of 550 and American-French fire of 750 rounds.

June 16—The 77th Division (Camp Upton) is about to enter the trenches, relieving this division for duty on battlefront.

June 17—Abnormally quiet day. Nine of our patrols were in action during the day.

June 18-19—The day was marked by violent fire of high explosives and gas shells by the German batteries on our lines of approach and communications. During the day the enemy used about 2,700 shells, of which about one-third contained gas. Hostile aviation about normal. Owing to artillery activity patrolling impossible. Infantry and cavalry observed manoeuvring behind enemy lines.

June 20—Marked decline in activity in this sector. Fire merely scattering, harassing with small calibres. No gas reported.

June 27—The first part of week was marked by violent night bombardments of our communications with high explosive shells of light calibre. Green and yellow cross gas shells were employed.

In the next following three weeks the 42d was in rest camp.

Praised by the French.

July 15-16—Intermediate position our sector held intact. No infantry attacks since morning. At this hour, 9:30 P. M., comparative quiet. This morning, (16th,) shortly after midnight, enemy opened terrific bombardment all along our line. At 4:20 A. M. his infantry attacked; 42d Division had five and one-half battalions on intermediate positions with rest of the division on second position. At no place held by our troops was enemy able to advance. At several points where he had penetrated American units counterattacked and restored positions with great loss to the enemy. Prisoners, together with machines, were captured. A German airplane was brought down by one of our automatic riflemen and the aviator killed. The conduct of the division has been the subject of congratulation by the French commanders. We lost no prisoners and have no missing men. Forty-second Division report to headquarters evening of the 16th includes the following: "The intermediate position (the combat position on this front) has been held intact from the Argonne to Rheims. On the front of the 21st French Army Corps, of which the 42d Division is a part, the enemy used in the attack of the first day six first-class divisions, the Guard cavalry division, the 2d Bavarian Division, the 88th Division, the (?) Division, the 1st Bavarian and the 7th Divisions.

"In spite of the most vigorous attempts, the enemy was able to set foot on the intermediate position at only one point. A counterattack by two companies of French and two companies of the 167th Infantry (Alabama unit) drove him from this position in a bloody hand-to-hand fight. The 167th captured twenty-five prisoners, several machine guns, and fifty dead Germans were counted in the trenches of one combat group attacked by this unit."

By 11 A. M. the enemy's first effort was spent, and he began to regroup his forces for a second attack. However, he was so badly shaken by his losses that he was unable to make a strong attack in the afternoon. There was a great deal of troop movements, much of which was exposed to our artillery fire. At 6 P. M. the enemy launched an attack on the front of the 13th French Division, but the attack was repulsed at all points. It is estimated that more than 800 enemy batteries were in action on the front from Rheims to the Argonne. Throughout the nights of 15th and 16th enemy aviation was extremely active over our rear areas. Bombs were dropped on roads and towns and the enemy planes fired with machine guns on moving troops and convoys. A low-flying plane was brought down by an automatic rifleman. The aviator was killed. Twenty enemy pursuit planes are reported on permanent patrol in the sector over our line to prevent our planes from penetrating enemy territory. Shells are still falling in the region of Vadenay. Throughout the 18th one of our positions received a heavy fire of gas shells.

July 17—Enemy artillery maintained a harassing fire along our whole front, but it was lighter than the day before. During afternoon enemy renewed the shelling of Hilaire-le-Grand and the road from Suippes to Jonchery.

The Rainbow Division apparently had a ten days' rest period at this time.

Take Three Towns.

July 27-28—At 10 A. M. some battalions attempted to cross the River Ourcq, but were driven back by heavy fire of artillery and lighter arms. Starting at 5 A. M., July 28, we entirely crossed the river, and after vigorous fighting took Seringes-et-Nesles, Nesles, and Sergy. We are mopping up those towns. By 9 A. M. we had obtained the objectives of the day set for us, that is, a line from east of Sergy to the crossroads which are one kilometer southeast of Fere-en-Tardenois. The crossroads were covered by American machine-gun fire. Our divisional artillery, assisted by the 51st Field Artillery Brigade, has been active since daylight, and is said to have a preponderance. The corps artillery is moving forward. We are informed that the 201st Division and the 4th Guards Division are immediately in front of us. We have consolidated our lines and are preparing to advance as soon as orders are received. An Alsatian deserter reports that the Germans will make a stand on the Vesle. We are encountering heavy machine-gun fire from airplanes extending back as far as the Forest de Fere.

July 31—Captured Seringes-et-Nesles. Enemy resisted strongly with artillery and machine guns. Hand-to-hand fighting. During night two hostile enemy attacks repulsed. A 1 P. M. reported that the 165th Infantry has reached the hill northeast of Muercy and are in touch with the 167th Infantry on their right. Line goes from Hill 212, skirts around Nesles, then east to Hill 184. Enemy's resistance tightening. Our wounded for twenty-four hours number 750, half from artillery and half from rifle fire. About 14 per cent. are mortally wounded. Our dead not yet counted.

During the night strong hostile columns and machine-gun units threatened an attack on our whole front, but the attack came only around Seringes, where some of the enemy filtered through. These were cut off on the north edge of the town by machine-gun fire, surrounded, and mopped up. Number of killed and prisoners not reported.

August 1—In the attacks made by the 42d Division yesterday afternoon no ground was gained. They were held up mostly by machine guns. The attacks made by other American divisions gave them entire possession of Clerges and of a narrow strip of ground to the north. On the left of the sector the enemy shelled our position with 77s and with high explosive shells of large calibre.

August 2.—Division still maintains contact on extreme left. Division moving forward. At midnight of Aug. 1 and 2 the enemy, according to prisoners, began his second retreat on our front. The first intimation we received that his retreat was beginning was his destruction of a number of ammunition dumps in the rear of his lines.

Shortly after daybreak our troops began to advance. Our only fresh troops, the 117th Engineers, acting as infantry, pushed over Hill 212, which has been the scene of bloody combats during the last few days. As this regiment neared Bois de la Pissotte they were halted by machine-gun fire from the southern edge of the woods. Other regiments also halted by machine-gun fire from the same woods. Regiments of our left, in liaison with the French, pressed on through the Forest de Nesles and up the open field to the west of the forest. Meanwhile the Bois de la Pissotte and Les Vons Hommes Fermes had been flanked and the enemy's machine gunners put to flight, so that the troops on our right were able to advance abreast of those on our left. Our artillery followed the infantry advance, and tonight all our regiments have crossed the Ourcq and are advancing slowly. Our most advanced elements occupied Chery-Chartreuve at down of Aug. 3.

August 3—French report possession of Soissons. Forty-second stopped in line Mareuil-Endole-Coulonges by machine-gun fire. First Guard Division (enemy) identified.

Armistice Stops Advance.

The Rainbow was withdrawn for rest and reorganization at this time.

September 22—The division reported at 4:15 P. M. We made two highly successful raids on Haumont and Marimbois Farm, capturing prisoners belonging to two enemy divisions. Aviation and artillery activities on both sides. Enemy puts down barrage on our raiding party.

September 26—Patrols sent out met with heavy machine-gun fire. Artillery violently active on both sides.

September 29—Usual patrolling and artillery activity in the Woevre.

September 30 to October 15—Heavy artillery fire. Active patroling.

October 16-17—The Rainbow captures Côte de Chatillon, east of the Meuse, after brilliant advance.

October 29-31—Patrols active. Heavy artillery action, division advancing. Prisoners exceed 2,500.

November 6—1st Corps continues successful advance, forcing enemy to retire. Patrols reach the Meuse.

November 9—42d Division, aided by units of the 1st Regulars, advancing steadily and reached the heights south of Sedan.

November 10—Advance continues.

November 11—Armistice.

SEVENTY-SEVENTH DIVISION.

September 30—Major Gen. J. Franklin Bell, U. S. A., arrives at Camp Upton and takes command of the division.

October, November, and December, 1917—Division in training at Upton.

March 31—Overseas movement began, and first units leave for port of embarkation.

April 13—First units arrive in France.

April 30—All units arrived safely overseas. Division ordered to British area, where it is attached to 39th British Division for instruction.

June 16—The division is about to enter the trenches, relieving the 42d (Rainbow) Division for duty on battlefront.

June 23-24—Division reports, "Herewith resume of German raids on Bandon Villa sector night June 23 to June 24. After heavy bombardment along front-line positions between Chamois Neuviller by both shells and gas, enemy to estimated strength of about one battalion attacked at 3 A. M., June 24, our post north of Neuville and post at Bonvillers. It appears that enemy's airplanes assisted the operations by means of their machine guns and bombs during the course of action. No changes in our lines."

June 24—Division reports, "Enemy raids on Neuvillers, between about 3 and 4 A. M., more or less successful. Little activity on part of our own machine guns. Same applies to machine guns of the enemy. Activity our trench mortars, none. Great activity on the part of enemy artillery, 3,000 310mm. shells, split between high explosives, shrapnel, mustard, and phosgene gas, between 3 and 7 A. M. today."

Heavy Artillery Fire.

June 27—In Lorraine sector, (77th and 42d Divisions.) The first part of the week was marked by violent night bombardment of our communications. N. E., shells of light calibre and green and yellow cross shells were employed.

June 30-July 1—German machine-gun fire comprised 153 bursts released from Neuvilles, Chamois, Bois de Shales, Battant des Moules, and other points. German artillery fired about 200 rounds, of which nearly all were 77s, and of which only six contained gas. German planes made twenty flights, penetrating on several occasions to our rear areas, once as far back as Baccarat. Working parties several times observed, but there is no evidence, that works of particular importance are under construction. Train movement above the normal, especially around Circy. Several patrols composed of American and French soldiers reconnoitred the German line without accident.

July 1-2—Noon to Noon. Total of machine-gun bursts increased to 287. These came from Bout des Pretres and from Demevre, as well as from the same activities as on the preceding day. The German batteries fired 200 shells, of which forty were 105s. The German planes made ten flights. In the enemy rear areas two platoons of cavalry and an abnormal number of wagons and individuals were seen. As a result of patrol, we located two hostile listening posts.

July 2-3—Noon to Noon. The artillery fire of the enemy consisted of 188 shells, of which nearly all were 77s. One heavy gun, described as a naval gun and thought to be of 210 calibre, fired thirty rounds in the direction of Blamont with an interval of thirty seconds between rounds. The majority of the other shells fell near Badonviller and most of them were fired from Montigny. The enemy snipers continued to be very active, about 150 rounds being counted. This and the heavy machine-gun fire of the enemy, localized on the St. Pole sub-sector, was the reaction of our patrolling party. Ten planes were seen over our lines, one of them flying very low for twenty minutes. Four enemy balloons were also in observation during the day. On the Repaix Road many men were observed and in the evening there was much wagon traffic. Four of our patrols were in operation during the night, two of them bringing back information as to the condition of the enemy's fire and trenches. One of the ambush patrols, made up of one officer, twenty-eight Americans, and fifteen Frenchmen, was stopped by machine gun and rifle fire and forced to return. There were no casualties. Another ambush patrol of one American officer, twenty Americans, and twenty-two Frenchmen, was unable to gain contact with the enemy.

July 3-4—Noon to Noon. German artillery fired less than 300 shells. Our own artillery fired 2,200, of which 1,700 were 75s and the rest of large calibre. German machine guns fired 270 bursts. Only four hostile planes and four balloons were observed. Besides the patrol which was driven off (before reported) a party of thirty Germans attacked a small post at 2 o'clock this morning. The occupants of the post retired according to order, but reoccupied the post at 2:30 o'clock this morning. A new camouflaged road, a new sap, which is apparently a new trench, and digging operations for a purpose not yet determined have been observed. The enemy is making extensive use of a church tower as a machine-gun emplacement, as well as for purposes of observation.

Germans Cut Wire.

July 4-5—Noon to Noon. The German artillery fired 130 rounds and our own artillery 325 rounds. The German machine guns delivered about 150 bursts on our positions. No German balloons were up. German working parties were observed to be constructing new camouflage and working in their trenches. Our patrol discovered that the Germans had cut our wires in many places in the morning of July 4. Our ambush patrols were unable to take prisoners.

July 5-6—Noon to Noon. The enemy fired but 785 shells, practically all of which were 77s. Our batteries fired 320 shells, all of them 75s. The enemy's rifle and machine-gun fire continued to come principally from Bois du Feys and Bois des Hales. Fifteen German planes were in operation, one of which is reported to have dropped bombs on Migne Ville. Eight observation balloons were also seen. The movement of trains in the German rear area was abnormal in the afternoon.

July 6—The 77th Division averaging 184 rounds daily. Maximum for one day 302 rounds fired July 6. Minimum for one day 97 rounds fired July 4.

July 6-7—Noon to Noon. The enemy artillery used 800 shells of small and medium calibre, the majority of which were 77s. Our own artillery was slightly more active, using 75s. The enemy rifle and machine-gun fire continued to come from the Bois du Feys and the Bois des Hales. His machine guns were particularly active, 324 bursts being counted. Three enemy planes were seen in flight and six balloons were counted.

July 7-8—Noon to Noon. The enemy artillery fired 155 shells of large and small calibre, of which some contained shrapnel and gas. Nine enemy planes and three observation balloons were counted. Our patrols, which penetrated the third German line in the Sailiant du Feys, reported the sector in very bad condition and evidently very lightly held.

July 8-9—Noon to Noon. Enemy's machine-gun fire very pronounced. His artillery fired less than 200 shells, of which a few were 15s and 210s. Fourteen planes and five balloons counted. Enemy busily constructing replacements, pillboxes, and observation posts. Much smoke and numerous signal lights behind his lines.

July 9-10—Noon to Noon. Enemy's artillery fired 199 shells of small calibre. Our artillery fired 119 shells, all of them 75s. At works previously reported there are now three minenwerfer guns with small blockhouses in the rear. Continuous and very marked movements noted in rear areas in the vicinity of and en route to Blamont, Repaix, Verdenal, and other points. Big explosions heard to Blamont, followed by great clouds of white smoke.

Raid Enemy Trenches.

July 21—The division reports relative to patrol of 21st: "A daylight raiding party composed of two officers and fifty-two men of other ranks left Grand Bois at 2 o'clock in the afternoon to attack Barricade du Carrefour and secure prisoners. The heavy resistance encountered by our party, the organization of the enemy to meet the attack, the number and location of machine guns, and the signals used indicate a preconceived plan of ambush. Before the party started out a 37-millimeter gun was placed in position to neutralize the fire of machine guns if they opened up opposite Neuviller or Arc de Montreux. The crew of this gun was unable to give any assistance to the raiding party owing to the thickness of the woods in which the fight occurred. Our forces were allowed to cross No Man's Land, cut the enemy's wire, and penetrate to the first-line trenches before the enemy offered any resistance. As they entered the enemy's trenches a bugle blast was sounded and a rifle shot was fired. Immediately after the blast of the bugle the enemy opened fire from the front and the left with rifles and grenades. At this the bugle sounded again, and machine guns and rifles opened up from the right. Four enemy machine guns were heard firing, one located to the left and outside the wire, two in front, and one to the right. The fight lasted for about forty-five minutes, when some of the wounded, having lost their firearms, returned to our trenches." (Report does not state number of casualties.)

July 22—The 77th Division reports that as a result of an enemy raid some of our men are missing.

July 23—Reported some of our men missing as a result of an enemy raid. Further reports state that these losses were suffered by one of our patrols, (presumably the action of July 21.)

The division up to this time had been in the trenches for about four weeks, and was withdrawn to rest camp.

August 31—The 77th Division reports: "Our artillery active, placing harassing and destructive fire on Bazooches. The small wood between the Vesle and the railroad west of the wood of the Château de Diable has been cleared of the enemy."

September 2—The division reports: "A daylight patrol penetrated to Bazooches and attacked enemy patrol, inflicting loss. Our patrol suffered only one casualty."

September 4—At 5:15 P. M. the division reports, "patrols along front cross Vesle and force enemy back. One combat patrol as far as La Croix la Motte, between Vauxcere and Blanzy. Three battalions across the Vesle."

September 5—At 11 P. M. division reports: "North of the Vesle strong patrols are being pushed forward and are encountering strong isolated resistance by machine guns. Casualties light."

September 7—The division reports: "Fighting continued along the entire front, with strong resistance from the enemy in the neighborhood of Glennes. Line runs along Vielarcy-Villers-on-Prayers to a point west of Roervillion; thence south to the edge of Merves. Our troops moving up to consolidate line, enemy concentrating to the northeast of Glennes. Our troops driving the enemy out of La Gendriere Farm and passed the Aisne-Canal. Harassing and concentrating fire of artillery. Enemy using large percentage of gas. Airplanes observing enemy airplanes harassing advance of troops with machine-gun fire and bombing Seine points at night. Weather fair. Casualties, 1 officer killed, 6 wounded, 3 gassed. Number enlisted men killed not known; 157 wounded, 24 gassed.

Division Takes Grand Pre.

At 10 A. M., Sept. 7, the division reports: "Weather fair, our division pushing enemy toward the Aisne, encountering increasing resistance along our right flank. Our artillery has taken position north of the Vesle, firing on sensitive points along the Aisne. Encountering artillery fire along the advanced lines and concentrated on towns. Our airplanes active. Enemy airplanes very active firing on our advancing troops with machine guns and registering for artillery. Visibility fair. All of our troops north of the Vesle and advancing. Patrols have reached the Aisne Canal. Enemy troops forced to retire north of the Aisne."

September 8—Division reports: "Weather fair. Active patrolling, encountering resistance from enemy machine guns and snipers. No changes in line. Harassing and destructive fire north of the Aisne by our artillery while enemy artillery firing on all towns and woods occupied by our troops. Aerial activities decreased. Considerable activity along the front.

September 13—5:25 P. M.—The First Battalion of the 154th Brigade participated in French attack this morning north of the Vesle. The Americans attacked Revillion and Glennes and reached their second objective, capturing fifty prisoners. The French division on the right of the Americans reached the first objective, capturing 200 prisoners, but further progress difficult owing to machine-gun fire.

September 14—11:55 P. M. Patrols active along entire front. Artillery on both sides active.

October 6—Slow progress made northeast of Binarville against stubborn resistance by machine guns and trench mortars.

October 13—The 77th Division captured Grandpre. The attack on Grandpre met with heavy machine-gun fire. A hostile counterattack south of Landres-et-St. Georges was repulsed at 8 P. M.

November 5—The 77th in battle along its entire front. Enemy retreating and resistance strong. Artillery active firing on retreating Germans. Harassing artillery returned by enemy. Aviation active on both sides. Enemy flew over our front lines and delivered machine-gun fire on our advancing troops. Two enemy planes brought down.

November 6-11—Division continues in action. Detailed report not yet received.

November 11—Armistice in effect.

PLANS REFINERY IN MEXICO.

Island Oil Arranges for Output of 20,000 Barrels Daily.

The Island Oil and Transport Corporation has practically completed plans for building an oil refinery on its properties in Mexico, with an estimated daily capacity of 20,000 barrels. Arrangements have been made with one of the largesa American oil refining and markeaing corporations whereby this concen and the Island Oil and Transport Corporation will jointly own and operate the refinery. The latter concern will receive a substantial majority of the stock of the refinery as a bonus for its oil supply contract and the use of its terminal facilities. This stock will be held in the Island Oil and Transport Corporation's treasury, and it is possible that at a later time it will be distributed to holders of the Island Oil shares. A. B. Leach, fiscal agent for the Island Oil and Transport Corporation, are expected to announce details of the financing plan within a few days.

The annual production of petroleum by the Island Oil Corporation is 50,000,000 barrels. It is expected that the new refinery will have a gasoline capacity of about 1,200,000 barrels a year. The fact that the use of gasoline is extending in agricultural work was an influencing motive in the decision of the Island Oil Directors to enter the refining business. Having large shipping terminals on the Gulf of Mexico, Island Oil plans to open an avenue for its gasoline product on the American side of the Gulf and from terminal points Mississippi Valley markets.

Consul Suggests Arbitration.

Consul Paul H. Foster of Bilbao, Spain, recommends that, in the event of disputes between firms in that district and those in the United States, the matters be referred to the Arbitration Committee of the local Chamber of Commerce. In turn they will correspond with the local Official Camara de Comercio, so that an adjustment may be attempted or reached before referring the case to the courts of law. By doing this it would eliminate unnecessary expense of litigation, and, still more important, any consequent resentment and alienation between buyer and seller.

ing, to expand the "Foyers du Soldat Franco-Americaine Y. M. C. A.," until at the beginning of this year 1,000 foyers, or "firesides," had been opened. The French War Ministry, said Dr. Mott, recently showed its appreciation by sending a deputation to New York, asking that the work be continued until at least 2,000 foyers had been established.

"You do not deceive the French," continued Dr. Mott, "for, face to face with what we were doing in our own army, recognizing the real merit of our work, they told us they wished to intrust to our care the great enterprise of serving the French Army. Nor have you heard a well-authenticated criticism concerning what the Y. M. C. A. has done for the 4,000,000 or 5,000,000 prisoners of war on both sides of the struggle. The American people should be reminded that the Y. M. C. A. alone was permitted to serve the prisoners of war on both sides from almost the beginning of the war. I know that I am well within bounds when I say that we have been the means, directly or indirectly, of saving the lives of thousands of prisoners, and of saving the sanity of thousands of others."

Discussing the Y. M. C. A.'s work, Dr. Mott asked whether anybody had heard criticism of hese, some of the leading features of the overseas program:

Operation of 1,500 units.

Dispatch of hundreds of athletic directors and expenditure of $2,000,000 for sports equipment.

Maintenance of 100 theatrical troupes.

Display of 4,000,000 feet of film to a nightly attendance of 300,000 men.

Free distribution of 10,000,000 sheets of stationery and envelopes weekly.

Maintenance of extensive lecture tours.

Educational courses to keep men bright, with expenditure of $2,000,000 for free textbooks.

Dispatch of leading preachers of the country to safeguard morals.

Sending of more than 250,000 remittances, totaling $13,000,000, from soldiers to relatives here.

An association man, until lately the only worker, on every transport.

Dr. Mott then took up one by one the various charges which have been lodged against the association. He spoke of how the Y. M. C. A. had been "literally compelled" to take over the canteens and of how it had been unable to compete with the Government on a selling basis. This matter was finally adjusted and now all "Y" canteens sell at the same prices charged in the Quartermasters' stores.

Replies to Canteen Criticism.

"Growing out of the complaint that the Y. M. C. A. had charged higher prices in its canteens than had to be paid at the Quartermasters' stores," he went on, "is the charge that the association has been profiteering. This charge has been investigated on two occasions by the War Department, and each time it pronounced the charge to be groundless. The association has not only operated the canteen at a loss, but has also given away millions of dollars' worth of free supplies in its front line trench work, or while the men were going into action or coming out of action, or under other circumstances of special strain. Apart from the most generous provision made by the Red Cross for soldiers and sailors I know of no other agency which has expended so much money on free supplies."

The complaint that the Y. M. C. A. had sold gift tobacco, said Dr. Mott, had been investigated so often and found false that no further discussion of it should be necessary. He cited the report made by The Sun as completely exonerating his organization.

"Complaints have been made with reference to certain members of the personnel of the Y. M. C. A., as to lapses in character, as to inefficiency, and as to wrong manners, attitude, and spirit. Wherever such charges have been made with sufficient definiteness to make it possible to deal with them, they have been investigated promptly and any necessary action has been taken with equal promptness. The Y. M. C. A. could surely have no object in overlooking such complaints, for its one desire is to make its service of the army and navy as efficient as possible. It is an impressive fact that among all the criticisms of this kind which have been made in this period of criticism charges thus far have been made against only between thirty and forty different persons, and all of these have by no means been substantiated. This is a remarkable showing when it is recalled that the Y. M. C. A. now has a staff of nearly 12,000 men and women, the large majority of whom are overseas.

"Again and again," he said, "the complaint is made that the Y. M. C. A. does not help the wounded. Those who voice this complaint are evidently ignorant of the understanding entered into between the Red Cross and the Y. M. C. A., by which the Red Cross is regarded as responsible for serving the sick and wounded in the hospital areas. The Y. M. C. A. is not at liberty to work in these areas, save on the invitation of the Red Cross.

"Now and then one still hears the complaint that the Y. M. C. A. did not work at the front and in the real danger zones. The facts, however, as reported by the military authorities and others in touch with the situation, have shown how absolutely untrue is such a charge. Only the other day it was pointed out that 10 workers in France were killed by shellfire or gas, at least 40 were seriously wounded, 39 more died as a result of wounds or accidents or as a result of disease brought on by prolonged work in exposed areas, and that many were cited for bravery in their work in most dangerous positions. During the fighting in the Argonne 700 workers, 50 of these women, were attached to the different fighting units and they helped the men under most dangerous conditions. The 'Y' was also represented by more than 2,000 workers in the Château-Thierry and St. Mihiel drives.

"We do not expect to escape criticism. One day our Chief Secretary in France went to General Pershing. We had not been getting our supplies rapidly enough and there had developed a great deal of dissatisfaction. 'We have had much criticism, General,' the Secretary said. 'The Y. M. C. A. is not in this to avoid criticism, is it? but to render as much service as possible to the men under the limitations under which we are all working in this war.' To my mind that sentence puts the whole business in a nutshell. It would be difficult, I fancy impossible, to mention an organization or to name a department of our own Government or of any other Government which has not during the war and during the post-war period had its shortcomings, weaknesses, and grounds for complaint."

In closing his speech Dr. Mott made a strong plea for all who had complaints against the Y. M. C. A. to forward their criticisms in concise and definite form to national headquarters at 347 Madison Avenue.

961 MORE ARMY CASUALTIES ARE REPORTED

98 Dead in Yesterday's Lists; Grand Total is Now 242,550

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—Three army casualty lists were issued today by the War Department, containing 961 names, bringing the total for the army up to 236,779, after an official weekly recheck of totals under each classification. No Marine Corps casualty list was issued, but the total previously announced for that arm was 5,771. The total for the army and Marine Corps is now 242,550.

Army lists issued today contained the names of 21 died of accident, 77 died of disease, 163 severely wounded, 276 wounded to a degree undetermined, 413 slightly wounded, and 11 missing in action.

Facts You Should Know About Shoe Prices

The representative of England is in this market buying leather for his Government. As there was not an over-supply of leather, it has forced prices up, particularly on Kid and Calf. The advance will make at least from 25c to 50c per pair additional on the retail price of shoes.

England has shown her appreciation by an embargo on our shoes. She apparently wants leather for her factories and you pay the advance—why let England take our leather and refuse our shoes?

We appreciate the high cost of living, and consequently our desire is to maintain our present popular prices. This we can do for the present, but if high prices for leather continue we must at some future time advance our prices.

Today we are selling many of our shoes to the consumer for less than the average merchant can buy them, and this is not on account of the use of undesirable material, as some may think, but entirely on account of economy in distribution.

Shoes are "walked on" and abused, but we only sell merchandise of a quality which we believe in and protect our customers as fully as the stores asking more money for the same shoes.

That our shoes have unusual value is proven by the fact that we sold last year in men's and women's shoes 840,370 pairs; approximately all in New York and vicinity. This we could not have done if our values were not right.

HELP WANTED—Male.

ASSISTANT TO THE MANAGEMENT.

A Genuine Opportunity.

A large and growing manufacturing concern (located near Boston), of national reputation and international affiliations, is seeking to fill an important vacancy on its executive staff.

The position in question has been newly created, to enable the President to delegate various executive functions and to utilize the services of a thoroughly capable man who will ultimately assume a large part of the general management.

The picture which the President has of the kind of man who will succeed in the capacity outlined above is as follows:

AGE: About 34 or 35 years, with a degree of maturity greater, if possible, than is usually found at that age.

EXPERIENCE: A record of successful executive accomplishment in the manufacturing field. Practical experience in dealing with problems of organization and management, and sound knowledge of methods of procedure are essential.

PERSONAL QUALIFICATIONS:

1. Superior executive ability which will enable him to deal effectively with new situations as they arise.
2. Poise and a judicial quality which will inspire confidence in his mental processes.
3. Initiative and resourcefulness which will assist him in obtaining results without close supervision by others.
4. Tact, co-operative spirit, and adaptability which will insure his making good with his associates and obtaining their support.

Certain special requirements, such as representing the company as a leading executive, dealing with other concerns and doing some traveling, must also be met.

To the right man this position offers a genuine opportunity for growth. He will be cordially received into an official family of young men who know the value of team work and are practicing it.

The initial salary has been set at $4,000, but promotion will be rapid and future remuneration will depend altogether upon the results which the successful applicant is able to accomplish.

To insure consideration applications should set forth full particulars concerning age, nationality, business experience, personal qualifications and past and present connections. Please state these as concisely as possible, and if convenient, kindly forward a recent photograph which will be returned after inspection.

Do ont answer this advertisement unless you are thoroughly convinced of your eligibility and can demonstrate in your letter that it would be advantageous to engage you. Address G 589 Times Downtown.

MISS BJURSTEDT DEFEATS MISS WAGNER IN FINAL MATCH OF HEIGHTS CASINO TENNIS TOURNEY

MOLLA BJURSTEDT WINS ANOTHER CUP

Norse Girl Defeats Miss Wagner in the Final at Heights Casino Tourney.

LARGE GALLERY APPLAUDS

F. B. Alexander, Playing with Norwegian Star, Wins Exhibition Match at Mixed Doubles.

Miss Molla Bjurstedt came back into her own yesterday and by playing the sort of tennis which has placed her in front of all her sister players, she defeated Miss Marie Wagner in the finals of the women's cup singles at the Heights Casino in Brooklyn. The scores were 6—2, 6—4. Never has she shown more marvelous agility in bounding over the indoor courts. It seemed at times that almost intuitively she knew where Miss Wagner's drives were coming and the manner in which she elusively glided from one position to another, first in the deeper court and then up at the net, brought forth rounds of applause from the enthusiastic gallery.

The match yesterday, by the way, attracted the largest gathering of tennis enthusiasts that has been at the Casino in a long time. The fact that Miss Bjurstedt was defeated on Friday in the doubles with Miss Sears of Boston as her partner, led many to suspect that other women tennis players were approaching the standard of play which has been shown during the last few seasons by the Norse girl.

In the semi-final match in the morning Miss Wagner defeated Miss Eleanor Goss for the honor of playing Miss Bjurstedt. This semi-final brought forth some more spectacular play on the part of Miss Wagner, and her defeat of Miss Goss is an excellent tribute to the improvement of her game. The first set in particular was a speedy, thrilling affair, and it was not until the two evenly matched players had fought at a killing pace for eighteen games that Miss Wagner came through with victory at 10—8.

She won the next set 6—2, but, nevertheless, this ordeal in the morning had its effect on Miss Wagner's game in the afternoon. Her play lacked the dash and spirit of the Norse girl, and the splendid playing she has been doing throughout the week probably caused her to tire earlier than usual.

Miss Wagner's success during this tournament had raised the hopes of her friends that there was a real battle in store for Miss Bjurstedt. Every available spot of vantage about the court was taken up by anxious spectators. Before the match started gossip about Miss Wagner's excellent chances against this aggressive little athlete from the Land of the Midnight Sun buzzed through the crowd. But they reckoned not with the reserve power which Miss Bjurstedt was holding for this match. Before it started she was the most unconcerned person in the whole gathering.

Miss Bjurstedt took the first game easily, but in the second game Miss Wagner carried it to deuce before the Norse girl won. Miss Wagner took the third game and put up a stubborn battle in the fourth game, the score going to deuce several times. With the games 5—1 in Miss Bjurstedt's favor, Miss Wagner rallied and took the seventh game, the Norse girl taking the next and set.

Miss Wagner's great effort came in the second set. She started out by taking the first game, while Miss Bjurstedt took the next two. Miss Wagner won the next game, making it two all, and her service carried her through to another game, and there was a loud round of applause when she went into the lead, with the games 3—2. It was at this stage of the match that Miss Bjursted flashed her best game. Swift and sure, she directed her attack against her opponent and with spirited volleying and terrific overhead smashes, she took the next three games in rapid succession, Miss Wagner getting only two points in these three games.

With the count on games 5—3 in Miss Bjurstedt's favor, Miss Wagner made a supreme effort and won the next game. Miss Bjurstedt needed the next game to take the match and she captured it with comparative ease, covering the court with such remarkable speed that no matter where Miss Wagner placed the ball the Norse girl was always there to smash it back.

The point score:

FIRST SET.

Miss Bjurstedt.....	4	7	2	8	4	4	4	5	38	6
Miss Wagner......	2	5	4	6	1	0	6	3	27	2

SECOND SET.

Miss Bjurstedt.....	1	4	5	2	1	4	4	4	1	4	30	6
Miss Wagner.......	4	0	3	4	4	0	1	1	4	2	23	4

After this match, the large gallery waited to see the exhibition doubles between Miss Bjurstedt and Fred Alexander and Mrs. George Wightman of Boston and Harry McNeal, professional at the Heights Casino. The Bjurstedt-Alexander team won, 6—3, 10—8, after a spirited display of tennis which kept the spectators excited from start to finish.

The second set found Alexander, the veteran internationalist, at his best, and with Miss Bjurstedt as an able partner, he played a game which was a pleasure to watch. McNeal and Mrs. Wightman put up a stubborn defense, but the terrific pace set by the other pair was too difficult for them to follow.

BOOK GAME WITH AMHERST.

Director Cann Announces N. Y. U. Football Schedule.

In making public New York University's football schedule for the coming year, Frank H. Cann, Director of Athletics, announced that Amherst College had been added to the list of opponents for the local institution.

With arrangements for the annual contest with Columbia practically completed, the schedule now stands as follows: Amherst, Haverford, Wesleyan, Rensselaer Poly. Institute, Trinity, Union, Stevens, and Columbia.

NEWARK WANTS TITLE MEET

Gymnastic Championships Will Be Promoted by A. A. U.

The annual competition for the Metropolitan A. A. U. gymnastic championships will probably be promoted this year by the local A. A. U. body, as was the case last year. This became known yesterday at a meeting of the Gymnastic Championships Committee. Only one application for the annual title tournament had been received. This came from the Newark Y. M. C. A.

The tournament was held last year at the Twenty-third Street Y. M. C. A. under the auspices of the Metropolitan A. A. U. A record crowd witnessed the strong men in action, and the event resulted in a financial success for the local association.

YALE TO ENTER RUNNERS.

Elis May Send Athletes to Championship Games Here.

Athletic representatives of Yale will probably be seen in competition at some of the leading indoor meets which will be held shortly. At the local A. A. U. headquarters yesterday a letter was received from the New Haven institution in which the Yale athletic manager requested the Metropolitan Registration Committee to forward immediately about twenty-five or thirty registration blanks.

Unofficially it is said that plans are being arranged to have Yale compete in the Boston A. A. games, March 1, and the national championships in Brooklyn, March 8.

GIANTS LOSE SLIM SALLEE.

Smooth Arguments of McGraw Fail to Move New York's Southpaw.

It seems to be true, after all, that Slim Sallee, the Giants' lanky southpaw, is going to retire from baseball. Slim had threatened to do this very thing several times, so when he announced recently that he was going to raise tobacco in Kentucky no one took the threat seriously.

A few days ago Manager McGraw went to Sallee's home in Higginsport, Ohio, where Slim used to wear the Sheriff's tin star, and asked him to sign a contract. Slim told the Giants' manager he really meant it this time and refused to sign. Manager McGraw used all the arguments in the world and offered Slim everything in town outside of the City Hall and Brooklyn Bridge, but Sallee refused to listen and said he was going to raise tobacco and get rich.

McGraw had one argument up his sleeve which he then sprung on Sallee, hoping that it would be a clincher and change the pitcher's mind. The Gaints' manager whispered to Slim that the Anti-Saloon League was going to place the ban on tobacco as they had on rum and that in another year or so he would leave himself open to arrest for raising the weed. Even this failed to move Sallee, so the Giants will have to worry along as best they can without him.

YALE HAS STRONG NINE.

Last Season's Stars Are Expected to Return.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Feb. 8.—Captain R. B. Boyd of the Yale baseball nine has a squad strong in quality and large in number, assuring a team perhaps a trifle better than the Yale average in recent campaigns. Half a dozen players of the last two or three seasons, who have been in military service, are possibilities, although they have not yet returned to college. Uncertainty still prevails over the return of Thorne Murphy, son of the late Mike Murphy, an unusually clever second baseman, and a member of the freshman nine in 1916. Murphy has been in aviation service. If he returns to college in March, as is expected, he will go to second base, while Tom Sawyer, the former Exeter keystone fielder, who played last season on the Yale 'Varsity without an error, will be moved along to shortstop.

The team suffered a loss in the graduation of Eddie Talcott, the most brilliant Yale pitcher of recent seasons, but Coxe, a burly left-hander, and Robinson, a right-hander, who were the alternate pitchers of the freshman team last year, are exceptionally promising men. Behind the bat Cal Holmes, 'Varsity catcher last year, has a formidable rival in Sheehan, the former Andover backstop. The pair will divide Yale's catching.

Hager, who was first baseman of the University of Virginia nine last year, is the leading candidate for this position on the Yale team. He also formerly played at Andover. Because of the suspension of the one-year eligibility rule, Hagar is enabled to pass from the Virginia to the Yale nine without loss of playing time.

Ray Gage, the diminutive third baseman of last year's nine, is favorite in the competition for this position, although Prann, a utility player, will be given a trial. Captain Boyd will return to centre field. He is a former Andover star, and a brilliant all-round player, although his batting last season was far below his former standard. Eddie Shevlin, Captain of the freshmen last year, is sure of an outfield position, judged by his consistent form. He is a cousin of Tom Shevlin, Yale's most brilliant all-round athlete of fifteen years ago. Faherty, Captain of the Andover team two years ago, is another candidate of exceptional strength for the outfield. Robert Holden, centre fielder of the Yale 'Varsity in 1916, will probably return to college before the beginning of the season and rejoin the baseball candidates.

22 GAMES FOR FORDHAM.

Yale, Princeton, and Army on Baseball Schedule.

Fordham's baseball schedule, as announced yesterday by Manager Frank V. McMahon, consists of twenty-two contests, nine of which will be staged at Fordham Field. Among the teams on the list are Yale, Princeton, Army, Columbia, and Georgetown.

Lafayette, Boston College, Yale, and Catholic University will meet Fordham for the first time in several years. The annual home-and-home series with Columbia, Holy Cross, and Georgetown will again be played this season. In addition to the games already arranged, contests are pending with Lehigh, Colgate, C. C. N. Y., Tufts, and the University of Pennsylvania.

The complete schedule follows:

April 2, Cathedral at Fordham; April 9, St. John's at Fordham; April 12, Yale at New Haven, Conn.; April 16, Seton Hall at Fordham; April 17, Boston College at Fordham; April 23, U. S. Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md.; April 24, Mount St. Joseph's at Baltimore, Md.; April 25, Georgetown at Washington, D. C.; April 26, Catholic University at Washington, D. C.; April 30, Columbia at Fordham; May 3, Villanova at Fordham; May 7, Columbia at South Field; May 14, Princeton at Princeton, N. J.; May 17, U. S. Military Academy at West Point, N. Y.; May 21, Seton Hall at East Orange, N. J., (pending;) May 22, Holy Cross at Fordham; May 24; Rutgers at Fordham; May 28, St. John's of Brooklyn, (pending;) May 30, Georgetown at Fordham; June 4, Lafayette at Easton, Penn.; June 6, Boston College at Boston, Mass.; June 7, Holy Cross at Worcester, Mass.

WILLIAMS GIVES UP TRIP.

Customary Southern Trip of Berkshire Nine Is Abandoned.

WILLIAMSTOWN, Feb. 8.—No Southern trip is planned by the Williams baseball nine this Spring. The former custom of journeying to Dixieland during Easter week as a preliminary to the regular schedule has been given up. Owing to the depleted condition of the treasury and the difficulties met in rearranging sports on a pre-war basis, the Athletic Council has decided to wait another year, at least, before resuming the Southern trip.

Harold Card of North Adams, leading candidate for twirler on the 'Varsity nine at the time he left college a year ago to join the colors, has returned from France, and, if he resumes his course at Williams, the pitching of the nine promises to be well cared for. At Drury High School in North Adams Card turned in two Berkshire championships for his school before entering Williams.

LEBOW TO LEAD C. C. N. Y.

Harry Lebow has been elected captain of the City College baseball team. Lebow, who is a senior, played left field for the last two seasons. He is also a member of the 'varsity track and basket ball teams.

Coach Joe Deering has sent out a call for candidates and will start practice Monday. There is much material on hand, as many of last season's players have returned. Among them are S. Mathews, pitcher; Nat Krinsky, Arthur Taft, Saxe, S. Shannon, all infielders; and Greenwald and Lebow, outfielders. Freehill, who played shortstop on last season's team, expects to be back at college before the baseball season opens. O'Connor, Lawsky, Murray, and Morris of last season's squad, have also returned.

Almost the entire freshman team has returned to college intact. The Lavender had a very strong freshman team last season and lost only one game.

HARVARD TO START BASEBALL PRACTICE

Coach Duffy Has Promising Material in Rookie Candidates for Team.

CAMBRIDGE, MASS, Feb. 8.—Harvard sports will get under way next week on Soldiers' Field. The initial meeting for candidates for the baseball team is to be held Monday evening in the Harvard Union, and practice for the batteries starts in the cage Tuesday. Captain Whitman has called out his oarsmen for work Monday afternoon.

The track men are working daily out of doors, and will get their first test of the year Saturday night at a service meet in Boston. The hockey team will continue its preparation for the Princeton match, whenever the ice is favorable, while the wrestlers, boxers, and swimmers are practicing regularly for coming meets.

Coach Duffy will have a good sized baseball squad to work with, and no one of the men can be said to be sure of his position. The players for the most part are rookies. Behind the plate, he has Gammack of last year's team, Blair of the 1921 nine, and Rufe Bond, the football man, who is to return to college after receiving an ensign's commission. In the box no man of experience is available. Babe Felton, Stan Johnson, Hank Erb and Charley Butterfield should furnish Duffy with one or two dependable pitchers.

Jimmy King, Jabish Holmes, and Jeff Jones are the candidates for the initial sack, while Willard McLeod, who resigned the 1918 captaincy for aviation; "Peanut" Shaw, and "Babe" Frothingham are favored in the run for the keystone hassock. Storer Baldwin and Tom Enwright are a pair of capable shortstops, and Tom Meehan and Morris Phinney have designs on third base. The outfield candidates include Bobby Gross of the hockey team, Eddie Casey of football fame, Alexander Bright, Ned Bigelow, Gardner Coolidge, and Jack Baldwin.

The most important baseball dates are as follows: May 3, Pennsylvania at Philadelphia; May 10, Dartmouth on Soldiers' Field; May 17, 24, Princeton; May 30, Brown at Providence; May 31, Brown at Cambridge. The tentative dates for the games with Yale are: June 17, at New Haven; June 18, at Cambridge; June 21, at New York, if a third game is necessary. The deciding game in the Princeton series is also tentatively slated for New York.

Forty-eight entries are to be made in the East Armory meet Saturday. Henry Flower, who has done the 100 in 10 1-5 seconds, is back in college, and will run the 60 and 300-yard runs in this meet. Gourdin, the sprinter, Dennis O. Connell, and Henry Costigan are the other promising performers entered. A relay race will be held with M. I. T.

Harvard's wrestling schedule includes bouts with Brown at Providence on March 1, and at New Haven with Yale the following Saturday. The customary Winter carnival will be held March 14. An effort is being made to match Harrie Dadmun, captain of the 1916 football team, with Bill Snow, who played on the same eleven, in a four-round boxing match. Snow won the Harvard heavyweight wrestling and boxing championships two years ago.

WILL COACH TRACK TEAM.

"Doc" Lewis Is Added to Staff at Penn State.

STATE COLLEGE, Penn., Feb. 8.—In building up an efficient department of physical education, another former Penn. State coach has been added to the department as assistant physical director to Hugo Bezdek, head of the department. Lieutenant W. E. Lewis, former instructor in physical education, director of the gymnasium and wrestling coach, is the new member of the staff.

"Doc" Lewis, as he is more familiarly known to Penn. State students, is the man who put Penn. State on the wrestling map and every year his teams would defeat the best college teams in the country. "Doc" seemed to have a peculiar ability for developing wrestlers and he will be remembered as the man who turned out such grapplers as Levi Lamb, "Dex" Very, Shollenberger, "Chuck" Yerger and the Long brothers. It is quite probable that "Doc" will have charge of the gym work and it is almost certain that he will coach the track team this Spring.

The return of Mills, Garber and Shaulis this week will be a big help to Coach Yerger and his wrestling team. These men have all had considerable experience in the mat game. Mills in particular, will be a big addition to the squad, for he wrestled regularly two years ago.

Baseball candidates are to be called out March 1, so that Coach Bezdek may have at least three weeks to work with them before he leaves to take charge of the Pittsburgh Pirates. Manager Moore is arranging a schedule at the present time, and it will probably include an Eastern trip, a Western trip and a number of home games.

RUTGERS TO PLAY ARMY.

West Point Is First on Baseball Schedule.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Feb. 6.—West Point will open the Rutgers baseball schedule, it was announced today. Princeton will play at New Brunswick, but no date has been arranged. Other games arranged for are with Swarthmore, Hamilton, Stevens, and Syracuse.

Practice will start March 1, with a big squad on hand. Only two men have been lost from last year, and Berg, the catcher, who was in the army then, has returned.

SKATING RACES TODAY.

Ice Speeders Will Compete on Woodland Lake.

Ice skating races will be held this afternoon on Woodland Lake. The skaters will strive for medals in the mile and one-half handicap and a one-half-mile novice race. The meet is being conducted under the guidance of Frederick Becker of the Tremont Rink, a former speed skater himself, who has offered medals for three men in each race in order to encourage the sport by competition.

Among those who have already entered for the races are W. M. Taylor, Walter Kuehne, and Donald Baker of the N. Y. A. C.; Joe Moore, "Nick" Carter, and Bob Hearn, Ice Palace skating team; N. Shield and V. Ornstedt, Palace Skating Club, and many other fast skaters whose entries have not yet been received, but are expected to be in today. The long straightaway at Woodland Lake will afford an opportunity for the outdoor skaters to prove their superiority.

McALLISTER IN SEMI-FINAL.

Defeats Cunningham in Three-Set Match on Seventh Regiment Court.

Samuel R. McAllister won his way into the semi-finals of the Seventh Regiment indoor tennis tournament yesterday, defeating W. D. Cunningham in a hard-fought three-set match, 6—2, 7—9, 6—3. On account of the unfavorable light, this was the only match played.

McAllister had the first set well in hand at all times, but Cunningham rallied in the second, and although McAllister put up a stubborn fight his opponent captured the honors after sixteen games at 9—7. McAllister settled down and took the next set and match.

ELY PROVES HOCKEY STAR.

Leads Taft School Seven to Easy Victory Over Pomfret.

Special to The New York Times.

WATERTOWN, Conn., Feb. 8.—Captain Valentine Ely of the Taft School hockey team, led his septet of skaters to a one-sided victory over the Pomfret School seven on the former school's rink here this afternoon. The score was 9 goals to 0.

Captain Ely, showing a skill and dash which completely baffled the attempts of the opposition, accounted for six of his team's goals. He scored many spectacular shots in the first period, when he was wholly responsible for the one-sided score of 7 to 0. Chapin got the other Taft goal in this period. In the second period the Pomfret defense tightened, but goals were scored by Chapin and W. Stevenson.

The lineup:

Taft School, (9.)	Position.	Pomfret Sch'l, (0.)
Vogel	G.	Roche
Carpenter	P.	Craft
Weeks	C.P.	Mallory
W. Stevenson	R.	Stiles
Ely	C.	Dumaine
J. Stevenson	R.W.	Oakes
Chapin	L.W.	Chapman

Goals—Ely, (6,) Chapin, (2,) W. Stevenson. Referee—Mr. Welton, Taft School. Time of periods—One of 16 and one of 15 minutes.

XAVIER FIVE EASY VICTOR.

Cuts Loose Attack in Second Half, Beating Fordham Prep.

Xavier High School's basket ball team scored its tenth victory of the season yesterday by trouncing the Fordham Prep quintet on the Chelsea Gymnasium court, by a score of 26 to 17.

Cavanagh led the successful team in an effective offensive in the second half which ended in Xavier's convincing victory. The score at the end of the first half favored Xavier by 9 to 8. Cavanagh accounted for five field goals.

The lineup:

Xavier, (26.)	Position.	Fordham, (17.)
McMahon	R. F.	Casey
Cavanagh	L. F.	Kennier
McCarron	C.	Maloney
Lynch	R. G.	Groce
Herlihy	L. G.	Kenna

Field goals—McMahon, Devore, O'Brien, (2,) Cavanagh, (5,) Casey, (2,) Kennier, (2,) Maloney. Goals from foul—McMahon, (4,) Devore, (4,) Casey, (7.) Substitutions—For Xavier H. S.: Devore for McMahon, O'Brien for McCarron. Referee—John J. Landrigan, Xavier H. S. Time of halves—Twenty minutes.

RESERVES ARE GOOD SHOTS.

Police Organization Defeats Jersey Team on Rifle Range.

Two teams selected from among the 2,000 members of the New York City Police Reserves, who have been receiving instruction in revolver practice under the direction of Major C. L. Cammann and his staff of assistants, defeated members of the Lewis Machine Gun Company, New Jersey Militia Reserves, from Montclair, in their first match, held on the revolver range at the Seventy-first Regiment Armory. The first Police Reserve team won by 123 points, the second by 198 points.

The conditions called for ten shots slow fire and ten shots rapid fire—time 20 seconds. The regulation .38-calibre service revolver was used. The distance was fifteen yards, the target regulation N. R. A., with 6-inch bullseye.

Among the crack shots of the New York Police Reserves, five men were picked to form a team and five to act as substitutes to meet the challenge from the New Jersey company. The substitutes were allowed to shoot as a separate team, with the unexpected result that, while the first team won the slow fire course by 9 points, they were 75 points behind at the completion of the rapid fire work.

One remarkable feature of this result was the slow fire work of the New York teams, where not one score was below 90. Of the 100 shots fired, all but one were in the bullseye.

Lieutenant G. C. Krause was high man with a total of 181 points. Krause defeated Lieutenant G. S. Wright, who made the same total, because he had the highest score at rapid fire, which made him the winner according to the rule prevailing in matches under these conditions. Captain M. W. Huttenloch was the high man on the Montclair team.

DARTMOUTH ENTERS RELAY.

Coach Hillman Expects to Have Fast Track Team.

The tntry of Dartmouth in Pennsylvania's Relay Carnival is especially interesting this year in view of the fact that Coach Hillman promises to have one of the best track teams in the East. Dartmouth should cut a big figure in the carnival, as they will have a fast team in the distance or sprint medley championship, and also a speedy quartet in the one-mile event. In addition they will be very well represented in the special events.

Dartmouth's one-mile team should be exceptionally fast. Murray, who ran second in the intercollegiate quarter, doing 48 3-5 seconds, and Carto, who ran fifth in the same race, who can also beat 50 seconds, with Gorton, are three great quarter-milers. As Coach Hillman has another good man in Davis, it looks as if Dartmouth might come through in this event in spite of the fact that Pennsylvania, Princeton, Harvard, and Chicago should also have fast teams.

The list of entries to the carnival increases daily. One of the most interesting scholastic entries is that from the Scott High School of Toledo. This is the school whose football team made such a wonderful record last year, the honor of United States champions apparently lying between them and the Harrisburg Technical High School.

RACES FOR ANNAPOLIS CREW

Harvard and Princeton May Row Navy on Severn on April 19.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Feb. 8.—The Naval Academy is looking forward to one of the most interesting rowing seasons in years. The Midshipmen expect to have crews in a number of events, making up the best rowing schedule the academy has ever had, and the squad, both for 'Varsity and fourth class, or freshman crews, is the finest in years. Not only will the local races be of great importance, but there is every prospect that permission will be secured to enter an academy crew in the regatta of the American Rowing Association, which will take place at Philadelphia this season.

An agreement has also been made in a tentative way that Harvard and Princeton should row the Midshipmen at Annapolis on April 19, and the Harvard squad has been invited to spend the previous week, their Easter vacation, at Annapolis. The University of Pennsylvania will send 'Varsity, second and freshman crews to Annapolis on April 12. If it is possible to postpone this date, the Naval Academy would prefer it, but they will not forego the race if no other date is satisfactory to Pennsylvania. It is also hoped that the Yale 'Varsity, and perhaps some junior crews may be brought to Annapolis on a Saturday in May.

Coach Richard Glendon took direct charge of a splendid squad of nearly a hundred candidates for the 'Varsity and junior crews on Monday, and work began at once on the machines and in the tank. Glendon returns for his seventeenth season, and is the longest in continuous charge at one institution of any rowing coach now actively engaged.

Rowland Buys Milwaukee Club.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Feb. 8.—It was officially announced shortly after 5 o'clock today that the deal transferring the Milwaukee American Association Baseball Club to Clarence Rowland, recently manager of the Chicago White Sox, and Hugh Brennan of Chicago was closed. The announcement came from owner A. F. Timme's office.

The purchase price is said to have been $75,000. Ray Schalk, White Sox catcher, is said to be associated with Rowland.

COLUMBIA'S ROWING PROSPECTS DIMMED

Only Two Veteran Oarsmen Can Be Counted On for the Crew This Year.

Although practice has begun for the Columbia 'Varsity crew, the program for the season has not yet been decided upon, and will not be until after the next meeting of the University Athletic Association. No definite statements have been made by the athletic officials on Morningside Heights, but it is taken for granted that a young and energetic man will be appointed to the position of head coach, vacated last June by Jim Rice. Fred Plaistead, an old-timer whose active rowing days lie two generations behind him, has been put in charge as acting coach, but he is doing only the preliminary work of getting the squad together. There is absolutely no chance that Jim Rice will be reappointed to the position.

Charles Halstead Mapes, Chairman of the Athletic Committee, has promised that there will be a big season for the 'Varsity crew. Two dates have already been determined upon—May 17 for the Child's Cup race at Princeton and May 31 for the 'Varsity race in the American Henley regatta at Philadelphia.

Plaistead, it is understood, will continue in the capacity of assistant coach, and will have immediate supervision of the freshmen, an assignment which he has held since he first came to Columbia in 1911.

The prospects of the 'Varsity eight have been considerably dimmed within the last week by the fact that Barrett Brown, stroke oar of last Spring's 'Varsity combination, and Jimmie Parkes, another member of that crew, would not be back in college. Brown was expected to return for graduate work, and he would have been eligible because he received his baccalaureate degree in three years. Parkes was in college last Fall, when he was a member of the 'Varsity football team, but he decided to go into business instead of returning for his degree. Rene Wormser, who rowed No. 7 in 1918, is not expected to report although he is eligible. Kraus, another member of the 1918 crew, who played football last year, will report next week. W. Steinschneider, who rowed bow last year, will also be back. In fact Steinschneider has already reported. It is not known whether or not Taylor, who rowed No. 4 last Spring, will be able to row. As matters stand at present, therefore, among the men who rowed last Spring, Kraus and Steinschneider are the only ones who are certain of being back in the squad this year. There was little freshman rowing in 1918, so that the reservoir of experienced material is noticeably low.

COURTNEY STARTS OARSMEN

Long Sessions at Machines Ordered by Cornell Coach.

ITHACA, N. Y., Feb. 8.—A schedule of rowing practice starting at 9 o'clock in the morning and running through until 6 o'clock in the evening every weekday has been inaugurated by Coach Charles E. Courtney of the Cornell Navy in an effort to accommodate the 250 men who have registered for rowing. The crew room can accommodate only thirty-two men on the rowing machines at one time.

Within a short time Courtney plans to select his 'Varsity and freshman rowing squads, and then the others will be put in the intercollege eights.

The alumni committee in charge of the program for Saturday, June 21, the second day of the great semi-centennial celebration that Cornell is to hold this year, is confident that its plan to schedule a boat race between Annapolis and Cornell to be rowed on Cayuga Lake, will succeed. It is also planned to have a big baseball game on that day. Another boat race, perhaps a regatta, will be held on Cayuga on Spring Day, around the end of May, if the negotiations now under way are successful.

DE ORO PLAYS KIECKHEFER.

Cuban Player Will Try Again for Billiard Title.

Alfredo De Oro, Cuban billiardist, will get a chance this week to regain his lost three-cushion carrom billiard championship title. The veteran Cuban is scheduled to play a title match against Augie Kieckhefer, the champion, at the Auditorium in Chicago on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday. The match will be for the customary 150 points, in blocks of fifty points each night.

This will mark De Oro's first chance at the title since he lost it to Kieckhefer a year ago. Since gaining the title Kieckhefer has successfully defended it in six matches. Kieckhefer's achievement in so consistently defending the emblem has created a record for the defense of the title.

QUESTION TENNIS TITLES.

War Conditions Affect Championships in England.

The probability that new tennis champions will be crowned in England is being extensively discussed since the English tennis authorities decided to revive the championship tournament at Wimbledon next June. What attitude will be taken on the position of champions crowned in 1914, when title tournaments were last held, is still a question.

It is expected that the successful competitors in the last title tournaments will be regarded as champions and, as such, will not be compelled to play in the all-comers' competition this year. This classification will probably be found only in the women's singles. In the men's singles Norman E. Brookes, Davis Cup player, is the champion, and it is not thought likely that he will be able to defend his title.

Discussing the situation, The London Field says: "Some curiosity has been aroused as to the position of the holders of titles, both at Wimbledon and elsewhere. On the point that a champion holds his position until he is challenged and deposed, the war does not really affect the question, for even the coming and passing of Armageddon has not altered the results of 1914."

SHOW TO HAVE 1,553 DOGS.

Canine Wonders Entered in Hordes for Westminster Exhibit.

With a total of 1,553 dogs of all breeds and classes entered, dog fanciers are predicting a record-breaking success for the forty-third annual dog show of the Westminster Kennel Club, to be held in Madison Square Garden Feb. 19, 20, 21, and 22. This number of dogs will be benched during the four days of the show. In entries they represent a list of 2,580. The show, which will be known as the "Victory Show," will be conducted for the benefit of the Red Cross.

With an actual entry of 128, the Boston terriers will have the greatest representation. These dogs have been entered for 167 ntries. The greatest number of entries is found with the wire-haired fox terriers, from which 199 entries have been received, in a total of 85 dogs. Other large entries have been received from th chow-chows, with 143; the shepherd dogs, with 139; the collies, with 130; the cocker spaniel, with 120; the Irish setters, with 104, and the English setters, with 99.

Mrs. Frank T. Clark, judge of the Pekingese and Pomeranians, has received an entry of 111.

NO COLLEGE GOLF PLANS.

Universities Slow in Making Tournament Plans for Season.

During the war, there has been no sport so badly hit at the various colleges and universities as golf, and so far as is known, nothing has been done about the resumption of the intercollegiate golf championships—individual and team.

The first college golfers to announce plans for this Spring, a tentative schedule, it is true, is Dartmouth. Enthusiasts there are looking forward to several matches during the Spring. The customary championship elimination tournament will be decided at that time, and an effort will be made to arrange matches with Amherst, Williams, Harvard, and the University of Pennsylvania.

S. M. Mauk, 1919, captain of last year's team, may be able to be on the Dartmouth aggregation, while others available include J. E. Wetherby, Jr., R. J. Bard, D. K. Akeny, and G. L. Frost.

Harvard thus far has issued no call to the golfers, but when the call is made the number of responses and the enthusiasm shown will determine the season's plans. It will be recalled that the last Intercollegiate Golf Association championship was held at Oakmont in 1916, when for the second time in twelve years the Old Eli team was defeated by Princeton. The Tigers defeated Yale by 5 to 4, while Harvard won from Cornell by 8 to 1. In the final match Princeton won by 9 to 0. Individual championship honors went to J. W. Hubbell, representing Harvard, who defeated D. C. Corkran of Princeton by 1 up.

One of the college teams to be reckoned with this year is the Georgia "Tech" aggregation. Last season the Tech golfers, headed by Perry Adair, swamped Yale, Harvard, Columbia, and Penn, winning every match by a wide margin. In the twenty-one championships decided Yale has won thirteen times, Harvard six, and Princeton twice. It is probable that the intercollegiate event, if brought off, will be held over a course in the metropolitan district.

Few golf professionals combine skill as a player with the same commodity as a teacher, but according to Charles Evans, Jr., national amateur-open champion, these qualities are contained in the person of Jock Hutchison. Evans says that recognition of the service which professional golfers have rendered to the game has been slow in coming, but their importance is now universally recognized.

There is a real art in conveying to a pupil the golf knowledge which the professional may himself possess. Most of the finer work on the links is performed almost unconsciously and from observation it would seem that many professionals who play a splendid game fail as instructors, because the things they can do well themselves, in almost automatic manner, they forget to pass on to their pupil, or else are unable to do so.

It is in this intuitive knowledge of the capabilities of his pupils and their weaknesses that Hutchinson has built up a great reputation as a teacher, according to Evans, who goes on to say:

"Hutchinson represent the best type of Scottish professional, and it is interesting to know that he is a real St. Andrews man by birth and training. His American career has been highly successful as both a player and an instructor. His golfing victories nave been many all over the States, and I personally have reason to remember his work in the open championship at Minikahda, where I first broke my hoodoo and got into the championship rank. During that match Hutchinson made a new record for the course in his last round, with a 35-33-68.

"In the Western open in 1917 the first place was fiercely contested for by Jim Barnes, Walter Hagen, and Hutchison. The last-named eventually finished third, but not until he had made two 70s and a 71. During the event Hutchinson scored a [illegible] on a 425-yard hole, a feat not often performed."

GOLF STARS IN FLORIDA.

Tourneys and Matches Planned for West Coast Clubs.

TAMPA, Fla., Feb. 8.—The Florida West Coast golf clubs are putting on a schedule of matches for this season that has been unequaled in any previous year. The national mid-winter open golf tournament will be played over the Palma Ceia course March 7 and 8. The championship, with an adequate purse, will be seventy-two holes medal play. Walter Hagen and Charlie Lorms, the Palma Ceia professionals, are receiving entries for the event.

With indications that Ouimet, "Chick" Evans, Marston, Gardner, and others of the leading amateurs will be in Florida this Spring and with the number of good ones, including Hamilton Kerr, Irvin S. Robeson, already here, the prospects are bright for a strong amateur contingent.

Beginning Feb. 25 and continuing through to Feb. 28, the second annual invitation golf tournament will be played at the Bradentown Country Club, Dr. H. L. Chilson, President of the club, has arranged for an unusually fine array of trophies, including six cups, clubs, balls, &c.

ESSEX FELLS CLUB ELECTS.

Improvements to Its Course Are Planned This Year.

At the annual meeting of the Essex Fells Country Club at the clubhouse, Essex Fells, reports by the various committees covering the year's work were read and the following officers were elected: President, Walter Brown; Vice President, Henry V. Condict; Secretary, R. S. d'Espard; Treasurer, A. L. Peirson. To the Board of Governors were elected Charles Edgar, E. P. Soden, B. T. Bush, I. L. McCord, Charles Gowing, C. W. Nichols, J. Henry Harrison, and Thaddeus Merriman.

The club enjoyed a good year the reports showed, in spite of the war. Plans for the new year include many improvements to the course, the engaging of a professional of experience and several interesting events.

PLAN VICTORY TOURNEY.

British May Hold Golf Championships in Fall.

English golfers will not be inactive during the coming season, despite opposition to plans for a complete resumption of open and amateur championships this year in the British Isles. This antagonism will likely result in the English golf officials deferring a restoration of title competition until the Fall at least. Plans are being promulgated for a "Victory Tournament," which will be held in the Spring at Walton Heath. The competition will be for professionals.

The plan is for the Professional Golfers' Association to select sixty players to take part in the tournament, playing two medal rounds on the old course and two on the new. Substantial donations toward prizes will be given by the sponsors of the News of the World Tournament, which cannot be held because of the impossibility of getting the different courses in shape for the rounds of qualification.

CANADA TO RESUME GOLF.

Amateur Championship May Be Held at Toronto in July.

Canadian golf championships will likely be resumed this year. The officials of the Lambton Golf and Country Club of Toronto are making arrangements for holding the amateur championship tournament in July. A number of changes are planned for the Toronto organization's course. Every effort will be made to complete the proposed improvements as early as possible, in anticipation of an unusually active season.

The Canadian Senior Golfers' Association will conduct its second annual tournament over the links of the Lambton Golf and Country Club in the Fall. Subsequently the Dominion senior organization will send a representative team to the Apawamis Club at Rye, N. Y., to compete against seniors of this country.

HARDER TEST FOR BILLIARD EXPERTS

18.1 Balk Line May Be Employed for Title Competitions to Maintain Interest.

CONSIDER 18.2 TOO EASY

Owing to the remarkable averages and the numerous high runs that expert billiard players like champion William Hoppe, Jake Schaefer, and Welker Cochran have been making at 18.2 balkline, a movement is now on foot to introduce 18.1 balkline as the standard game for championship competition. As a result, it is probable that 18.1 will be the style of play in the tournament which it is planned to hold sometime late this year or early next year, to decide a championship.

The change from 18.2, which has been the popular game for many years, is being urged by veteran players and promoters of the game as a means of making the game more difficult and stimulating interest. Such veterans of the game as Maurice Daly, who was one of the great players of his time, and others who see the progress that has been made, are behind the plan.

"The present-day players, that is, the real topnotchers, have so completely mastered the 18.2 game," said Mr. Daly, "that a change is needed. It is necessary to make the game more difficult. It has become a common thing for the players to make runs of 300 and to make averages of 30 or better in a series of games lasting over a week.

"That is all right for the players, but the game loses interest with the public when one man can hold the table so long. The game tends to become monotonous. And, like those who like any other form of amusement, the billiard fans like action. Not long ago Jake Schaefer, in a series of games with Welker Cochran, twice ran out a string of 300 in four innings for an average of 75 each time. When a player can do that the competition loses interest. A match becomes more a question of which player wins the break shot and starts.

"While I am advocating 18.1 as a remedy I do not think it will solve the problem for all time. In another five years some new device to handicap the players will be needed. The point is, that professional players, who devote their entire time to billiards will in time overcome most any handicap that can be placed on them. The present day experts know all the tricks of the 18.2 game, how to keep the balls together at one end of the table and avoiding the long drives, and none of them has much trouble in clicking off 300 or more every time he steps up to the table.

"The 18.1 style of billiards is just that much more difficult that only one shot is permitted in balk. For a time at least, it would upset the steady game of those who have mastered the other style. It would take some time for the players to become as expert as they are now at the 18.2 game. William Hoppe holds the title in this style just as he does in all other balkline styles. He plays a remarkable game at 18.1, yet he cannot make the high runs or the high averages that are possible in 18.2, and the fans who watch the games will get a better run for their money under the proposed plan."

The proposal to change the present style of play brings up the story of how balkline was first introduced in billiards, when the old timers of thirty and forty years ago had so mastered the straight rail game that competition lacked interest. There is a story told that balkline was introduced because of a remarkable showing made by the veteran Jake Schaefer in a match game at San Francisco in the early '80s. Schaefer played a match for 1,000 points at straight rail. He won the break and ran out the entire 1,000 points, his opponent having but one turn at the table.

However, balkline billiards were really introduced by M. Bensinger, for many years President of the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Company. Schaefer's game may have had an influence on his action. However, in the Spring of 1883 Mr. Bensinger promoted thefirst balkline tournament in Chicago, at which the pest players in the world at that time took part. Balkline had been played previously to some extent but never in championship matches or tournaments, and this tournament introduced the game which for nearly forty years has been standard.

This tournament was notable for the fact that it brought together Jake Schaefer and Maurice Vignaux, the great French player and champion of Europe. The tournament was for the championship of the world. The players who entered were Jake Schaefer, Maurice Vignaux, Maurice Daly, William Sexton, Joseph Dion, Lorenzo Morris, and Thomas Wallace. The tournament ran for a week and finally simmered down to a final contest between Schaefer and Vignaux. This was probably one of the most historic games in billiards.

Vignaux had played with remarkable skill throughout the tournament and had not met defeat. Schaefer had played brilliantly and was also undefeated. But the day before the final game was to be played Schaefer was placed in the care of a doctor. It was said that he was suffering from a bad case of nervousness. This was attributed to his coming match with the French champion. Vignaux had been remarkably cool throughout the tourney.

Schaefer remained in care of his physician all of the day he was to play. Report had it that he was in bad shape and would not be able to play. But just before the time set for the game he showed up wearing the jacket he always wore in matches. Vignaux was attired in full dress. There was much speculation over Schaefer's ability under the conditions.

Vignaux early took the lead, and was leading by 100 points at the end of the fourth inning. Then the "Wizard" took the balls in hand, clicked off carom after carom, made brilliant shots, got out of difficult positions, and went along as though he would never make a miss. Soon he had crossed 100, and when he reached the score of his opponent there was a great demonstration. He continued his great playing until he had made a run of 220, the first great run at balkline billiards. Later the Frenchman got close to him again, but with another great run Schaefer pulled ahead again, and with an unfinished run of 108 ran out his string on the Frenchman and won the championship of the world.

Since that time William Hoppe has come into the game as one of its greatest players. He holds the record high run at 18.2 or 308, and is the champion at all styles of balkline. Since Schaefer's time the players have improved on the present style of play. The game in which Schaefer played was eight-inch balkline. The lines have been extended ten inches since then. The only means left now to handicap the players without introducing something entirely new is to try 18.1 balkline, and this may hold the experts in check for a time, at least.

MAY RACE AT CHICAGO.

Prominent Men Behind Movement to Revive Sport.

Chicago racing enthusiasts are behind a movement to revive horse racing. The Washington Park Jockey Club may become active again, if the plans of the promoters materialize. Unless an organization similar to the New York Jockey Club is formed, it is likely that racing in this city will be under the sanction of the N. Y. J. C.

An offer of stakes and purses large enough to attract the best horses in the country is the plan of the promoters. Among those known to be interested in the project are Harold McCormick, Stanley Field, Arthur Meeker, John Towne, and Frederick Upham.

NOTED SPRINTERS TO RACE.

Kelly, Murchison, and Ganzmuller Enter Millrose Games.

Officials of the Millrose A. A. are anticipating pre-war success in the promotion of the organization's annual indoor athletic meet, scheduled for Feb. 2[illegible] at Madison Square Garden. Entries are pouring in from various parts of the country and include the names of the nation's foremost athletes.

Lieutenant Bob Simpson, former University of Missouri hurdler, is making a special trip from California for the Millrose meet. He will compete in the invitation hurdles events. This will mark his only appearance in the East this Winter. Formidable competition is predicted for Simpson, whose greatest rivals promise to be Earl J. Thomson of Dartmouth and Fred Pollard, former Brown University star.

Captain Andy Kelly, 300-yard indoor record holder, now at Boston College, Loren Murchison, St. Louis sprinter, and Billy Ganzmuller of the University of Pennsylvania, the present indoor national champion, are among those entered in the invitation seventy-yard dash. Tom Campbell of the University of Chicago, national half-mile champion; Homer Baker, and Robert S. Maxam of the University of Pennsylvania, have entered the call for the "Millrose 600." The Rodman Wanamaker mile and a half special race will have several new starters this year, including J. J. Connoly, the New England A. A. U. champion, and Cecil Leath, the Harvard and Brown interscholastic champion. Joe Stout of the University of Chicago will be Tom Eck's nominee for this race.

NEW JERSEY TROTTERS.

State Produced Many Famous Harness Performers.

Very few people refer to New Jersey as a State that has produced many light-harness performers, notwithstanding the fact that the two champion stallions, George M. Patchen and Lee Axworthy, the first and only one to beat two minutes, were bred within its boundaries, while Goldsmith Maid, the greatest race mare and greatest money winner at any gait, also stands to its credit. The pages of Colonial history show that running, pacing, and trotting races were common in New Jersey, as well as all of the other colonies along the Atlantic seaboard, prior to 1740, so much so, in fact, that in 1748 the Legislature passed an act restricting them to certain days in the year.

Among the later-day breeders of trotters who maintained stock farms in New Jersey, A. B. Darling is, on account of Axworthy and his descendants, entitled to first place. His farm was located at Ramsey's. Kentucky Prince stood at the head of the stud until he was sold, on March 27, 1878, for $10,700, which was the largest amount paid for a trotter under the hammer up to that date.

In the early seventies, when Henry N. Smith decided to assemble his trotters, he established the Fashion Stud Farm at Trenton, and for over twenty years it was one of the leading establishments in the country, with Jay Gould, General Knox, Tattler, Socrates, General Washington, and Stranger in the stud.

In 1907 William Bradley began purchasing trotting stock for Ardmaer Farm, at Raritan, and it looked as though New Jersey was destined to again take its place as one of the leading homes of the trotter. Todd and Guy Axworthy were placed at the head of the stud. When Todd died his sire, Bingen, was selected to fill the vacant stall, but after a few months he was sold and transferred to Kentucky, where he also died. Guy Axworthy also followed the sire of Uhlan to the same State after a brief sojourn at Poughkeepsie, while the splendid band of brood mares was scattered to other establishments.

ENGLAND REVIVES POLO.

County Cup Tourney to be Held This Year.

The first steps toward a revival of polo activity in England will probably be taken March 25, when a meeting of the County Polo Association will be held at London. A popular demand is reported for a general resumption of the sport on extensive lines. It is not expected, however, that an effort will be made to revive international polo, especially in view of the decision of the American Polo Association, at its recent meeting, to defer challenging for the international cup until next year at least.

There is every indication that an effort will be made to stimulate interest in local polo competition throughout Great Britain. The initial tournament to be restored will probably be the County Cup tournament, oLndon's original trophy event.

YACHTS CHANGE OWNERSHIP

Recent Sales and Charters Show Renewed Interest in the Sport.

Evidence that keen interest in the sport of yachting is developing rapidly since the termination of the war is shown in the large number of sales and charters of yachts and motor craft which have been reported. Two local firms, Tams, Lemoine & Crane and Cox & Stevens, report no less than fifty-six transactions among yachtsmen.

Cox & Stevens report the sale of the steel auxiliary schooner yacht Katoura by Robert S. Tod of the New York Yacht Club to a Western yachtsman. The craft was built in 1914 by Herreshoff. Other transactions were:

The 127-foot steel schooner yacht Ingomar, sold for Daniel R. Hanna to Henry W. Howe, American Yacht Club. The Ingomar has won numerous cups during the last few seasons in the races of the large schooner classes of the N. Y. Y. C. fleet.

The 110-foot twin screw power yacht Aeldgytha, sold for George T. Lippincott of the New York Yacht Club to a Western yachtsman.

The 90-foot twin screw cruising power yacht Sachem, sold for the estate of W. Bruce MacKelvie of New York to A. M. Andrews of Chicago, who contemplates using the craft on the Pacific Coast.

The 95-foot flush deck auxiliary schooner yacht Fedalma, sold for John Candler Cobb of Boston to a New York yachtsman.

The 90-foot twin screw gasoline houseboat Bolo, chartered for A. Felix du Pont of Wilmington to George Lauder Carnegie of the New York Yacht Club for service in Florida waters this Winter.

Among the transactions recorded by Tams, Lemoine & Crane are:

The 220-foot steam yacht Safa-el-Bahr, sold for the estate of F. L. Leland to British interests.

The 125-foot houseboat Swordfish, sold for Schuyler Schieffelin to the United States Junior Naval Reserve, to be used as a training ship. The Swordfish is one of the largest and best-known houseboats in the country.

The sloop Nautilus, sold for Barklie Henry to Arthur Iselin.

The sloop Snipe, sold for W. W. Camman.

The 100-foot water-line auxiliary schooner Latona, sold for Alvin O. Portner, to be turned into a commercial vessel.

The motor yacht Wa-Shi-Shi-Wa, sold for C. W. Clifford.

The auxiliary Carval Halcyon, sold for Henry A. Morse to George J. Reynolds.

The 90-foot motor yacht Williams '18, formerly the Grayling, was sold for Justus Ruperti to Charles Schedel. This boat was used during the war as a sub chaser, Mr. Ruperti having purchased her and leased her to the Government for this purpose.

The 140-foot auxiliary yacht Genesee has been sold for T. S. Watson to a prominent New York yachtsman.

BRISK SHORT SESSION IN COTTON MARKET

Prices Break Sharply to New Low Levels, but Recover Later.

EE NO FURTHER DECLINE

xpect Selling to be Lightened from Now On—But Buying is Doubtful.

Yesterday's cotton market, considering that it was Saturday and a short session, was extraordinary. The volume of business, for one thing, was considerably in excess of what is usually seen in a two-hour day, and the range of prices, while not as great as on some recent days, was very unusual in so much as it first saw a sharp break which carried prices to new levels for the season and then turned them back to above the previous night's closing figures. At the close, changes were little more than nominal.

When the market opened, some moderate buying lifted the range 18 to 25 points above Friday's last figures. Then, under liquidation by trade interests and heavy selling by the ring, there was the break which took March down to 21.04, May to 20.03, and July to 19.50. This selling was aggressive in the extreme and for a time it looked as if an unusually well organized bear drive were in full force. But the evidence of organization soon disappeared and at the low levels many of those who had sold most freely suddenly turned buyers. The trade took quite a little cotton at the low figures and the ring traders displayed a sudden willingness to shift from the short to the long side of the market. Not only were short sales of the first hour covered, but more than a few traders went long on balance.

Gossip in the trade hardly warrants the statement that the market is expected to turn definitely. However, there is a feeling that the decline can hardly go much further, and it would surprise nobody if the pressure of cotton for sale were considerably lightened from now on. Whether there will be any big buying movement is quite another matter, as is also the problem as to whether the market can advance merely on some curtailment of the supply.

The local market for spot cotton was quiet and unchanged at 25.00c for middling upland; sales, nil.

Southern spot markets were: Galveston, 28.25c; New Orleans, 27.00c; Savannah, 29.00c; Augusta, 24.50c; Memphis, 27.50c; Houston, 27.50c; Little Rock, 26.25c.

PERIOD SILVERWARE.

Making the Plate Harmonize with the Style of Furnishing.

Manufacturers are now making period silverware and say that a dining room in which silver not in harmony with the furnishing and decoration of the room is used is in as bad taste as a medley of furniture of different styles. This is a difficult thing to make the public understand, say the silverware dealers, and there is much need of the education of the public taste along these lines. People have begun to have a general understanding of fine lines in furniture, but they stand in need of definite education in tableware.

Period silver is now as well defined as period furniture. Nine different periods are recognized. There are the Florentine period, those of Louis XIV., XV., and XVI.; the Jacobean period, the early, middle and late Georgian and the Colonial. The Florentine and different Louis periods lend themselves to the more elegant homes. The Florentine represents the spirit of the early Italian Renaissance, and the silver of that period has delicacy in its ornamentation notwithstanding its richness. A Florentine black coffee urn shows the influence of a ewer by Benvenuto Cellini. The silver of Louis XIV. has the spirit of the architectural elegance of the period of Louis the Magnificent, and is suitable for big banquets. The silversmiths make the best of the Louis XV. period, which in itself was not altogether symmetrical in its decorations. It is lighter and more delicate than the Louis XIV. period, more simple and suited to simple French dining rooms as well as for the more elaborate. The Louis XVI. period weeded out the extravagancies of the Louis XV., gave greater delicacy of form, and in decoration the laurel, reed, ribbons, bowknots and festoons appeared. The Jacobean silver is heavier in design and ornament to suit the wainscoted dining rooms of that period.

There was a rococo French note to the earlier Georgian period, but the silversmith has subdued this and uses for that period some of the simple Queen Anne designs which had held over. Classic designs, with Pompeiian inspiration, came in with George II., and the urn shapes in the silver are charming. Grapevine and leaf designs came in with George IV. and are shown on the silver, and there are charming fluted designs in tea sets, while the flat silver has the King pattern with the shell.

America had many silversmiths of note in the Colonial days. The Metropolitan Museum of Art has a representative collection of the old silver in that of Judge Clearwater, and many of the pieces of silver which are made for use in the modern Colonial dining room are direct copies of these pieces. Paul Revere of the "Midnight Ride" was the most noted of the silversmiths, and many of his original pieces are in the Museum collection. The Colonial silver is simple and symmetrical in form, the earlier pieces finished with simple lines and the decoration, where it is used, is delicate and most of it engraved.

CLOAK & SUIT CO. PROFITS.

Company Reports Net Sales of $32,592,925 in 1918.

The report of the National Cloak and Suit Company of New York for the year ended Dec. 31, 1918, showed net sales amounting to $32,592,925, an increase of approximately 17.9 per cent. over net sales in the preceding year. Net earnings after providing for taxes and preferred dividends were $997,961, which was equal to $8.31 a share on the 120,000 shares of common stock; this compared with $14.33 a share earned on the same stock in 1917.

At the close of 1918 the company reported that it had 2,500,000 customers.

The balance sheet of the company showed a substantial increase in inventories in the year just passed, this item amounting to $9,139,360 compared with $5,756,859 in 1917. The inventory represented principally merchandise for Spring season selling. S. G. Rosenbaum, President, in his report to stockholders said in part:

"At the end of 1917 the Directors set aside out of surplus the sum of $500,000 as a special reserve to take care of a possible readjustment of merchandise values in the future. We have added to this reserve out of surplus at the end of 1918 the sum of $200,000, thus making the total reserve for that purpose $700,000."

Boston Copper Gossip.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Feb. 8.—The January copper production of the Anaconda Copper Mining Company anounted to 15,000,000 pounds, compared with 21,000,000 pounds in December and with 22,600,000 pounds in November.

The Phelps-Dodge Corporation in January produced 11,878,738 pounds of copper, against 12,563,000 pounds in December and 21,796,836 pounds in January, 1918.

It is said that Granby will soon shut down its Grand Forks mine and smelter, where costs have recently been as high as 20 cents a pound of copper.

The East Butte Mining Company does not intend to curtail production. During the last week of January the company turned out 4,200 tons of ore, one-third of which overage above 7 per cent. copper. The smelter output for January was 2,391,950 pounds, as compared with 1,929,720 pounds in December and with 2,674,146 pounds in January last year.

Nevada Consolidated in January produced 4,400,000 pounds of copper, comparing with 5,800,000 pounds in December and with 6,500,000 pounds in January a year ago.

Utah Copper production in January was 10,500,000 pounds, comparing with 15,835,000 pounds in December and with 13,500,000 in January, 1918.

Chino's January output of 4,241,000 pounds compares with 5,507,635 pounds in December and with 590,244 pounds in January last year.

Ray Consolidated during January produced 4,470,000 pounds, compared with 5,800,000 pounds in December and with 7,571,000 pounds in the corresponding month last year.

No radical curtailment in output is contemplated by the management of Old Dominion. Unless conditions in the metal market become decidedly worse the company intends to maintain production around 2,000,000 pounds of copper a month. It produced about that amount in January.

Developments in the south end of the Isle Royale property are said to be encouraging.

The copper content of Ray Hercules ore is reported to be at present 2 per cent. against 1 per cent., and the mill is now running at two-third capacity against one-third.

The operating schedule of the Calumet & Arizona and New Cornelia has been reduced to 60 per cent. of capacity. The program calls for an annual production of about 76,000,000 pounds for the two properties. In 1918 these companies turned out 98,000,000 pounds.

ITALIAN WAR BONDS IN 'OPEN' MARKET

Dealings in 1,000,000 Lire of 1918 Loan Reported on the Broad Street Curb.

POTENTIAL PROFITS LARGE

They May Accrue Through Advance in Price and Improvement in Italian Credit Abroad.

Dealings in 1,000,000 lire of the Italian Government war loan of 1918 were reported on the Broad Street Curb market on Wednesday last, when for the first time these bonds changed hands in an "open" market in the United States.

There had existed a good and fairly brisk market for the Italian war bonds among dealers in New York for some time, but until the above transaction was recorded, all purchases and sales were made "over the counter." The Russian internal bonds had been on the Curb for nearly two years, but no other foreign internal issues have as yet been traded in on any regularly organized exchange.

Trading in the internal obligations of the European belligerents, and in some of those of the neutrals, has been going on for some time, but always as a result of private negotiations between brokers who have acted either for themselves or for clients.

Great Potential Profits.

A good many Europeans, living in the United States, have contributed to their countries' cause through subscriptions to bond issues, and a great many Americans, actuated by motives of sympathy, or because it looked like good business, have also purchased the issues of the European Governments.

As a matter of fact, there has been considerable speculation in foreign Government bonds ever since the offerings were first made. The speculation has on almost all occasions offered very great potential profits. These profits were possible both in appreciation of the bonds themselves and because of appreciation in the foreign exchanges. Several large Wall Street firms have found it extremely profitable to specialize in business of this sort.

The profits which may accrue on the Italian bonds which changed hands on the Curb recently, for example, may come in two ways: By advance in the price of the bond and by improvement in Italian credit outside of Italy. These bonds, sold at the rate of $141 per 1,000 lira. Lira in the foreign exchange market that day were quoted at 6.35 lire to the dollar, which figures at the rate of approximately $157.50 per 1,000 lira.

Thus, the price of the Italian bonds represented a percentage of par in the ratio that 141 is to 157½, or about 89½ per cent. That would give the price of the bond with Italian currency at its present rate. In other words, the buyer is getting a bond for 89½, which, it is generally believed, is rather a low price for a first-class, government 5 per cent. obligation.

Speculative Possibilities Large.

But that is not all the speculation. The parity of Italian exchange is 5.18¼, or at the rate of $193 for 1,000 lira. Now, if the Italian bonds should go to par and Italian exchange should return to normal, the profits of the buyer would be considerably greater, for 141, the recent trading price, is only 73 per cent. of 193. In this way the buyer of the bond has two chances to profit by his speculation.

The Italian bands represent greater speculative possibilities than those of any of the other "Big Five." But it was not so long ago that almost as great opportunities were presented in French internal bonds. The British issues, thanks to the fact that exchange between New York and London has been "pegged" ever since September, 1915, have not contained the element of speculation the others had.

Before the entrance of the United States into the war, there was a rather extensive over-the-counter market for the several German warloans. The Russian bonds, of course, had the greatest possibilities of all, on paper, and if the Bolsheviki finally do agree to assume the national debt and Russian credit is ever restored to where it was prior to 1914, the profits of those who bought Russian bonds at the lowest levels will be enormous.

Drop in Price of Coal.

An order removing all restrictions, including price and zone regulations on anthracite coal, has been prepared and awaits Administrator Garfield's signature to make it effective. One of the largest retail coal merchants has sent out circulars that they anticipate a drop in price of from 25 cents to 75 cents, according to the bulletin of the National Association of Building Managers.

The mild weather of this Winter has eased the anthracite situation to such an extent that in many cases the two-thirds supply which consumers were allowed will suffice for the entire coal year.

PROPOSALS.

CITY HALL.
New Orleans, Feb. 3rd, 1919.

The City of New Orleans, acting under authority of Act 179 of the General Assembly of the State of Louisiana for the year 1908, ratified by Constitutional Amendment, and now a part of the Constitution of the State of Louisiana, will receive sealed proposals at the office of the Commissioner of Public Finances of the City of New Orleans up to twelve (12) o'clock noon on the 6th day of March, 1919, for the purchase of $600,000.00 in face value of Public Belt Railroad Bonds of the City of New Orleans, authorized by the Act aforementioned, and the constitutional amendment ratifying same, and of the numbers, denominations and maturities of the authorized issue of $2,000,000.00, and in the form of and in accordance with the bond schedule of the maturities of the entire authorized issue, as prescribed by an ordinance of the City of New Orleans, being No. 8628, N. C. S., approved May 14, 1912, and Ordinance No. 5316, Commission Council Series, approved January 2[illegible], 1919, of said city, authorizing the present offering.

Said proposals shall be received under and subject to the following conditions, to-wit:

Proposals must be in writing, sealed, and marked on the outside of the envelope "Proposals for the purchase of $600,000.00 of Public Belt Railroad Bonds of the City of New Orleans," and shall be accompanied by a certified check on some chartered bank in the City of New Orleans, for an amount equal to one per cent. of the aggregate amount of the bid, which said check of the successful bidder or bidders shall be cashed and the proceeds retained by the City of New Orleans as a guarantee that the successful bidder or bidders will comply with its or their bids, and the said proceeds shall be applied to the payment of the bonds last delivered to the successful bidder or bidders, respectively. In case of the neglect or refusal to comply with any bid, the proceeds of said check shall be forfeited to the Public Belt Railroad Commission of the City of New Orleans.

No sale shall be made unless the aggregate of the bids received equals the full amount of the present offering of $600,000.00 in face value, and the adjudication shall be made to the highest bidder, provided, however, that no adjudication shall take place for less than par and accrued interest. All matured interest coupons shall be cut from said bonds and cancelled, and the successful bidder shall pay the interest which may have accrued on said bonds up to the date of delivery. The bonds shall be paid for in cash as fast as said bonds can be signed and delivered. All bonds will be delivered within thirty days from the opening of said bids. The right is reserved to reject any and all bids.

Further particulars and information will be furnished on application to the Public Belt Railroad Commission or the undersigned. The final opinion of Wood & Oakley, lawyers, Chicago, Ill., as to the legality of this issue will be furnished to the successful bidder if so desired.

A. G. RICKS,
Commissioner of Public Finances of the City of New Orleans.

Trade Acceptances and the Small Dealer

IN The Annalist, tomorrow, the leading article discusses the application of the credit system of trade acceptances to the business of the small retailer and presents reasons for the adoption of the system by those accustomed to take advantage of the freedom of the open account.

The article characterizes the present system of open accounts as slip-shod and expensive, asserting that trade acceptances bring better business methods with an accompanying gain.

Another article describes the efforts being made by bankers and oil and mining companies to safeguard American interests in Mexico. They have made plans to appeal to the Peace Conference.

Decline of Shipping Issues Unsettles Stock List—Labor Matters Discussed.

The sharp marking down of Atlantic, Gulf & West Indies stock in yesterday's market aided in unsettling the entire list, with professional traders active among the industrial shares. Business was light, and the bulk of transactions seemed to have their origin in the Street. International Mercantile Marine preferred lost ground at the same time that the other shipping issue was being offered down, and fresh attention was drawn to the ocean transportation situation by the withdrawal of ships from certain coastwise routes by a subsidiary of the Atlantic, Gulf & West Indies Company. Rates on freight sent from one coast point to another have not been materially affected by the cuts made so far by the transoceanic concerns, but the cessation of sailings entirely because of high costs has a more drastic result than reduction in carrying charges. The decline of 3 points which occurred in United Fruit stock equaled the net recession of the Atlantic, Gulf & West Indies shares.

Sentiment in the Street as the week drew to a close was favorable to operations of bear traders. In view of strike news from Seattle and evidences of important changes to come in prices for numerous lines of goods, with their natural effect on wages, the stock market following evidently thought it would be well to be in a protected position over the week end, and disposed of part of its speculative holdings. The labor outlook promises to come more and more strongly to the fore, abroad as well as at home, until industry has set its wheels to revolving in satisfactory fashion again. There are many questions to be answered in respect to the distribution of goods before the time may be said to be at hand for manufacturing on a great scale, and in the meantime Government agencies are likely to be busy in the effort to stabilize prices and stimulate employment. Secretary of Commerce Redfield started a movement to this end on Friday, whose progress will be watched with interest by economists who stand conservatively by the natural law of supply and demand as it had application before prices were regulated through artificial means as a war measure.

The Clearing House bank statement indicated a continuation of the repayment of loans which was made manifest in the preceding fortnight. Presumably, the liquidation by borrowers of commercial loans had considerable influence in causing the decline of $53,000,000 in the loan item reported by the banks. Despite this movement, and also a contraction of nearly $78,000,000 in demand deposits, but furthered by a recession of $40,000,000 in reserve credits at the Federal Reserve Bank, the banks' surplus reserve declined approximately $30,000,000.

The Reserve Bank reported another quick shift of operations in the way of rediscounting paper secured by United States Government obligations. There was an increase in this item of $48,000,000, compared with a decline of $72,700,000 the week before. The expansion may have had an intimate connection with the purchase and offering of several new securities issues during the week. The outstanding Federal Reserve notes increased, to the extent of about $2,000,000 for the first time since the week of Dec. 27.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Business Contraction.

A decline of $53,000,000 in loans in the Clearing House actual statement and a contraction of $77,800,000 in the deposit item supplied Wall Street with what was regarded as an indication of business curtailment, notwithstanding that the local Federal Reserve Bank exhibited an expansion of $48,000,000 in rediscounts and acceptances bought. This latter expansion, it was pointed out, might reflect efforts of the railroads to raise funds with which to liquidate loans from the revolving fund of the Railroad Administration. The railroads, or at least some of them, have considerable amounts of Liberty bonds, against which they might borrow. Again, there may be some War Finance Corporation paper, issued to help the railroad situation, moving into the Federal Reserve banks.

American Car and Foundry.

A weak feature of the stock market was American Car and Foundry, which lost about 1½ points on the day and nearly 5 points from the high of the week. No especial news developments were heard of, but traders appeared to be convinced that this issue must follow the lead of other industrials which have been undergoing "readjustment," which is to say they have been falling of late. Only a short time ago this issue was a prime favorite and the Street was full of reports that at next month's dividend meeting the rate would be moved up to 10 per cent.

Copper at New Low Price."

Reports yesterday were to the effect that a sale of copper had been made by one of the smaller companies at 17¼ cents a pound. While this may be true, although lacking verification, it seems hardly probable that it will influence the larger producers for some time. It transpired that the smaller companies were selling at 18½ cents for a week before the large producers cut to that figure. What seems probable is that the large concerns will test out the market at 18½ cents before deciding on any further price change. The one danger is that the smaller companies may garner the orders while the big producers are sitting back waiting for demand to assert itself. This was what happened when the outsiders made their cut in price a few days ago. A quotation of 17½ cents a pound means a decline of 1¼ cents in three days and this seems a bit drastic when it is remembered that there had just been a reduction of 4½ cents a pound.

Henry Evans a Cuba Cane Director.

Henry Evans has been elected a Director of the Cuba Cane Sugar Corporation. This marks the culmination of the request which he made recently for an investigation of the affairs of the company before proxies are delivered in support of the proposal to issue $25,000,000 in notes. Now that Mr. Evans is a member of the board he can carry out for the benefit of the other preferred stockholders not so fortunately situated the investigation which he deemed necessary and furnish them with information on the company's business and management.

Stock Exchange Commissions.

The special committee which has been considering a change in Stock Exchange Commission rates will report to the Board of Governors at the regular meeting next Thursday. It will be proposed that the commission in future be based on the price of stock rather than on the number of shares traded in. In other words the commission would be less than the present rate on stocks selling well under par and higher on such issues as Texas Company, Mexican Petroleum, &c. It has been pointed out that a broker now receives a commission on a sale of low-priced securities which is out of proportion to the value of the stock traded in. The commission on a sale of one share of Canadian Pacific at 157 would be 12½ cents, whereas, the same amount of money invested in National Conduit and Cable at about 112 would bring in commissions of about $1.50. It is to bring about some sort of equalization that the changes are made. The chief danger of the proposed plan, according to one of the Governors of the Exchange, is that of destroying the liquidity of the market by making the commissions on some shares prohibitive.

Shipping Wages.

Shipowners view the present wage scale as too high in case the United Shipping Board should release all of their ships too soon, causing them to face those wages as one of the substantial items in the operating expense account. In fact, several shippers have indicated that until some efficient legislation is passed that will take the constricting paragraphs out of the present shipping laws, they would prefer to have the Government retain their vessels as they do not feel able to operate them profitably themselves.

White Motor Company.

Wall Street heard rumors yesterday to the effect that the White Motor Company was considering the distribution of a stock dividend. There was no verification of this obstacle, but it found favor among the professionals, some of the latter insisting that the company's forthcoming annual report would show better earnings than have been expected.

Specialties Move Higher.

American Hide and Leather, Barrett Company, National Biscuit, and Union Bag and Paper attracted attention in yesterday's stock market by moving into higher ground, while the majority of the general list was seeking lower levels. The food and construction issues have been trading favorites for some weeks, and there was little evidence in the action of these issues that there was any large amount of profit-taking. In the case of Hide and Leather the advance was attributed to a report that a plan for the readjustment of the company had been perfected.

Shipping Shares Soft.

The shipping shares reflected the news that the Clyde Steamship Company, one of the oldest of American coastwise shipping companies, had decided to suspend the operation of three of its runs to South Atlantic ports, and sold off sharply on the Stock Exchange. There were sufficient offerings of Atlantic, Gulf and West Indies stock to force the price down to a low of 92 for the day, which was followed by a recovery to 93¼ at the close. The opening quotation was 95. On a fair volume of trading International Mercantile Marine preferred sold off to 94¼ after opening at 96 and closed at 94⅜. United Fruit, which opened at 161¼, eased off to 158¾ and closed at 159. The Clyde Company's explanation that high operating costs and inefficiency of labor were the causes for the action did not serve to stabilize the shipping shares.
